Different opinions on Crystal Woods housing

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

The proposed Crystal Woods project off Route 3A has drawn strong opposition from Cohasset neighbors because of concerns about such things as density, additional traffic, location of units, drainage and sewerage.

Cohasset Selectmen have also voted against the 60-unit condominium project which would be located on 20 acres on the Cohasset-Scituate line.

But in Scituate, it's a different story.

"We haven't had any opposition at all," said Mary O'Connor, chairperson of the local housing partnership committee.

"The project has been supported by the housing partnership and board of selectmen.

"There were some concerns about a connection on Gannet Pasture Rd., but that has been resolved.

"The project is in the very early stages of development.

"We wouldn't endorse it if we didn't think there was a definite need.

"Our charge is to get affordable housing in the community.

"The developer has been extremely cooperative," noted O'Connor.

"This is the beginning of the process, not the end.

"I think a lot of the concerns are premature."

Selectman Richard Bowen said, "Our board endorsed it because we see nothing wrong with trying to provide some affordable housing.

"Our concerns were that the developer be reputable, the quality of the proposal be high, and that it enhance the atmosphere of the community.

"Those are our concerns with any proposal, Crystal Woods in particular.

"The board regrets that there aren't more affordable units."

Bowen said there are a number of reasons that Scituate is working to meet its 10 percent quota of affordable housing.

"Affordable housing is a good thing," he said. "Rentals are few and far between.

"Also, when municipalities go for grants, the state has a number of criteria, for instance, if the town has met its

Way to sell a house, reduce the price

Despite reports to the contrary, some local real estate agents say that business is good.

"The market in Cohasset is going very well," said Mary Ellen Neagle, manager of the Jack Conway office in town.

"We've had four or five listings on the market for over a year and they sold in the last couple of months.

"The prices only changed slightly.

"One went from $369,000 to $355,000. It had been on the market for a year.

"People have come to realize that prices are too high.

"The only way to sell a house is to reduce the price.

"The market certainly isn't what it was like two years ago, but there are still a lot of buyers out there.

"If the house is priced right, it sells. You don't have any problem."

Neagle said that November and December are usually very slow.

"If the weather is good in January and February, people will be out looking again.

"In March, April and May, things usually turn around."

According to Neagle, a starter home in Cohasset goes for about $175,000; a family home $350,000 to $375,000.

She feels that the real estate market became softer because prices went sky high and salaries didn't go up to match it.

Selectmen reiterate housing opposition

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

In a letter to the state Home Ownership Opportunity Program director, selectmen outlined their opposition to the proposed Crystal Woods development, specifying their objections to the state comprehensive permit process.

By a three-to-one margin Tuesday night, selectmen decided to send the correspondence to Catherine Racer, director of the Home Ownership Opportunity Program.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby opposed the action, saying she wanted to include the written comments previously made about the proposal by the Crystal Woods abutters. She also wanted more detail included about the difficulties they envisioned with the development shared between the towns of Cohasset and Scituate. "I just want a little more clarification so the state knows how we're thinking," she said.

Selectman Gjesteby did not want to include statements regarding the board's opposition to the comprehensive permit process.

The housing agreement signed last fall by

Stop and Shop health tours

The Stop & Shop Supermarket Company will sponsor three "Healthy Shopper" tours in its Cohasset Super Stop & Shop, from January 24 to February 2.

Stop & Shop has developed the tours in cooperation with Cohasset nutritionist Patricia Messing, M.S., to meet the needs of shoppers in Cohasset and surrounding communities.

The three, one-hour tours include:

"After the Holidays — Tour For Weight-Conscious Shoppers," Tuesday, Jan. 24, from 9 to 10 a.m., Monday, Jan. 30, from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m.

"For Convenience Sake — Good Food Fast," Thursday, Jan. 26, from 9 to 10 a.m., Wednesday, Feb. 1, 7:30 to 8:30 p.m.

There is a $10 charge for each tour; a special rate of $25 for all three tours is available.

Participants will receive refreshments and a packet of information, including recipes.

"After many months of talking with our customers about their shopping habits and nutritional concerns and working with Patricia, we designed three tours which are well-suited to our shoppers' lifestyles," commented Bill Ryan, 27-year Stop & Shop veteran and store manager of the Super Stop & Shop in Cohasset. "It's really exciting because our tours offer something for everyone, including people who want to shed a few pounds after the holiday, those who are busy and don't have a lot of time to spend in the kitchen, and people who are ready for some new ideas for cooking nutritious and delicious entrees!"

Interested persons are encouraged to sign-up early; tours are limited to 12 participants. The deadline for registration is Friday, Jan. 13.

Further information and registration forms are available in the Super Stop & Shop, Route 3A.

Messing will also provide further details; she can be reached at 383-2410.

Help needed at dump

The Board of Health needs the help of Cohasset's citizens to solve the current "litter crisis" at the town landfill.

Until the transfer station is built and operating, citizens are asked to please observe the following:

1. Recently, to help control litter, the BOHpassed a regulation prohibiting the dumping of loose trash. Enforcement, however, has been difficult. ALL trash is to be placed in large trash bags and SECURED.

2. White plastic bags constitute much of the unsightly litter. Please request brown paper bags for groceries at the supermarket to help reduce the amount of small plastic bags which tend to soar into trees and ponds.

3. Pack newspapers tigtly in a brown paper bag for the recycling bin. Papers should NOT be placed in plastic bags, as plastic contaminates paper as a recycling source.

4. Strong, willing workers are urgently needed to collect litter at a rate of $5.50 per hour. Call the Board of Health at 383-1664 to apply.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff to participate in Critical Thinking Workshops at the elementary schools and an educational technology seminar at the secondary school.

Budget discussion Jan. 9

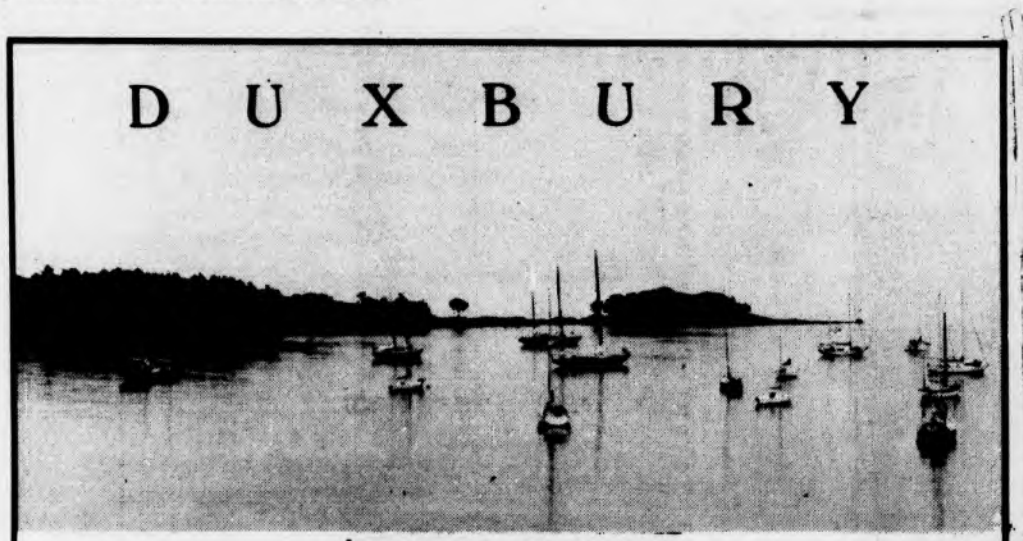
Discussions about next year's school department budget will begin at the Jan. 9 meeting, School Supt. Stephen Hart told the school committee at its Dec. 19 meeting.

Hart said that the budget is likely to be more than last year's $5.1 million.

He said that school committee members will receive copies of the proposed budget before the meeting.

Hart also said that he recently talked with the chief cafeteria worker about instituting some changes after the holidays, primarily at the high school.

He said they talked about reinstituting such things as the salad bar.



It had been eliminated because of a decrease in revenues, according to Hart.

He also said having two separate lines for a la carte and hot items was discussed.

Committee member Nancy Sandell said that there had been some talk about having a student survey of the cafeteria.

"It's still something we'd like to see," said Hart.

Council van awarded

Selectmen voted Tuesday night to award a $14,740 contract to Paul Maguire Chevrolet for a new senior shuttle van. Two qualified bids were submitted, with Maguire's total about $400 less than Spensley Chevrolet of Cohasset.

Although Selectman Rocco Laugelle originally suggested they award the bid to the local dealership, selectmen eventually agreed to give the contract to the Marshfield company.

The vehicle is expected to be delivered by March 1. It will replace the van destroyed by a fire last fall.

Selectmen will allow the Council on Aging to request a $2,174 reserve fund transfer from the advisory committee. They did not vote whether to support the request.

The council is requesting the transfer, based on a $600 monthly fee for the rental van. Since the senior shuttle was destroyed, the council has been renting the handicapped-accessible SCOOT van from that South Shore agency.

Selectmen advised the council to discuss the request with the advisory committee, with the explanation that a new van is expected to be delivered by March 1.

Liquor license extended

Despite protests made by Selectman Martha Gjesteby, selectmen Tuesday night voted to reaffirm a telephone poll they conducted to extend the liquor license hours at the American Legion Post for New Year's Eve.

"I checked with the ABCC (Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission) because I was worried about this. They told me because this was not a vote of the board, we might have jeopardized the Legion and the town - if an accident had occurred between 1 and 2 a.m. There was no vote of the board," Gjesteby explained.

The board voted to extend the hours that liquor could be served at the Legion from 1 a.m. to 2 a.m. on January 1 only.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt disagreed with Gjesteby's argument, noting there have been at least six occasions when board members have made immediate decisions by phone, only to reaffirm them by a vote of the board at the next regularly-scheduled selectmen's meeting.

"You mean to tell me you want an emergency meeting for something as trivial as that?" he asked Gjesteby.

The board voted 3 to 1 to reaffirm their vote.

Earlier, the board voted to ratify another telephone poll they previously made to hire a telephone consultant. The board voted Tuesday night to ratify a $1,200 contract with ATM Communications to serve as a consultant for the new town hall telephone service.

No first time reprieve

First time offenders who receive parking tickets in Cohasset won't be getting a free ride anymore.

"It has been the practice to void the parking tickets of first time offenders during a given calendar year," explained parking clerk Gregory J. Doyon in a memo to selectmen, treasurer collector, police chief and town clerk.

However, he explained that Town Counsel Richard Henderson feels the practice is not consistent with Chapter 90, Section 20A of the General Laws.

"Therefore," said Doyon, "I am advising you that as of Jan. 1, 1989, there will be no voiding of tickets for first time offenders."

Selectmen accept proposals for three budgets

Three town budgets were approved for consideration by selectmen Monday night, despite some objections to the fire department budget which has jumped almost $90,000 over last year.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt refused to accept the budget, saying he wants a $6,800 request for a computer "taken out of there."

He noted, "we're living in a computer-happy society. I don't think we need it in a small town.

"Every department in this town has been asked to level fund their budgets. I want to know why this one is up from $886,000 to $1,072,000 this year."

The chief defended the purchase of a computer for the department, saying it is needed to provide data, improve permit tracking, organize ambulance billing and training records.

According to the proposed FY '90 budget presented by Fire Chief Daniel Brock, the greatest increases in the budget are in the areas of salary. Next year it will cost $656,186 to fund the firefighters' contract. That is compared to $601,080 during the current fiscal year.

Overtime costs are expected to decrease next year, with $85,119 proposed for that account next year - $13,000 lower than the current year.

There is a $5,000 increase in the general expenses.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle noted that by accepting the proposed budget for consideration does not eliminate selectmen's authority to make future changes to that budget.

Selectmen also accepted the proposed $735,046 police department budget for FY '90. Police Chief Joseph Kealey noted that general expenses within the budget have been level funded for the eighth consecutive year at a total of $54,425.

The greatest increase in the proposed budget for next year is in the capital outlay requests. That portion of the budget jumped $25,000 over the current year's total.

Police Chief Kealey explained three cruisers must be replaced this year at a total of $40,335. This is a routine changeover of two vehicles each year, and a third vehicle every third year. The chief explained that the department has two new vehicles on the road each year, with a third older vehicle to be used as back-up.

He also noted that $9,280 is needed next year to replace the ten year-old radios in four cruisers. The chief said he would not be willing to negotiate on the requests for new vehicles and radios, saying they are the "lifeline" of the department and the residents of the town.

The Tree and Park and Cemetery budgets were also accepted by selectmen this week.

Those budgets have been level funded for next year, although Supt. Peter Laugelle is proposing a capital outlay request of $4,500 to begin renovations to the American Legion memorial park, and $1,900 for a new motor on the ride-on lawn mower.

There will be an article proposed for the annual town meeting to purchase a $16,725 ride-on mower for the department. Currently, Supt. Laugelle explained, the department must rent a mower for about $1,000 every year.

The only increase in the cemetery budget is in a step raise for an employee. The total for the proposed FY'90 cemetery budget is $24,823.

But Selectman Pratt complained, saying the town should spend "twice as much" to preserve and maintain its cemeteries, specifically the Beechwood Cemetery.

Supt. Laugelle agreed the main problem at Beechwood is a brick and granite building which

Christmas tournament came up short

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Both Cohasset boys' and girls' varsity basketball teams came up short during their respective Christmas Holiday tournaments last week.

In the boys' action, behind the play of seniors Rodney Gamble and Troy Osgood, Snowden (formerly Copley High of Boston) advanced to the championship game of the resurrected Scituate Christmas Tournament, knocking off Cohasset, 59-43, Dec. 28.

Gamble, a center, responded with 29 points while Osgood, a guard, scored 13 points and dished out 10 assists.

Lincoln Marsac led all Cohasset scorers with nine points.

On the following night, Marsac tallied 17 points and Noah Hill added 14 points, powering Cohasset to a 71-32 victory over Medeiros Hall in the consolation game.

In the championship, despite 44 points which included six three-pointers by Gamble, host Scituate defeated Snowden in overtime, 65-64, to capture the tournament.

On Dec. 28, the Cohasset girls were unable to stop the state's best female player, Averill Roberts. As a result, Boston Latin crushed host Cohasset, 52-25, in the championship game of the George H. Mealy American Legion Post #118 Christmas Tournament.

Roberts led all scorers with 34 points.

Cohasset (3-3) had a 12-point effort from Heather MacDonald.

The Lady Skippers reached the finals due to their 66-42 opening-round victory over Newton South the previous night.

Senior forward Kristin Ellinger scored 20 points and grabbed 15 rebounds for the winners. The Skippers also had a solid game from MacDonald, who netted 14 points, and eighth-grader Allison Ludlow, who added 10.

Wrestling

With nearly 250 wrestlers from 19 high schools participating in the fifth annual Marshfield Holiday Wrestling Tournament Dec. 29, the Cohasset wrestling squad recorded an impressive fifth-place finish in the team competition.

In the individual section, the Skippers picked up two first-place victories from Gregg Nourie, who wrestles in the 103-pound division, and Paul Froio (160).

Also contributing to Cohasset's 103 points were Tim Pierotti, who took third place in the 130-weight class, John Rhodes (a fourth-place finish in the 119 division) and Chris Froio (fourth in the 171).

Rockland took top honors with 125½ points with Duxbury second (122) and Randolph third (120).

The remaining team scores: 4. Bridgewater-Raynham 106; 5. Cohasset 103; 6. Marshfield 99; 7. Walpole 60½; 8. Milton 53; 9. Norwell 52; 10. Weymouth North 51; 11. Middleboro 49½; 12. Plymouth 46; 13. North Quincy 43; 14. Hingham 26; 15. Carver 25; 16. Silver Lake 24; 17. Scituate 23; 18. Weymouth South 14; 19. Falmouth 0.

Gymnastics

Michelle Hartley took all-around honors for Cohasset, but league rival Norwell held on to a 105.75-100.55 meet victory over the Skippers Dec. 22.

Dee Mullen and Kara Connerty combined for 61.25 all-around points to lead the Clippers (2-1). Meanwhile, Cohasset fell to 0-3 on the year.

Results:

Vault: 1. Connerty (N) 8.4; 2. Mullen (N) 8.2; 3. Hartley (C) 7.9.

Bars: 1. Hartley (C) 7.65; 2. Connerty (N) 7.15; 3. Mullen (N) 7.10

Balance Beam: 1. Hartley (C) 7.8, 2. Mullen (N) 7.55; 3. Connerty (N) 7.05.

Floor exercise: 1. Hartley (C) 8.3; 2. Connerty (N) 8.0; 3. Mullen (N) 7.95.

All-around: 1. Hartley (C) 31.65; 2. Mullen (N) 30.65; 3. Connerty (N) 30.60.

Hockey

Junior Mike Richardson scored two first-period goals on the way to a hat trick as Hull buried Cohasset, 7-1, on Dec. 21.

Pat Henderson added two goals and Dean Tramontana scored once for the Pirates (3-0). Goalie Kevin Gibbons made 21 saves to pick up the victory.

Kevin Mulcahy scored Cohasset's only goal in the third period. Paul Marks made 35 stops in the Skippers' net.

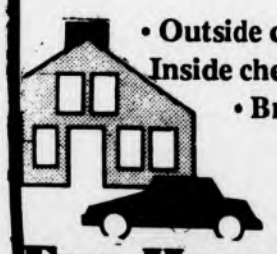
has been left unattended for more than 18 years. Up until 1970, he said, coffin vaults were stored there in the winter until the ground thawed for a spring burial. Since that time, however, there has been little use for the building.

The superintendent suggested the building be sealed off. But Selectman Pratt suggested it be knocked down.

"I think people would be up in arms," Laugelle answered.

"If it is not used for the purpose it was intended, then I do not see why we should let it stand," Selectman Pratt stated.



Selectman Rocco Laugelle suggested that if anyone in the town, including the historical society is interested in the cemetery building, they should suggest ways it could be used in the future. "I don't think townspeople want it, I don't think they're interested in it anymore. But we should ask them for ideas and see what they would like to do with the building," he stated.

Anyone who is interested in maintaining the building at Beechwood Cemetery, or suggesting future uses for the building, should contact selectmen's office at town hall.

Way to sell a home in Cohasset, reduce price

Neagle said she hopes interest rates, which are at about 11 percent, stay stable.

"But I don't think interest rates have too much bearing on selling a house unless they go sky high," she said.

Overall, Neagle said her office has had a "great year."

"Better than last year," she said.

Neagle said there is a market in Cohasset for condominiums.

"If they are priced right, they sell," she said.

According to Neagle, houses stay on the market in Cohasset for an average of 90 to 120 days.

"Houses have to be comparable with others on the market," she said.

"You have to make it show well. The kitchen and bathroom are very important. So are the entrance and front door.

"First impressions are very important.

"So is landscaping. There are so many things."

When a house is on the market for a long time, it is usually overpriced, according to Neagle.

"It's a mistake to overprice a house," she said. "You lose a lot of people (buyers) that way.

"But we're doing very well in Cohasset, and we hope it will continue in 1989."

Barbara Hollander of Hallmark 100 Properties Ltd. said that the real estate market is soft everywhere.

"But the spectacular homes are still selling for spectacular prices," said Hollander.

"The market is still active for the spectacular homes."

On the other hand, she said, starter homes are not really available in Cohasset for young couples.

"There really aren't any inexpensive homes," she said. "But they are opening up in other areas such as Scituate."

Starting prices are about $160,000 in Cohasset, said Hollander, but most are over $200,000.

A modest family house is $250,000, she said.

"There are a few for $225,000 to $229,000," Hollander said.

She feels the real estate market softened because buyers are balking at the price of real estate.

"The price of homes on the South Shore has greatly increased in comparison to other parts of the country," she said.

"A lot of business people transfer here.

"But with the cut back in help in such industries as the computer business, executive transferee homes in the $350,000 to $395,000 range are very slow to sell."

The condominium market is also very slow, according to Hollander.

"They are the slowest moving item in the area," she said.

Generally, houses are on the market for three to six months and up, according to Hollander.

"But it varies depending on the style of house.

"Some are on the market for over a year.

"Anything will sell if it is priced right."

Over pricing is sometimes a problem, she said.

"We may suggest a market price of $225,000, and they may ask $259,000 to $270,000.

"Then it doesn't sell, and its too bad.

"But the market is holding its own, at least in our office. It's active enough to keep us going."

Hollander said that sometimes the market picks up after the first of the year.

"People get bored and look for something to do, so they look at houses," she said.

Hollander recommends that in order to sell a house, that it be as "neat and clean and sparkling as can be."

"And priced fairly," she said.

"A house that shows beautifully will sell."

"The Cohasset market is doing fairly well," she added.

"It's a nice town, a desired town, and has an excellent school system."

Judy Parsons, manager of Hunneman and Co., Inc., Realtors, in Cohasset, said that her office had a good November and December.

"The market is softer than it was in 1986 and 1987," said Parsons.

"I think we'll see a pickup in activity in 1989.

"We're seeing more activity after the election."

Parsons said she has seen some prices come down.

"Prices need to come down and stablize," she said.

According to Parsons, houses in Cohasset tend to stay on the market about four months on the average.

"Pricing is the first thing," she said.

"Then you want to have the property in as good condition as possible.

"A little cosmetic work can be very, very important. Even just a little paint helps."

Parsons said that buyers are interested in houses that they can move into and take their time changing to their tastes.

"They may be on a tight budget, or a tight time frame," she said.

Parsons said that people who move a lot tend to paint the walls an off-white color and use their rugs and paintings to decorate the rooms.

"Yet the house shows very nicely," she said.

"They buyers look at the whole picture.

"You want it to look as fresh and clean as possible."

She also suggests such things as rearranging cabinets and taking some furniture out of a room to make it look bigger.

Too high a price is usually what keeps a house on the market, she said.

"If it's on for too long a time, it becomes stale," said Parsons.

"That's what happens."

In that case, the price needs to be lowered or the house taken off the market for a while, she said.

"Without change, it's not going to move if it's been on the market for a long time."

Parsons said she is excited about 1989.

"We're a big company," she said. "We've seen very good sales this year.

"It's been the best year ever for the company, and a good year in Cohasset."

Town Assessor Tom Duggan said he couldn't say if prices in Cohasset are generally up or down or stable.

"I can't say until I get a body of information on which to base it," said Duggan, who explained that the town has just started its revaluation.

"That is done for us by a revaluation firm," he said.

"Nothing shows up until the 1990 figures come out."

□ We know that the Edward Bursks are having a happy holiday season, with Mr. Bursk improving every day. He was injured on November 26 in a car accident, with head and arm injuries, broken ribs and a broken collarbone. Mr. Bursk is a patient in New England Medical Center, in the rehabilitation unit, and is due home next month. If he keeps up his rapid recovery, we'll bet that he will be home even sooner! We are all thinking about you!

□ Mary Jeanette Murray certainly had the Christmas Spirit! She was spotted as a waitress at the Christmas dinner that was held for 350 senior citizens through the efforts of the Hingham Police Golf Association. We are lucky to have her representing us again, how many others do you know that would take the time out of this busy season to think of others in that way.

□ If you have noticed Leo and Mary Fiori with bigger grins than ever lately, there is good reason. His name is Anthony Paul Fiori, he was born on December 20, and he is the handsomest boy around! If they won't tell you, we'll bet that Anthony's Dad or Mom, Paul or Karen Fiori, will! Congratulations to you all.

□ Speaking of parents that are thrilled with their new additions, Mr. and Mrs. Randall Steele certainly fit the bill. Michael Dillon Steele was born on December 4, and joins his two and one half year old brother Derrick, in time for Christmas. Naturally, grandparents Dona and Jeff Steele couldn't be happier. . .here's to wonderful holidays to you all.

□ It is great to be able to report that Mary Williams is out of the hospital and at home, finally!! She suffered a fall recently, but is on the mend now. A speedy recovery wish is at the top of her list for the new year, and we second it!!

□ Under the "whatever happened to" department comes some news about Peter Maloney. Peter, Class of 1959, CHS, is a micro biologist at the Medical School of Johns Hopkins. Right now he is spending a lot of time boning up on all of his knowledge, he has been invited to address the Royal Society of London in February on the topic of Genetics. You surely do everyone proud, Peter, congratulations to you.

□ There was one gentleman missing around town this holiday season, Bob Oliver. Born and raised in Cohasset, his friendly face and grand smile was spotted everywhere. Bob died suddenly in April, and a piece of Cohasset went with him. Not all is gone however, as is obvious when you see Patrolman Bill Oliver, Bob's son. . .you certainly can see Bob in him!

□ We are happy to report that George Orr got home in time for the holidays, we hope that he is feeling better with each passing day!

□ Everyone received a letter from the Community Center of Cohasset last week, be sure to mark it on your calendar to respond to it rapidly. They really are looking for funds to pay the mortgage on the new wing that was added, so that it can be lowered. By lowering it, they will be able to improve programming and keep fees low. Do it before the 1st of the year, and you can reap an extra benefit, it is tax deductible. Robert C. Jordan, Jr. has been hard at work on this appeal, help him if you can.

□ At a recent company-wide meeting, Jacqueline Clark of the Cohasset office Hunneman and Co. Realtors, was honored for her exceptional brokerage performance during the first nine months of this year. "Jacqueline has exceeded one million dollars in sales already . . . and this is in a year where the real estate market has been very challenging," noted Vice President and Manager Judy Parsons of the Hunneman Cohasset office.

□ Things sure will be different on the Board of Selectmen, with Cliff Mitman not a member. He announced that he will not seek a third term, due to new job commitments. He has been a hard-working and loyal member of the board, it will be hard to fill his shoes. Here's hoping that there will be more than a few that try to fill them though, we need community involvement more than ever. Can YOU fill the bill?

□ When you begin to take down that beautiful Christmas tree, remember that there are certain dates that you can bring them to the Cedar Street landfill. Jan 4, 8 a.m. to noon; Jan. 7, 8 a.m. to 3:30; and Jan. 14, 8 a.m. to noon. These days are important to remember, they won't be accepted any other time.

We all know that the town has never been so full of news at this time of year, call me with yours so that all can share in your happiness.

Happy New Year!

Editorial

Is it really necessary?

Does anyone ever wonder what's going on in this town? Does anyone ever ask why this town has to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars on attorneys and lawsuits?

Like every other town, Cohasset regularly finds itself in a courtroom, defending a decision or appealing one. Many are worthy of an expensive defense, but some are not.

Take for instance, the planning board's failure to make a decision about the proposed Cohasset Plaza.

In August, that board was required to make a decision about a site plan presented to them by developer Donald Staszko. They split the vote 2-2, with members Patrick Plante and Alfred Moore in favor of the proposal, and members John O'Toole and Daniel Cotton opposed. Chairman Robert Sturdy was absent from that meeting.

The two desenting members said the plan exceeded the town's bylaw which limits the amount of impervious material. That, despite a letter from the zoning officer stating an opposing view. According to Donald Robbins, their definition of impervious material did not coincide with the definition contained in the town's zoning bylaw.

In the meantime, there has been a meeting between the town counsel, the planning board and the attorney representing the developer. It was termed a "settlement conference" and was scheduled in the hope that an out-of-court settlement could be reached between the two sides.

That was not possible, however. O'Toole and Cotton have now been joined by chairman Robert Sturdy in their efforts to block the present Cohasset Plaza plans.

What we can't understand is why these men insist on bringing this case to court - why they are unwilling to settle out of court, despite the efforts of their legal counsel and their engineer to come to an agreement with the developer.

It doesn't take a genius to understand that this plaza will be built. No one member of the planning board will stop this developer from doing what is legally within his rights. Certainly no one is asking the planning board to acquiesce to every developer who comes into this town with some fancy plan. But this developer is within his rights on land that is properly zoned for such a proposal.

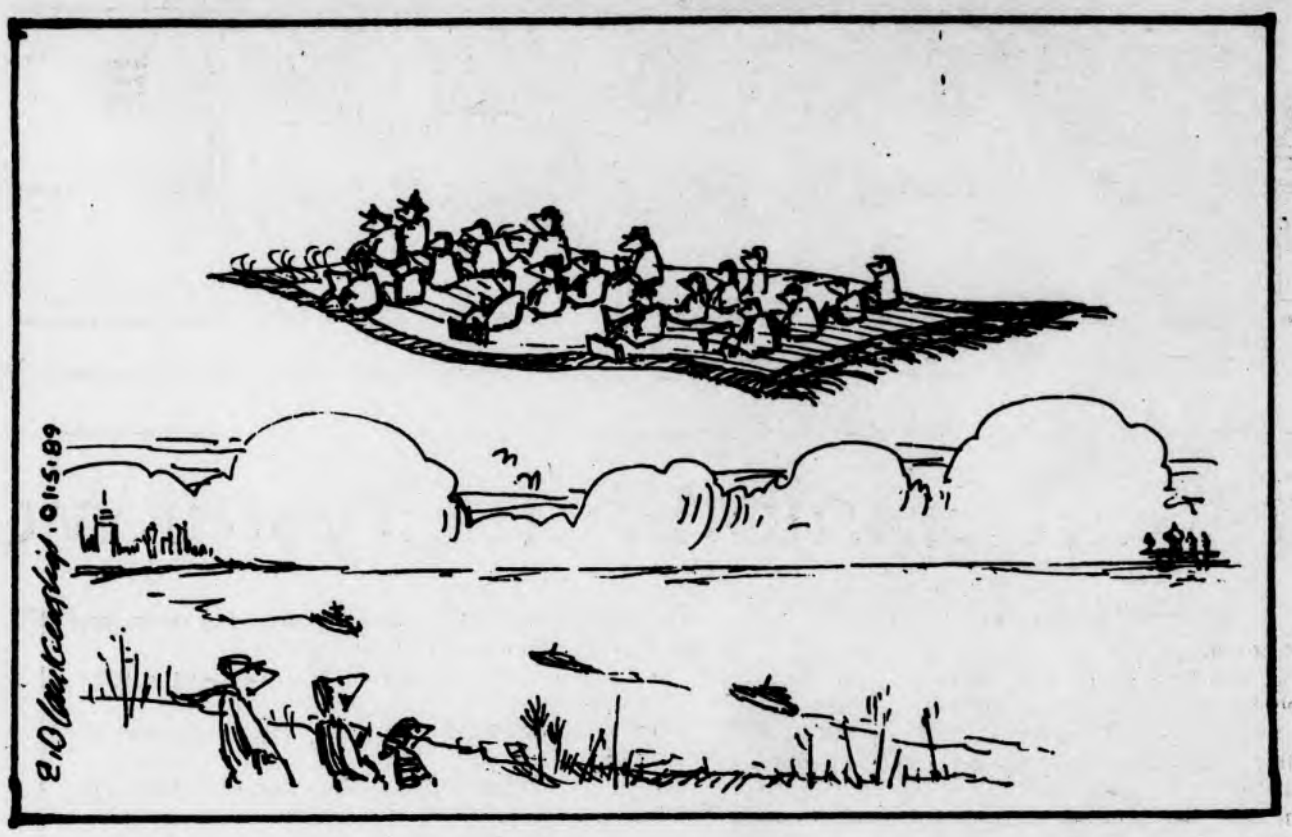
Isn't it time someone said to our town officials, stop wasting taxpayers' money? If a case does not rightfully belong in the courtroom, then don't allow it to go that far.

But time and time again, town officials have allowed cases to get into the courts. Our town counsel is required to defend cases that have no business being heard by a judge. And then we lose. It is not the fault of our counsel. These cases, specifically this attempt to stop one particular developer, do not belong in the courtroom. It is a waste of taxpayers' money when town officials are allowed access to legal counsel to defend decisions that have no legal merit.

When their legal counsel and engineer have advised otherwise, why should a case be brought to court?

This developer has proven he will build something that is needed within this town - something that will look good and be good for this community. Without the plaza, that land was generating about $9,000 in real estate taxes for Cohasset. With an additional 12 stores added to the property, the revenue produced for this town will be about $125,000 annually.

Abutters who vehemently opposed the original supermarket plans have been silent throughout the hearings on this second phase of Cohasset Plaza. One can only believe they are content with the development and have dropped their arguments against the plans.



Most will agree that traffic in the vicinity of the Super Stop and Shop has improved with the additional overhead lights. The developer has maintained a nice-looking building with landscaped property - a suitable replacement for the eyesore that existed there for many years.

We feel there is no solid reason for rejecting the plaza plans - to keep this proposal in limbo until a judge makes the decision for the board. Once again, it appears the taxpayers' money is being used to defend a personal imbroglio, not a legal one.

Thanks for a great trip to 'Nutcracker'

Letters

To the Editor:

As this new year begins, the P.S.O. Enrichment Committee would like to publicly thank the many people who made the trips to the Boston Ballet "Nutcracker" possible.

We are so very fortunate in Cohasset to have such dedication to our children's education. The contributions made to the P.S.O. enable us to offer a wide range of cultural experiences to our students. We thank the following people for their time, expertise and help.

They are Supt. Steve Hart and Richard Streeter for assistance with transportation, principal Gallagher, vice principal DiLorenzo and Mrs. Shultz for their cooperation and patience with bus delays.

Principals Kenneth Erberg and John Creamer who were available every step of the way to ensure the safety and enjoyment of our children. They were truly outstanding!

Special thanks to Ilene Colwill at the Osgood School for her untiring efforts in the planning.

Barbara Conte gave us her usual enthusiastic support. Our gratitude goes to P.S.O. president Martha Equi, treasurer Letitia Jordan, Deer Hill reps. Debbie Cook and Olga Nohe, Osgood reps. Karen Devine and Kathy Walsh, and all the board members for your encouragement and chaperoning.

The Artist of the Month program and librarian Margie Murphy helped the children make wonderful pictures of the "Nutcracker."

We take this opportunity to thank our teachers for preparing our children for the ballet. Each of you gives so much of yourselves to our children. We think you're great!

The students were well behaved and attentive.They were a credit to our teachers.

We received a grant from the Cohasset Arts Lottery. Thanks to Karin Bartow for her help. We thank our very capable bus drivers.

Many thanks go to Selectman Rocco Laugelle and Ed Kasses of the South Shore Music Circus for the use of their parking lot. The lights made a big difference when we arrived home.

The Cohasset Police Department deserves our thanks for their wonderful job in safety assistance. We can always count on them.

Almost 700 students, teachers and parents attended the Nutcracker. The caring of these people made it possible. We wish you all the happiest of New Years.

Sen. Golden receives state award

State Sen. William Golden, D-Weymouth has received the prestigious Legislator of the Year Award from the Massachusetts Municipal Association, the statewide organization representing the interests of cities and towns.

The award will be presented Jan. 6 at the MMA's 10th annual meeting and trade show at the Copley Marriott Hotel in Boston.

"As chairman of the Senate Committee on Counties, Golden was instrumental in winning the fight for legislation creating the county charter process," said MMA Acting Executive Director Dan Soyer.

"As a result of his leadership, Hampshire and Barnstable counties now have new charters reflecting a commitment to the cooperative relationship between regional and local government."

"Bill Golden has long been a protector of the environment. His efforts to clean Boston Harbor, his assistance in passing the Solid Waste Act as well as his cosponsorship and advocacy of the Hayes Bill are just some of his accomplishments balancing the needs of environmental protection and municipal finance," Soyer noted.

"Senator Golden throughout his career, has worked diligently to assist cities and towns in meeting environmental challenges. His diligence and commitment are appreciated statewide. We are pleased to honor his dedication to local government," Soyer concluded.

State Rep. Emmet Hayes, D-Whitman, also will receive the Legislator of The Year Award from the Massachusetts Municipal Association.

"As vice chairman of the House Committee on Natural Resources, Hayes had led the fight for state adoption of a comprehensive wastewater and water treatment program that would assist Massachusetts communities facing huge unfunded federal clean water mandates," said Soyer.

"Without such assistance, it is conceivable that some cities and towns would be forced to devote all of their financial resources to comply with the federal mandates.

"Hayes has forged a coalition of municipal, environmental and business groups all working toward the enactment of this critical legislation. Additionally, 130 of his fellow legislators have co-sponsored his bill."

affordable housing goals.

"In these days, local funding is tight.

"It's a plus to be working on affordable housing.

"There are a couple of strong reasons to have it."

According to Bowen, Scituate already has some affordable housing.

They include a residential complex on North River Drive, and housing authority senior citizen complexes, he said.

"We have also been exploring the Cushing Hall property," said Bowen.

The selectman said that neighbors of the proposed project did have some concerns about things like screening and shrubbery.

"But you would encounter that with any project," he sid.

"We think technical issues like traffic can be worked out.

"We didn't see those issues as reasons not to support it."

When asked why he thought the proposal was meeting much less resistance in Scituate, Bowen thought for a moment.

"Maybe we are more enlightened," he said.

"Not to say that Cohasset is unenlightened."

"We're moving aggressively forward in a way consistent with the character of the community."

Crystal Woods developer Jack Hurley, of Crystal Development Corporation in Quincy, said there is no question about the need for more affordable housing.

"I think there is a lot of fear of having affordable housing near them," said Hurley of the Cohasset neighbors.

"We believe other housing developments considered affordable housing have been very successful, without negative impact.

"This type of project involves investment like in any home."

Hurley sid that he took control of the 20 acres of land for the project in 1985.

"It was in the family," he said. "My wife's family.

"Fourteen months ago, we started looking at the Housing Opportunity Program (HOP) and trying to put it together."

Average price of the condominiums will be $145,000 to $175,000, according to Hurley.

"They will all have two bedrooms.

The 22 HOP units will be two and three bedrooms. The three bedroom will be $95,000; the two bedroom, $75,000, he said.

Hurley said that the condominiums will be in four and six unit colonial style buildings.

"Each of the 12 buildings will be drawn a little differently," he said.

"They will fit into the community. They won't look like apartment buildings."

The project will include passive recreational areas for sports such as basketball and tot lots, he said.

"There won't be a swimming pool which would increase condominium association fees," said Hurley.

Hurley said that he hasn't developed any other housing projects.

But he has run a contracting supply business, Jackson Sales Co. of Quincy for 14 years, he said.

Architects will be Architectural Axiom of Hanover, according to Hurley. They have been involved in such projects as Jasper Lane housing in Randolph, Barstow's Restaurant in Norwell and Merchant's Row in Hanover, he said.

"They have a very good feel for that kind of architecture, very traditional," said Hurley.

Engineers will be Merrill Associates of Hanover, Hurley said.

"The initial indication is that traffic will not be a problem," said Hurley, noting one of the neighbor's concerns.

"But we will do a traffic study as the process goes on, probably some time this winter."

If the project is approved, it will be built in three stages, over two years, according to Hurley.

The first stage will include 18 units, the second stage, 14, and third, 28, he said.

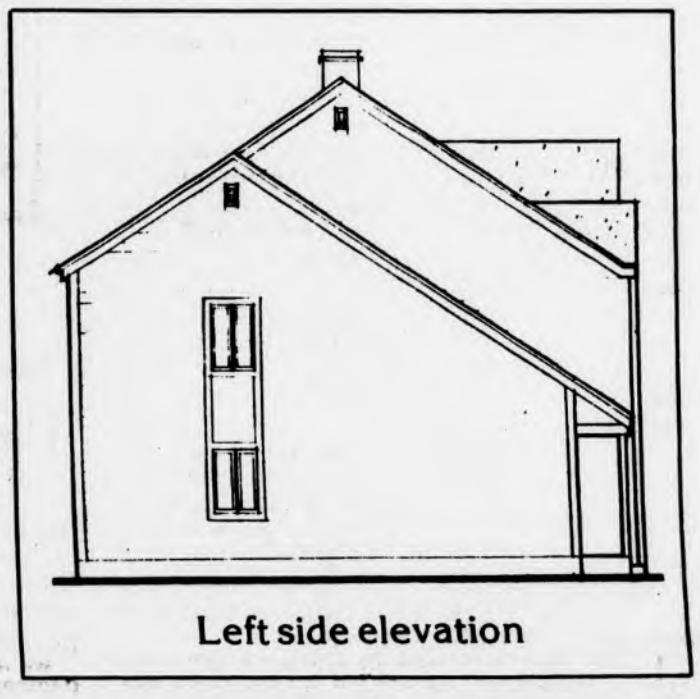
"We plan to have the road connect on Ledgewood Drive, a dead end," said Hurley.

"We don't want to segregate the development from any neighbors.

"The road was meant to go through."

The developer said that he applied for funding in the HOP program last Dec. 6.

"They say we should hear in about 60 days," said Hurley.



"The application is for buyers of affordable units with low interest mortgages."

If the application is accepted, Hurley said he will apply to the Cohasset Zoning Appeals Board for a comprehensive permit.

The permit allows a developer to bypass some local zoning in exchange for providing affordable housing.

"If not, we will reapply (to the state for funding)," he said.

"I'm very optimistic.

"The state is very interested in having affordable housing in Cohasset.

"They are more than making a statement."

Hurley said he doesn't think it will affect his chances if the 128-unit Deck Point project, proposed for 81-119 King St., Cohasset, receives a permit from the ZBA or is funded by the state. It also includes affordable housing.

"From my knowledge, with both projects Cohasset won't be near the (10 percent) percentage of affordable housing it needs," he said.

Hurley feels that Crystal Woods would be a good neighbor.

"It will be just what they have now," he said.

"HOP is for the community, for Cohasset and Scituate.

"People who grew up in town can't afford to live there now.

"How is the town going to entice municipal workers such as teachers and other workers in the community?

"The programs are good. They address the need for affordable housing in a way that is investing in the community."

Hurley said concerns of the Cohasset neighbors will be addressed as the project progresses.

"We're still in a very preliminary stage," he said.

"They will come up as we go through the process."

Selectmen outline their opposition to housing

Cohasset and state officials said that Cohasset would "not impede" the development of low and middle income housing in the town, she warned.

"But we are not impeding low and moderate income housing," Selectman Burt Pratt answered. "We're just sending them this concise letter. We're just giving them a quick idea of why we voted against this."

Last month, the board voted four-to-one to oppose the Crystal Woods development planned on six acres of land off Brewster and Ledgewood roads. At that time, Selectman Cliff Mitman opposed the motion, saying that selectmen should keep all comunication open with the state during the comprehensive permit application process.

The letter sent to the HOP this week states that a majority of the selectmen voted not to support the development for the following reasons:

"1. The development includes no redeeming features which would justify relaxation of local controls. Quite the reverse is true. Ongoing local control is essential if this parcel is to be developed.

2. The project would be especially difficult to regulate since it involves two towns.

3. The board prefers to pursue its housing objectives under the five-point memorandum of agreement entered into with EOCD and feels that this program need not include comprehensive permits.

4. Some of the issues concerning Crystal Woods which are of grave concern include:

a. proximity to sidelines of adjacent residential properties.

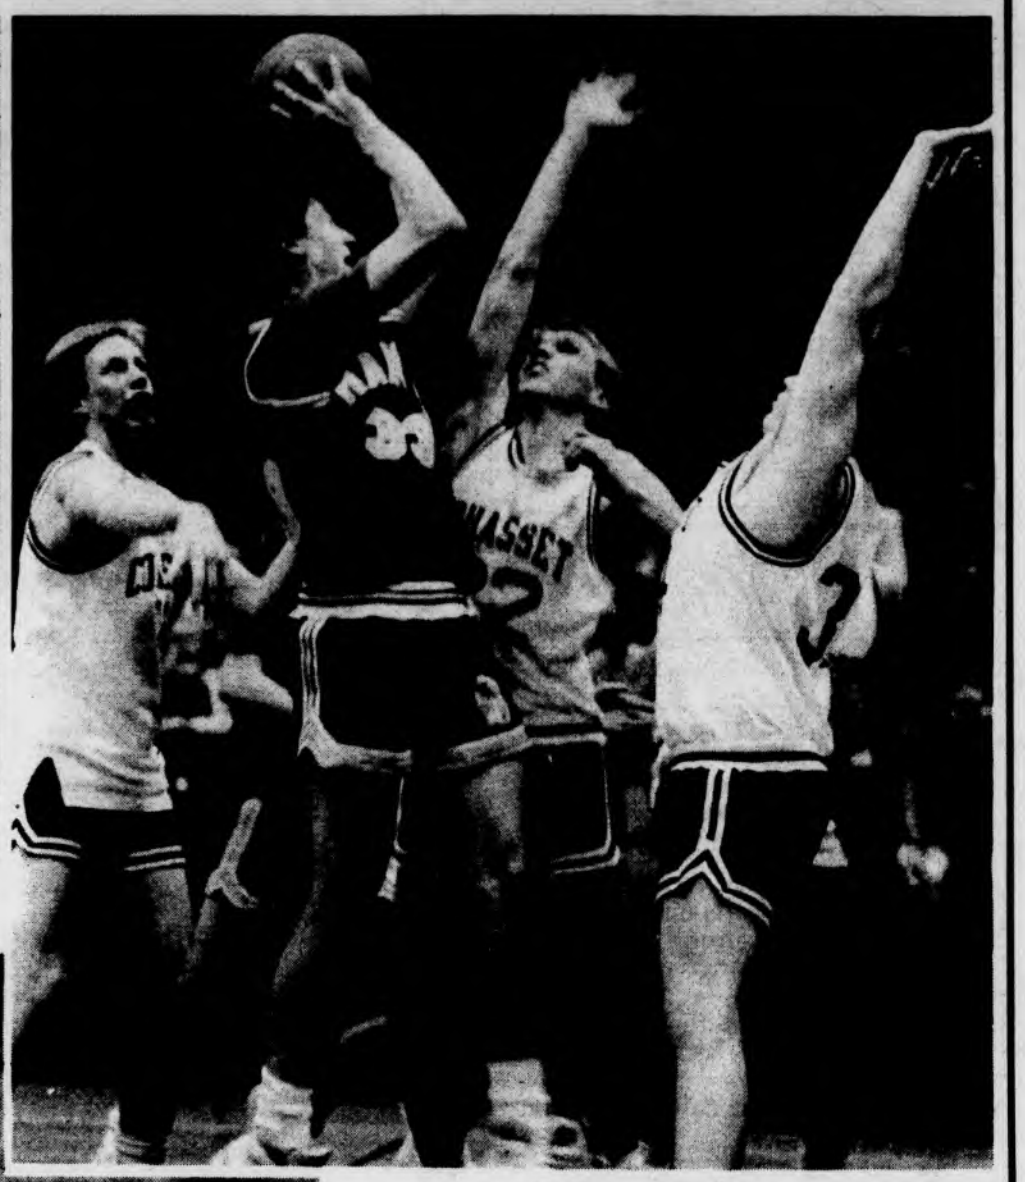
b. inadequate drainage.

c. poor soil for septic systems.

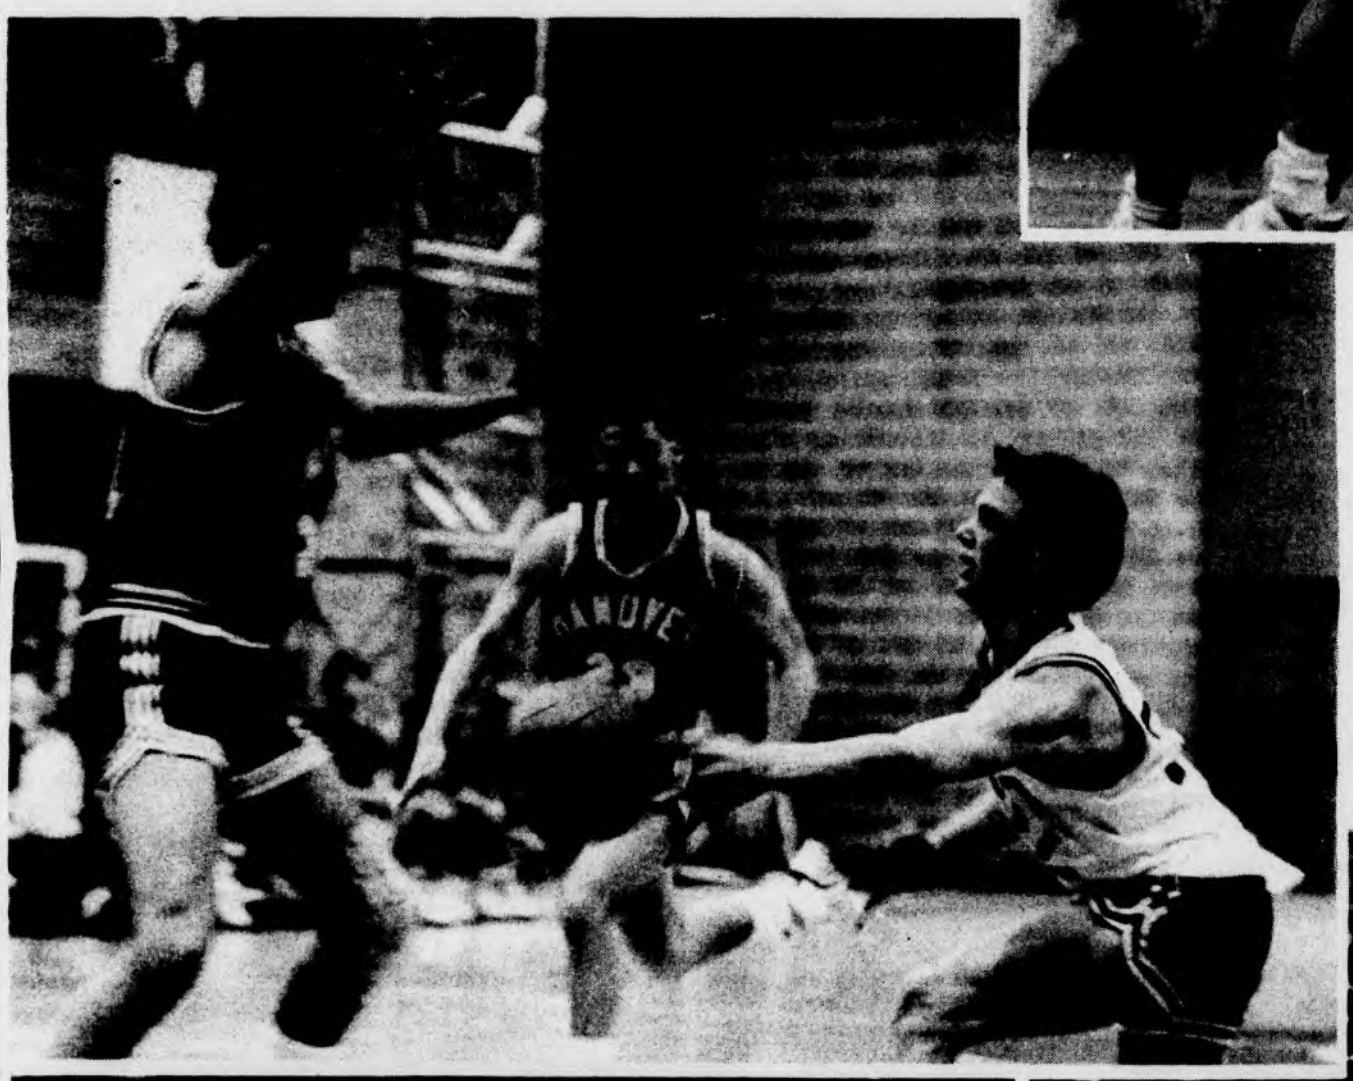
d. traffic at Rte. 3A.

For all of the foregoing reasons, the Board of Selectman cannot support the Crystal Woods development."

Rep. Murray explains auto insurance bill



"To put it mildly, most people are very confused and perturbed regarding their automobile insurance," stated Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray. "Part of the problem is that some companies did not send out their 1988 statements until the '88 rates were firmed up by the insurance commissioners and then on top of that bill out comes the 1989 auto insurance rates."



Private passenger auto insurance rates will decrease by an average of 8.2 percent in 1989. This is the largest decrease in auto insurance rates in over a decade. As a result, the current statewide average premium is $631.

The rate reduction is attributed to the savings derived from the Legislature's passage of auto insurance reform legislation.

"This rate decrease would not have been possible without the savings to the system brought about the Legislature's passage of auto insurance reform legislation," said Rep. Murray. "The legislature, the administration and the constituent groups who worked to formulate the law are to be commended for their efforts to bring about the most meaningful reforms to the system in 18 years."

Concert pianist at conservatory

Sunday, Jan. 15, the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham will present a solo recital by Luisa Guembes-Buchanan, head of the Piano Dept. at the school.

The concert will be held in Cox Recital Hall at the Conservatory, off 19 Fort Hill Street at 4 p.m. This program is presented to the community free of charge.

Luisa Guembes-Buchanan, a native of Peru, started her music studies at the National Conservatory in Lima. She continued them at the Manhattan School of Music in New York City, got her Masters at C.W. Post College, and a PhD in Music Performance at New York University.

She has performed extensively in South America and the United States. Her most recent performances were in Stony Brook, Long Island in November and, later in the month, at the Theatro Municipal in Lima, Peru.

Buchanan's teaching has encompassed the instruction of the instrument, rudiments of music, and the advanced art of performance. She has edited and translated three music textbooks into Spanish for the Kjos Publishing Company in San Diego, California and continues to work on other textbooks. She is also developing a series of music workshops throughout South America.

For her concert at the Conservatory, Luisa Guembes-Buchanan has chosen works by Ginastera, Beethoven, Chopin, Debussy, Schumann, and Bartok.

The South Shore Conservatory is a non profit community school of the arts and is funded in part by the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities.

Violin and piano sonatas

Sunday, Jan. 8 at 3:30 p.m., the South Shore Conservatory will present a concert of sonatas for violin and piano.

The performers are Anne Tyson of the Conservatory piano faculty, and violinist, Dianne Pettipaw. The concert will be in Cox Hall at the Conservatory, off 19 Fort Hill Street in Hingham. There is no admission fee.

Both Tyson and Pettipaw are professional musicians. Tyson studied at the Royal College of Music in London. She has performed frequently in Britain as accompanist and member of several chamber groups. She has also played for BBC broadcasts. Since coming to Boston in 1987, she has appeared as accompanist for Boston Lyric Opera, the Longwood Opera, and with the Conservatory's Fort Hill Chamber Music Series. Tyson teaches in the New England Conservatory Extension program in addition to teaching in the Hingham and Duxbury branches of the South Shore Conservatory.

Pettipaw studied at Boston University under Raphael Bronstein and Roman Totenberg. She is an active freelance musician in the Boston area and has played with the Boston Pops, the Opera Company of Boston, the Handel and Haydn Society, the Banchetto Musicale and others. She teaches at the Longy School of Music in Cambridge.

For their program January 8, the artists have chosen: Sonata No. 3 in E Major by Bach; Sonata No. 7 in C Minor by Beethoven; and Sonata no. 2 in D Major by Prokoffiev.

The South Shore Conservatory is a non-profit community school of the arts with branches in Hingham, Duxbury, and Brockton. It is funded in part by the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities.

Permit granted for Deck Point development

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The town's first comprehensive permit was granted Tuesday night by the zoning board of appeals, although at least one abutter may appeal that decision.

Deck Point Inc. was given the green light to move further along with their plans to construct condominium units on Cohasset Hill, but that approval was tempered by the addition of 34 conditions set by the appeals board.

Paul Barry, owner of the embattled commercial landfill, Cohasset Heights Ltd., said he will contact his attorney about a possible appeal.

"I can't believe the zoning board would allow 108 families to move next door to a landfill they have fought for so many years," Barry said. "The zoning board has accused us of emitting an obnoxious odor, a claim they have never substantiated, and of being a health hazard to the environment, and then they turn around and allow 108 families next door. Deck Point will be a lot closer to those obnoxious odors than the cars passing along Rte. 3A. It hardly seems fair when the zoning board says we are a serious problem and then decides to put families and children right next door.

"I really don't think this will be a safe place to raise children - right next door to commercial businesses and a state highway."

Among the conditions set by the board was a requirement that Deck Point Inc. decrease the amount of units from 128 to 108, with no fewer than 37 units designated as "affordable housing." Not less than six of those units and no more than ten will be offered to low income families.

At the conclusion of Tuesday night's unanimous vote by the board, Chairman Myrna Putzinger noted, "It was the right thing to do to grant the comprehensive permit. But I think it's a tough site to build and it will be a tough site to market."

Atty. Robert Devin, representing Deck Point Inc.,

Student talks about experiences in Israel

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

When Cohasset resident Leslie Woodbury's parents greeted her at Logan Airport December 21 as she returned from four-month's study in Israel, their hugs and kisses were even more heartfelt than usual.

For the Brigham Young University junior and advertising major had come home via London, and Pan Am Flight 103 had been among those offered to her.

The flight plunged into the Scottish countryside and all 258 passengers were killed. A terrorist bomb is suspected to have caused the disaster.

"My mother told me she was so glad I wasn't on that plane," said Woodbury, 21, daughter of Kathleen and Thomas Woodbury of Whitney Woods Lane.

"That flight was offered," she said, "but I took British Airways with a friend.

"There were a couple of different flights I could have taken.

"It was such a shock when I flew into John F. Kennedy Airport.

"I went to the Pan Am terminal to take the shuttle to Boston and I heard what had happened.

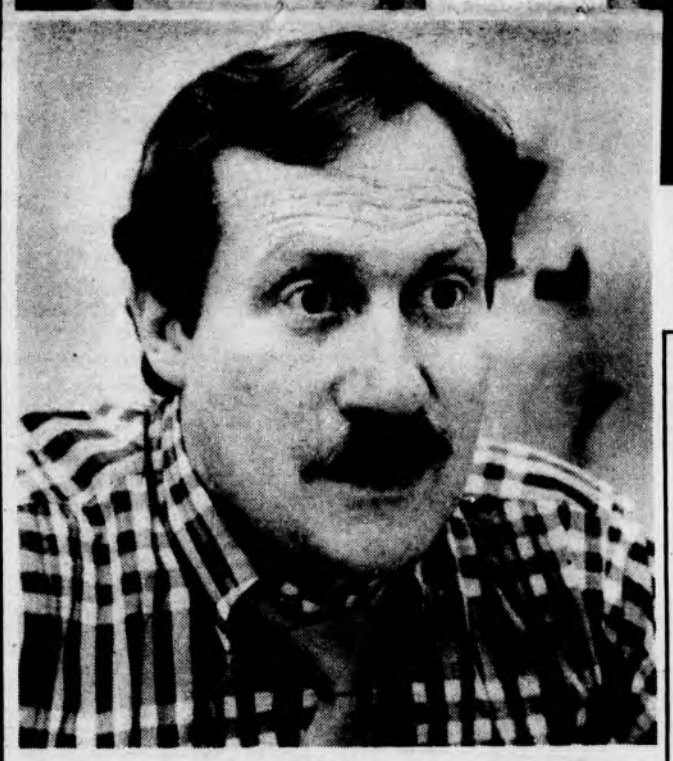
"That was terrible. I felt fortunate that I wasn't on that flight.

"I could relate to the other students (on the Pan Am flight) studying abroad.

"I was so happy to be home."

Woodbury said her family knew which flight she was coming home on, so they knew she was safe.

Nonetheless, her welcome was emotional.



"I've always been a little nervous flying," she admitted.

"But I fly so much (to school in Provo, Utah) that I can't think about it."

New CHS varsity basketball coach, Arnie Reppucci.

'Eddie and the Cruisers' era ends

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

For the members of the boys' varsity basketball team, the roller coaster ride is over.

Their on-again, off-again coach offered his resignation to the school committee Tuesday morning. The era of Eddie and the Cruisers ended this week.

The turmoil surrounding the CHS basketball team began last Tuesday, Jan. 3 when coach Ed Minelli said he left a letter containing some issues he wanted resolved on the desk of Athletic Director Clark Chatterton. He also left a set of keys to the building and locker room.

At no time, Minelli emphasized throughout the week, was his reason for leaving the team related to their current losing record.

According to Minelli, when Chatterton failed to discuss those issues with him at practice the evening of January 3, "I assumed he just didn't want to deal with me, and that was it. I decided it was time to leave," the coach said.

There is no way I'm leaving you with you thinking you're not good enough.
Former coach
Ed Minelli

After telling his assistant coach Matt Salerno, and junior varsity coach Arnie Reppucci that he was resigning, Minelli left the school. He did not attend subsequent practices or the Friday night game. Reppucci filled in for the absent coach.

Chatterton said he never saw the letter, and as Junior varsity coach takes charge

Arnie Reppucci is happy to be new varsity basketball coach for Cohasset High School, but unhappy about the circumstances which brought it about.

Coach Ed Minelli offered his resignation Tuesday morning after missing two practices and a game.

The resignation was accepted by the school committee with regret.

"When you have coached as many years as I have, you wonder how it will be when you are head coach," said Reppucci, 45, who had been Cohasset junior varsity coach since the beginning of the season.

"I'm happy for the opportunity, but not how it came about.

"Coach Minelli has had a long and distinguished career."

Reppucci, a resident of Summer Street, has also had a career with distinction.

He started coaching baseball 20 years ago, and coaching basketball 15 years ago.

For the last five years, he has been involved with Junior Olympics basketball.

"The last three years, we won the state and New England championship," said Reppucci.

"I'm pretty proud of that."

Basketball wasn't Reppucci's favorite sport growing up in Arlington.

"I played football and hockey," he said. "Then I injured my knee."

His friend was a college basketball player and Reppucci started going to practices and games and got hooked on the sport.

"I loved it," he said.

He started coaching as a way to repay the coaches who had helped him.

"I like to give something back," said Reppucci.

"When I was young, I played all the sports," he said.

"I was impressed with coaches who would get up at crazy hours to be with the kids.

"The coaches gave a lot of time and effort, and were influential in my life.

"Now it's an opportunity to pay back the system.

"A lot of coaches do it for the same reason I do, not for the money.

Curtis Group fund drive

The Curtis Estate Action Committee (CEAC) has initiated a fund drive to raise $10,000.

The committee is optimistic that Judge Lawton will support the CEAC Plan which provides for needy housing on the 55 acre Curtis Estate. Undevelopable property would be preserved as conservation land.

A hearing is scheduled for 3 p.m., Friday, Jan. 20, in Plymouth Probate and Family Court. Local and State officials as well as the Norfolk District Attorney have come out in support of the CEAC Plan.

CEAC has already raised more than $3500, but expenses exceed $7000 and the Group wants to be able to pay for whatever additional legal and other expenses may be incurred in assuring a successful outcome for the local area.

Contributions should be made payable to the Curtis Estate Action Committee, c/o Nancy Snowdale, P.O. Box 242, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Open burning permits

Burning (with a permit) of the following materials is allowed:

Brush, cane, driftwood, and forestry debris from other than commercial or industrial land clearing operations between January 15 - May 1 under the following conditions:

Burning must be at least 75 feet from all dwellings;

Burning must be carried out between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.; and

Burning must take place on land closest to the source of material to be burned.

While burning, an adult must attend the fire until completely extinguished. Have available a water supply, such as a pressurized water pump can or hose, and shovels or rakes for controlling the fire.

Burning of the following materials is prohibited statewide:

Grass, hay, leaves, stumps, and tires.

Permits may be obtained by calling the Fire Department at 383-0616, between the hours of 9:30 a.m. and 2 p.m., on the day you wish to burn.

These regulations are pursuant to Chapter 48, Section 13 and 310 CMR 7.07.

Planning board action

The Planning Board took the following action at its Jan. 4 meeting at 43 Elm St:

• Accepted plans for the renovation of Randy Parkinson's Mobil Station, Sohier St. and Route 3A.

Four new pumps will replace the existing ones on two islands under a metal canopy.

A convenience store is also planned.

• Agreed to resubmit for the annual town meeting two zoning proposals.

They regard creation of a municipal housing authority and density.

Change in SEMASS fee

SEMASS has notified selectmen there may be a change in the tipping fee for the disposal of the town's waste.

Last November, the health board accepted a proposal from SEMASS to accept trash from Cohasset for four years starting with the operation of the solid waste transfer station which could be ready in June.

The decision was based on reduced transportation costs as opposed to Orrington Me., the relative ease of transport, and the reduced cost based on a starting tipping fee of $44/ton.

But according to SEMASS, a change in law regarding solid waste management must be taken into consideration.

Section 5 of Chapter 21H of the Solid Waste Act of 1987 requires that the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) require owners or operators of solid waste combustion facilities to test ash for dioxins, furans and heavy metals, according to SEMASS.

The department is also to develop and establish procedures to be followed when ash is to be sampled and analyzed.

"This provision constitutes a change in law under the service agreement which must be taken into consideration in a redetermination of the tipping fee payable for the disposal of waste at the SEMASS project," stated the Dec. 29 letter from SEMASS.

"We are currently in the process of evaluating the financial impact of this change in law, and we will provide you with additional information relevant to its effect upon your tipping fee, if any, in the future."

Dwyer receives permit

Months after a fire destroyed his business headquarters, Robert Dwyer has received permission to proceed with the reconstruction project.

Tuesday night, the zoning board of appeals granted the dry cleaning business a special permit to continue reconstruction of the Rte. 3A building.

"It's been a nightmare," Dwyer said after the decision was handed down by the appeals board. "It's been a nightmare since August 5 (the date of the fire).

Thank God for these nice people," he said, referring to the members of the appeals boards.

Dwyer began reconstruction of the building which served as the headquarters and dry cleaning plant for his seven South Shore stores. Last fall after construction began, the building inspector issued a cease and desist order against the company, saying the new building exceeded the height of the former one-and-a-half story building.

The town filed suit against the business owner, claiming that the building under construction is different from the one it replaces. Dwyer has argued that he was rebuilding on the same foundation line and was actually decreasing the amount of useable space on the second floor.

Last month in Superior Court a judge ruled that the new building was different in concept and appearance from the original, and ordered Dwyer to seek a special permit from the zoning board of appeals. He allowed Dwyer to bypass a site plan review, because the business owner had previously been told by the planning board it would not be required.

The special permit issued by the appeals board contained several conditions, including a requirement that the second floor not be leased separately from the first floor, that the sign in the front of the building shall conform to the zoning bylaw, that the site be landscaped to maximize the green area, and that all work on the building be completed within eight months.

Planning Bd. approves Lily Pond Estates

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

After being advised by Town Counsel to reconsider the proposal, the planning board voted January 4 to reverse its decision of three years ago and approve a subdivision of Lily Pond Estates.

Some 36 acres will be divided into 11 house lots adjacent to Lily Pond.

When it was before the board three years ago, the proposal drew opposition from residents and town officials concerned about its proximity to the town's water supply.

They argued the board to deny the application.

At that time, former water commissioner Peter Pratt said his board would prohibit construction of the project by an injunction if necessary.

The planning board denied the proposal in August, 1985, and gave 23 reasons.

The decision was appealed in the appellate and superior courts.

"The courts found that if you find the applicant has complied with the reasons for the denial, you must approve the plan," Town Counsel Richard Henderson told the planning board last week.

Henderson noted that the board would still be governed by the regulations when the application was filed.

He also said that discussion at the public hearing must be confined to the 23 reasons for denial.

About five residents of the area and five representatives of the development attended the meeting.

Atty. Michael O'Neill, who represented the owners, said that the reasons for the denial have been covered.

"We have corrected all the things which need to be corrected," said O'Neill.

He also said that a triangular piece of land coming out onto King St. as well as a small piece of swamp land owned by the developer will be given to the town.

At the request of the planning board, consulting engineer John Modzelewski pointed out what he felt were some deficiencies in the proposal.

They could be rectified, he said, by increasing the size of water drains from 12 inches to 18 inches, including land on the opposite side of King St. in calculations for a retention pond, and erecting a stronger retaining wall.

O'Neill said the developers would agree with Modzelewski's suggestions.

Jim Hamilton of King St. said tht the nearby water department was "up in arms" about the proposal three years ago.

"What's the water department stand now?" asked Hamilton.

Water commissioner chairman Ron Goodwin said he was concerned about such things as the way the proposal was laid out, the possibility of fertilizer and road salt so close to the (water department) intake structure.

"Good planning would take into account protection of the water supply," said Goodwin.

Henderson pointed out that the planning board hearing was for a subdivision only.

He said that as each lot is developed, it must comply with local regulations.

"Each lot has to go for a building permit, to the board of health, building inspector," he said.

"They still have to comply with every state, federal and municipal regulation."

The planning board unanimously approved the subdivision with the following conditions:

- Eighteen inch pipes be used.
- Cement masonry retaining wall be installed.
- Calculations for a 100 year storm be submitted for approval to ensure that the retention basin not back up onto adjacent property.
- Sidewalk on the Lily Pond side be deleted at the option of the developer and one continued on King St. to the intersection.

Town revaluation begins Jan. 1

Beginning Jan. 1, revaluation of all properties will take place. The firm, Appraisal Consultants of New England, has been hired to do the triennial state mandated revaluation.

The appraisers are carrying with them letters of introduction from the Board of Assessors and their names are also on file with the Cohasset Police Department. For the appraisers to accomplish their job efficiently and accurately, access to some homes is necessary. The Board of Assessors are asking all residents to cooperate in this effort.

'Maintenance' budget jumps by nine percent

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The school committee this week presented a budget for 1989-90 that includes no new programs, although it calls for a nine percent increase over this year's total.

Supt. Stephen Hart called the $5. 5 million preliminary package a "maintenance budget," meaning that no new programs will be included, and no money will be allocated for additional personnel.

The most significant reason for the $500,000 jump, he explained Monday night to the school committee, is the anticipated extra costs for state-mandated special needs day care and residential schooling projected for next year.

"We have told the advisory committee that every year this cost could increase depending on our needs, and this will be the year," Supt. Hart explained. Costs for the special needs day school tuition will jump from $133,895 to a projected $176,143 in 1989-90. The special needs residential school placement, for which the local school system is responsible, will rise from $48,179 in 1989 to $115,620 next year - an inherited cost that has seen tremendous increases over the past year, Supt. Hart stated. The transportation costs for this portion of the budget will increase $15,000 to $37,575 in 1989-90.

The superintendent explained that contract salaries account for 79 percent of the total school budget next year, which translates to a five percent increase over the current year. Another increase is the 2.4 percent rise in the special education costs for next year. "These are items you can't fund with a six percent increase in the budget," he said, noting that the cost of residential and day care special needs placements increases an average of 20 percent each year.

"What that actually means is the entire remainder of the budget has increased 1.6 percent in all other areas," Supt. Hart said, translating that into an $80,000 increase spread throughout the entire budget.

School committee member Barbara Bliss agreed with the assessment. "I'm impressed with how little there is in here," she said, meaning the lack of "fat" within the budget - a reduction which is recommended annually by the advisory committee.

Supt. Hart noted that the school committee will be presenting a "component of growth" budget at a later meeting in which new programs and their costs will be reviewed by the school committee as an alternate to this "maintenance budget."

School population is on the incline next year, with an additional 13 students projected for the Osgood and Deer Hill schools. The greatest increase is predicted for the sixth grade where the student enrollment will jump from 70 students this year to 92 next year. The sudden increase will necessitate the addition of a classroom teacher at that grade. The cost of the additional personnel will be offset by the reduction of one physical education staff member from the junior/senior high school where the student population will decrease by about 22 students.

Supt. Hart said the student increase next year is "encouraging - one, because it means we're staying in existence, and two, it helps with the scheduling, enabling us to make accommodations for the needs of some students in smaller classrooms."

He noted there will be changes made to this preliminary budget as the school committee and advisory committee review it more closely.

Committee member Bliss added, "if the advisory committee can't deal with this budget, we need to know so we can decide whether to go to town meeting and ask for this, or if we have to cut personnel."

Christine Bassett, a member of the advisory committee and a liason to the school committee noted, "the real issue is that additional $500,000 and how it will impact on all the other budgets in town."

The school committee will begin its review of the all district section, which includes the special needs cost increases, and the Osgood School budget at its next meeting January 23.

No support for board reduction

Selectmen reversed their action of last November and voted 4-1 Monday to rescind acceptance of an article for town meeting which would reduce the board of selectmen from five to three members.

Selectmen Martha Gjesteby proposed the action regarding the article submitted by Sohier St. resident Robert Davenport.

"We should reconsider acceptance of the article to reduce the board of selectmen," said Gjesteby.

"There should be a citizen's petition and it should go to the town government structure committee," she said.

Davenport submitted the petition without the 10 required signatures.

"I believe in it (reducing the board)," said selectmen Rocco Laugelle who voted against the action.

"I worked with both (number of selectmen)," said Laugelle.

Gjesteby suggested that Davenport get the required signatures.

"It sets a bad precedent," said selectman chairman Burt Pratt about the lack of signatures.

The board agreed to notify Davenport of the action.

Davenport submitted the proposal because he felt the smaller number is more efficient and cheaper.

"I don't feel the large number accomplishes anything except to make it more cumbersome," said Davenport earlier.

But others such as Cohasset police sergeant Richard Barrows, who worked to increase the number of members from three to five in 1982, disagrees.

"I think it has worked better with five," said Barrows earlier.

"There is a lot more input."

According to Davenport's article, the board of selectmen would consist of four members beginning with the annual town election in April, 1990, and ending with the annual town election in April, 1991.

Thereafter, the board would consist of three members.

Golden certain to run for Lt. Governor

By Tom Henshaw
Mariner staff

State Sen. William B. Golden all but announced this week that he is running for lieutenant governor in the state election some 22 months down the road.

"I am virtually certain that I will be a candidate for lieutentant governor in 1990," he said.

"At this time I see no event or no individual entering the race which would cause me to reconsider."

The run was cleared for 40-year-old Golden, who is just starting his third term in the Senate, when Gov. Michael S. Dukakis announced he would not run for a fourth term.

Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy then moved into contention for the Democratic nomination for governor.

"I would not be running unless the position were open," said Golden, who was born in Cohasset and has made his home in Weymouth for the past five years.

"The results of events of the past week focused and crystalized my thinking."

Golden said he plans to make a formal announcement of his candidacy "but the timing has not been decided."

He made his pre-announcement announcement, he said, for two reasons.

"I intend to begin early and ask the support of as many people as I can," he said. "That takes time.

"Also it would be only fair to allow the people of the senatorial district time to consider who my successor might be."

Golden said he figures his campaign from now at least through the primary in September, 1990, will cost about $1 million.

"It's unfortunate that that is part and parcel of being a viable candidate," he said.

He said he already has about $100,000 in his campaign war chest.

Golden declined to speculate on who might run against him for the lieutenant governor's slot.

"I'm not sure who will get in the race," he said. "There are a number of qualified candidates who will seek the position."

But he said he would seek the endorsement of the Democratic State Convention in the summer of 1990 and, failing that, he would still be on the September primary ballot, provided he got the required 15% of the convention delegate vote.

Golden said he discussed the possibility of running with his family and "I received calls about it from around the state."

"I decided that the position of lieutenant governor would allow me to continue to be a strong advocate for the issues which I have concentrated on in my four years as a state senator," he said.

"If elected I would be a strong advocate for the environment and for investment in people, particularly our children.

"I feel the lieutenant governor's position will give me the opportunity to be available in a modest way to impact the future course of the state government.

"I don't see it as a stepping stone to higher office."

As city solicitor of Quincy in 1982, Golden filed the law suit that touched off the current massive effort to clean up Boston Harbor.

"When I filed that suit, many were surprised that a city solicitor could play an effective role in determining the future of coastal pollution in the state," he said.

"But I was able to do it.

"I believe I have been able to view the offices I've held in a different way than than previously considered."

He said he plans to bring the same view to the office of lieutenant governor, which is generally looked upon as a job with not much heavy lifting.

"I am excited over one traditional responsibility of the office — the handling of federal-state relations," he said.

"I have had experience at every level of government and, as we witnessed in the recent Weymouth Naval Air Station scare, the federal government has an enormous influence on our lives."

Golden said he has no particular preference of a running mate in the top spot on the ballot and he will not run in tandem with another candidate before the primary.

"I am running as an individual candidate and not as a ticket," he said. "I prefer to be around to run with the person who wins the nomination."

Golden said his campaign organ-ization now consists of one woman, Susan D'Olimpio of Waltham, who is director of the campaign committee office.

Right now, he said, the office is at 29 Sargent Rd., his home in South Weymouth.

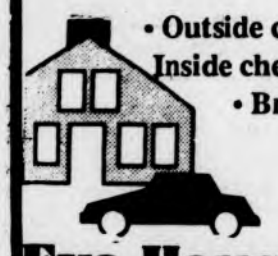
"I have substantial contacts around the state," he said. "I made many friends during the statewide referendum campaigns."

Golden's wife, Paula, an attorney, is executive director of a non-profit agency. She formerly worked for the Registry of Motor Vehicles. They have two children, Brigham, 20, and Bethany, 15.

He is a graduate of Yale in 1970 with a degree in political science, Boston University Law School in 1974 and has a masters in public administration from Harvard in 1981.

In the State Senate, he has chaired the Public Service Committee, the Special Committee for Long Range Policy Planning and the Special Commission on Indoor Air Pollution.

He weas chosen Legislator of the Year for 1988 by the Massachusetts Municipal Association.



"As a historical note," he said, "no governor or lieutenant governor has been elected from south of Braintree since the turn of the century.

"I think it is our turn."

Wrestling Coach Sweeney: 'It's you and your opponent'

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

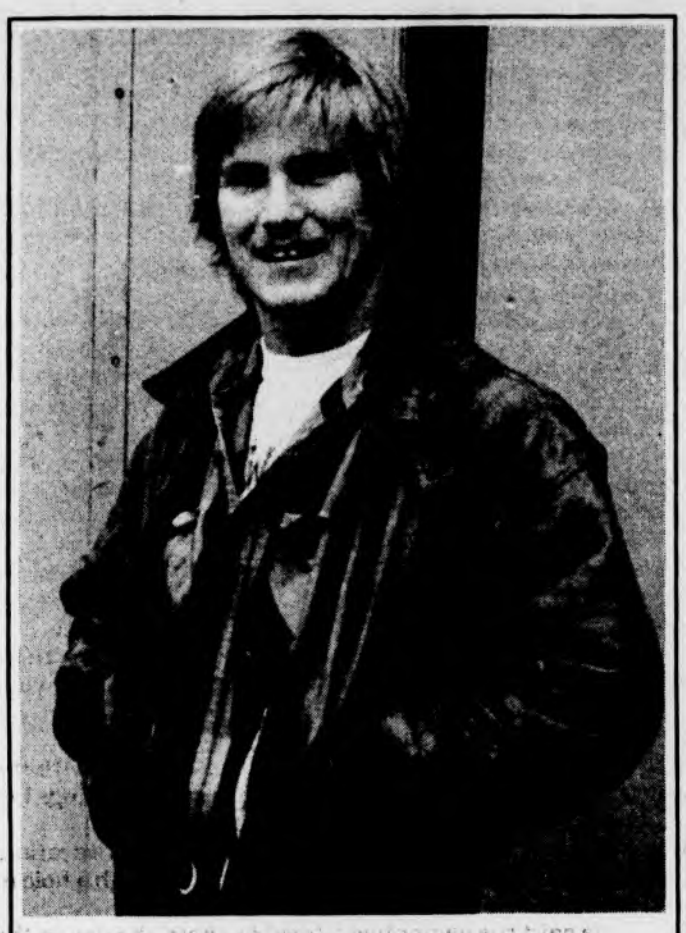
The young coach of the high school wrestling team shares a unique philosophy with his students.

According to Torin Sweeney, there are lessons about life to be gleaned from a wrestling match.

"It's an individual sport," the 24 - year-old coach explained," as well as a team sport. But when you walk out on that mat, there is no supporting cast. It's just you and your opponent. Kids learn a lot about themselves in those six minutes. The way I tell them is, even if you lose, I hope you've learned something about yourself. If you've learned something, then you really haven't lost."

The former CHS wrestling champion continued. "I gained a lot of self confidence - a good self image when I competed," he recalled. "It was a feeling of accomplishment - that if I worked hard, I'll make gains. I tell the kids at practice to work hard, put the time into it, and you're going to win. I think that sets the tone for life - if you work hard, you will win."

Sweeney abides by this personal philosophy. He is a full-time student at the University of Massachusetts in Boston. He works, sometimes full time, for a Boston caterer, and he coaches from December until February. As he stated, "December is the real killer month. The catering business is hectic, I'm in school, and we have wrestling tournaments and practices. There's no time for Christmas."



Now that his other job has settled into a slower pace, and his school work is put aside during semester break, Sweeney can focus entirely on his wrestling team. He is pleasantly surprised at how well the small Cohasset contingent is faring this season.

Although their official standing is at 2-2, the varsity team made an outstanding showing at the Marshfield Christmas tournament. From a total of 19 teams, Cohasset was ranked fifth. "And that tournament included at least ten or 11 Division I teams," Sweeney noted - schools with double Cohasset's student population.

There are 22 boys on the team, including six junior high students who work out and practice every other day with the older members. "I don't want to burn them out - I just want to get them interested," their coach explained.

There are several "standouts" on this year's team, Sweeney noted, including senior Greg Nourie, who won first place in the Christmas tournament in the 103-pound division. Paul Froio won the 160-pound division. Three others placed in the tournament, including Timmy Pierotti, third place at 130 pounds; John Rhodes, fourth place at 119 pounds, and Chris Froio, fourth at 171 pounds.

This is Sweeney's sixth year as varsity coach. When he took the job in 1983, a year after he graduated from the school, he was the youngest coach in the state. At the ripe old age of 24 he remains one of the youngest, but he has seniority over most of the other coaches in Division I.

Torin Sweeney

His interest in wrestling began early in 1977 when he was in eighth grade at Cohasset High. The previous year he had participated in a school wrestling club, where he won his match and the attention of some older boys at the schools. When a varsity team was formed the next year, they asked Sweeney to join.

"In the eighth grade I remember I lost a lot," he said. "I think I won two matches that season. But I had already bought the wrestling shoes, and at that time it was a big expense. So I figured what the heck?"

The following year was more successful for the young athlete and by his junior year Sweeney was named captain of the team. Each year he qualified for competition in the Division tournaments. In his junior year of competition, Sweeney won the sectional title and qualified for the state championship.

Although he was recruited by Springfield and Ithaca colleges, Sweeney decided to take a year off from academics. "Now when I look back on it, I think it was a bad idea. I kind of regret it," he said.

After obtaining an associate degree from Quincy Junior College, Sweeney entered U.Mass. Boston in the fall. He is a physical education/ secondary school major. His ambition is to teach high school physical education.

In the meantime, Sweeney must contemplate his future at Cohasset High. He was recently approached by the wrestling coaches at Rockland High and at Whitman-Hanson High, about the possibility of taking over their jobs next year.

"It's quite an honor that they expressed an interest in me applying for the positions. It actually could be a big move for me," the coach noted. It is Sweeney's goal to one day coach college wrestling. But to do that, he must have experience coaching a large championship team.

"I'm not putting down the kids we have in Cohasset, because we have a lot of talented kids. But because it's such a small school, we may never have a championship team here. It's all a matter of numbers, not talent," he explained.

The decision to leave, he said, would be difficult. He acknowledges the emotional ties he has with the faculty and kids at Cohasset High, but that feeling is mixed with an ambition to move forward.

There are a few people who would be willing to take his place at Cohasset, but Sweeney noted their busy schedules must permit adequate time for practices and meets. "It can get kind of busy," he admitted.

"I'm just happy the other coaches in the division thought about me. They know I'm very happy here, but I guess they respect me enough to consider me for their jobs. It's something I'll have to consider very seriously," he said.

But for the next few weeks, Sweeney and his team of athletes will focus on a winning record in '89.

Little League meetings

A parents' organizational meeting for Cohasset Little League will be held Thursday, Jan. 19 at 7:30 p.m. at the Deer Hill School cafeteria.

The organization, finances and scheduling of the Little League and Pony League will be discussed. There will also be a call for an election of officers.

Dog response hours questioned during budget talks

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Selectmen approved six town budgets Monday night, Jan. 9, including three it had accepted for consideration last week.

But most of the discussion centered on the $7,714 dog officer budget which was taken under advisement.

Executive secretary Greg Doyon was asked to investigate the cost to install a phone for town business at the Hingham home of dog officer William Quigley.

In addition, Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he would find out the cost to replace the nine-year-old dog van which Quigley said cannot pass inspection.

Quigley asked for a 15 percent raise and an increase in his hours from eight to 12 a week.

He said the eight hours are "just not enough."

"There are a lot of problems in town," said Quigley, who explained that his time is divided into returning phone calls, receiving complaints, responding to emergencies from the police department and attending meetings at night.

He also said that he recently completed a year-long, bi-weekly course conducted by Mass. Criminal Justice.

"I think we need some more hours," he said. "Twelve isn't enough, but it's a start."

He requested a salary increase of $3,621 a year to $4,164.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he has had difficulty getting in touch with Quigley.

"There have been a number of times when you've not responded to our requests," he said.

"When we call you, at least call us back," he said.

"There is no problem if the beeper is used correctly," said Quigley, who has been on the job for almost two years.

"You can call the police department or my home."

"I go along with Rocky," said selectman chairman Burt Pratt.

"You respond, but maybe it is 24 hours later."

Quigley said he would like to have the town telephone line moved to his home with a recorder, and to have a desk and file.

"Communication is a problem," agreed Laugelle.

Pratt said that the town has desks and file cabinets in its inventory from which Quigley can choose.

Quigley, who also works 12 hours a week as a Hingham animal officer as well as a special police officer in that town, said that Cohasset's van is in "rough shape."

"It needs a new exhaust system, catalytic converter and is rusted so it fills with rain," said Quigley of the 1981 Dodge which has 80,000 miles.

Quigley said the van has no back windows, and no air conditioning, so that it is unsafe to carry animals in the vehicle from June to September because of the high temperature.

Quigley said that a new van from Natick Ford with air conditioning, lettering and lights would cost about $14,500.

"If the vehicle is in that bad shape, it isn't worth putting more money into it," said Laugelle.

"The van won't pass inspection in Massachusetts," said Quigley.

"It has a rejection sticker on it."

Quigley said he has been using his own car for work.

Laugelle also said that a 15 percent pay increase was too high.

Pratt suggested that Quigley be paid on an hourly basis.

"That would be very hard to budget," said Selectman Martha Gjesteby.

Selectmen also talked with Quigley about a dog incident involving Mrs. Eleanor Sandburg.

Mrs. Sandburg reported to officials that she was walking down South Main St. toward North Scituate when "a very vicious dog came running out of the yard barking and showing his teeth and growling and came right at me.

"He grabbed me by the leg and only the fact that I had heavy slacks on saved me from having the skin broken," she said, "but it did leave deep teeth marks on my leg and my leg is still sore."

Sandburg said that she reported the incident to police, who in turn, called the animal control officer.

"The animal control officer called me for details and then said to me, 'there's nothing I can do because there is no leash law in town; you will just have to change your direction of walking,' " she said.

"She misunderstood," explained Quigley.

He said that he had no luck getting in touch with the dog's owner, and said that Sandburg should change her walking route until he could do so.

Quigley said that the dog's owner was on vacation, and that the animal got out of the yard through a hole in the fence.

He said the owner has agreed to chain the dog in the fenced-in back yard.

"I don't think it's a problem dog," said Quigley.

Selectman James Gallagher said his wife has also been bothered by the dog.

"The dog viciously showed its teeth and scared my wife," said Gallagher, "and she's a dog lover.

"She fended it off with a stick."

"If there are any more problems with the dog, it's time for an instant hearing," said Selectman Cliff Mitman.

Quigley said that most people in town would support a leash law.

Gallagher said he would be happy to support it.

Among the budgets approved by selectmen was $1,072,000 for the fire department, up almost $90,000 from last year.

Fire Chief Daniel Brock explained last week that the largest increase is in the area of salaries.

The board deleted a $6,800 request for a computer which Brock said was needed to provide data, improve permit tracking, organize ambulance billing and training records.

Selectmen agreed this week not to approve requests for computers until a professional survey is done of the town's computer system in the next fiscal year.

Town accountant Mary Matthews was asked to coordinate the effort.

Also approved were:

- Police budget, $735,046. Police Chief Joseph Kealey noted last week that general expenses have been level funded for the eighth consecutive year at a total of $54,425.

He said that three cruisers must be replaced this year at a total of $40,335, and $9,280 is needed to replace the ten year old radios in four cruisers.

- Tree, Park and Cemetery, level funded, $24,823 for cemetery.

Selectmen held out the requested rental of another garage bay at Sestito's pending negotiation of the cost.

- Town Accountant, $89,211.
- Conservation commission, $16,234.
- Council on Aging, $35,154.

Laugelle abstained from voting on the police and tree, park and cemetery budgets because he has relatives in those departments.

around town

□ Congratulations to Joseph and Lynn Durkin on the birth of their daughter, born December 15 at South Shore Hospital. Needless to say, the Durkins and O'Tooles are ecstatic at the thought of another grandchild! Can you imagine what Christmas looked like at the Senior Durkin house this year? We'll bet it was a scene that any artist would have loved to paint, someone like Norman Rockwell. . .

□ Jeff Hartwell hasn't been "around town" this month and with all of the cold weather we've been having, he must be glad of it! He is in Cuernavacu, Mexico studying. Jeff is a sophomore at Colby College and is at the Center for Bi-Lingual Studies, filling his Spanish requirement. He will be there for the month of January. Hope you'll get in some sightseeing Jeff, and tell us all about it!

□ Glad to hear that Al Sencabaugh is feeling so much better. Continue your good work Al, you are a wonderful man that we all adore. . .

□ Ron Beal is all better. He was spotted around town recently, and he was looking grand as always.

□ News from Al Doermatt about, you guessed it, the Cohasset Red Cross Community Bloodmobile. The next Cohasset Community Red Cross Triannual Bloodmobile will be held on Tuesday, Jan. 24, from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m. at the First Parish House, 23 North Main Street. Previous participants will receive a notice by mail and will be contacted by their Group Promoter to make an appointment. New donors are urgently needed. Al extends a special vote of thanks to the 124 donors and the many volunteers who participated in the last Bloodmobile held on Sept. 27, and urges all to keep the appointments that they make this time. All healthy persons, age 17 and over, weighing more than 110 pounds should consider being a part of this most worthy community service. "Enjoy the pleasure that comes with giving the Gift of Life, a pint of blood," says Al. Surprise him with a call, he is a dedicated man that works extremely hard on our town's bloodmobile. If you cannot donate for some reason, at least give him a word of praise and a thank you for all of his hard work.

Local members of the Children's Theatre Workshop are preparing for their Jan. 21, 28 and 29 production at the Woodward School in Quincy. Performance time is 3 p.m. January 21 and 28, and at 7 p.m. January 29. Local performers include: (l to r) Ryan Overbeck, Chris Millburg and Janice Martin, all of Hingham; Heather Canning of Scituate; Hillary Lamp of Cohasset; Jonathan Millburg of Hingham, and Ronnie Nicynski of Cohasset.

□ Here's to another hard-working man, Joe Laugelle. Joe took a fall while he was opening the landfill gate last Sunday, and he was hardly able to move by nightfall. We'll bet the doctor told "Doc" to take it easy, something he doesn't know how to do!

□ Who said they couldn't do it? Well, they are doing an outstanding job, that Skipper hockey team! They are young, they haven't skated together as much as last year's group, they are enthusiastic, they are hard-working and loyal, and they have won their last three games. Go and see them it's great fun!

□ Mike Mahoney was home for the holidays, really looking wonderful! He has a while left in the service, then he will be college bound. At the moment, Harvard is his goal, and that will be wonderful for him. Health and happiness to you Mike, you surely have earned it.

□ And the winners were: 1st prize ($1,000) Tony DiRenzo; 2nd prize ($750) Joseph Durkin; 3rd prize ($500) the Flints; and 4th prize ($250) Dennis Meikleham. They supported the Joseph Osgood School Project Playground, and it sure paid off for them. Remember that the next time the committee comes around looking for your support! It benefits all!

□ Everyone is talking about Greg Nourie, CHS's wrestler who wrestles in the 103 pound division. He won in the Marshfield Holiday Wrestling Tournament, a tournament in which there were almost 250 wrestlers. Cohasset took a fifth place finish out of 19 high schools, a grand finish and one tht all of the boys are proud of. They certainly should be!

□ Speaking of "stars" in Cohasset, add Shirley Laidlaw to the list. She sure is one of the stars of the Senior set, and should be an inspiration to all! She is always on the move, always has a huge smile on her, and is always "where the action is." We applaud you, Shirley, and look up to you.

□ Donald E. Staszko, a pilot for American Airlines has just finished 8 weeks of training leading to certification as a Captain of the European Airbus 310/600r. Prior to going to work for American Airlines 16 years ago, he was a fighter pilot in the U.S.A.F.

□ That's all the news that is fit to print. Please call me with your latest tidbit, its news for all.

Town grants first comprehensive permit disagreed with the chairman's assessment.

"It's Cohasset," he answered. "It's a totally different condominium market than in any other town, such as Hull."

Devin had not read through the entire decision Tuesday night and could not immediately comment on whether Deck Point Inc. would go along with the 34 conditions, or appeal the decision.

Deck Point Inc. has applied for a subsidy through the state Homeownership Opportunity Program (HOP) for the units which will be sold to moderate income families for about $75,000 to $85,000 per unit. The low-income units will be rented either through the Cohasset Housing Authority or Deck Point Inc. The market-rate units will sell for about $200,000 each.

Devin said the earliest date for construction will be May or June. If Deck Point decides to reject the comprehensive permit conditions, it will appeal the decision to the state Housing Appeals Committee. That, he said, would add another six months to a year to the construction time.

"It's an option we have to consider, but at this point, I don't know if we'll do it," the attorney stated.

At the conclusion of the meeting, chairman Putzinger explained how the board struggled with the decision "that people will live there surrounded by Cohasset Heights Ltd., Webb-Norfolk Conveyor and the state DPW. These are not legal impediments, but they are significant market impediments."

The 16 acres proposed for development by Deck Point are located on King Street at Cohasset Hill, adjacent to Webb-Norfolk Conveyor, Seavey Engineering and the Whitney Hill Technology Center, and the commercial landfill, Cohasset Heights. Ltd.

Among the other conditions required by the appeals board are: that affordable units must be included in each of the four phases of construction. The development is to be constructed in four phases, with each phase to contain no fewer than 27 units and no more than 34 units.

A sidewalk must be constructed along the westerly side of Rte. 3A along the entire property and on the easterly side of Rte. 3A to the pedestrian light.

An architect's rendering of The Original Deck Point Plans.

The appeals board is requiring that Deck Point install a manually-activated pedestrian light and a crosswalk on Rte. 3A at the southerly end of the property, to the south of the main entrance to the development.

Deck Point is also required to create a 210-foot by 310-foot "common" open space area in the center of the project, programmed for specific recreational uses. It had been the board's concern that not enough open recreation area was provided for the residents. Deck Point's original plans called for two 150-foot by 70-foot recreational areas.

The applicant is also required to erect a five-foot high fence along the westerly and southerly borders of the development which abuts Webb-Norfolk Conveyor, the DPW site and Cohasset Heights Ltd. The fence is to be buffered on the development side by evergreens, the board stated in its decision.

The appeals board included several conditions to be met regarding the on-site wastewater treatment facility including supervision of the plant by a certified operator, and regularly scheduled monitoring of the facility.

The board reiterated its requirement that the leaching field for the wastewater facility be closed and the surface be landscaped. Deck Point had argued that an open leaching field is better maintained and operated.

An official celebration

Next week we will quietly observe Martin Luther King Jr. Day, a national holiday observed in at least 32 states which has become known more for controversy than celebration.

People say Dr. King was little more than a rabble rouser who upset the peace between the races in America by pointing out, forcibly if necessary, that it was based on inequality.

They say the observance is nothing more than a political gesture made to hush a highly vocal minority by politicians eager to truckle to their voting power.

The prophet is rarely honored in his own time.

But with the presidential candidacy of Jesse Jackson, who knew Dr. King and had walked alongside him in his marches and embraced his ideas, Dr. King's dream has been taken to heart by many who otherwise might not have known of the civil rights leader.

People used to say similar things about George Washington, the father of our country.

His is the only birthday which is now a legal holiday observed in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and the territories.

But when Washington was in his first year as president in 1790, Congress adjourned in honor of his birthday.

And in the following year, there was a parade in Philadelphia on that day.

Six years later, however, the resolution to adjourn was defeated, and Congress behaved as though it was just another legislative day.

Washington's birthday, a contemporary historian wrote, should have been a national holiday were it not that the societies must prominently engaged were entirely composed of Federalists.

"The Democrats came to consider the 22nd of February as a political anniversary, and they abstained from participating in the ceremonies directed by their political opponents."

It was not until 1832, the 100th anniversary of Washington's birth, that the political antagonisms had abated long enough to permit an official celebration throughout the country.

What will it be like in 2029, the 100th anniversary of the birth of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., when the last of the current politcal antagonisms have subsided at last?

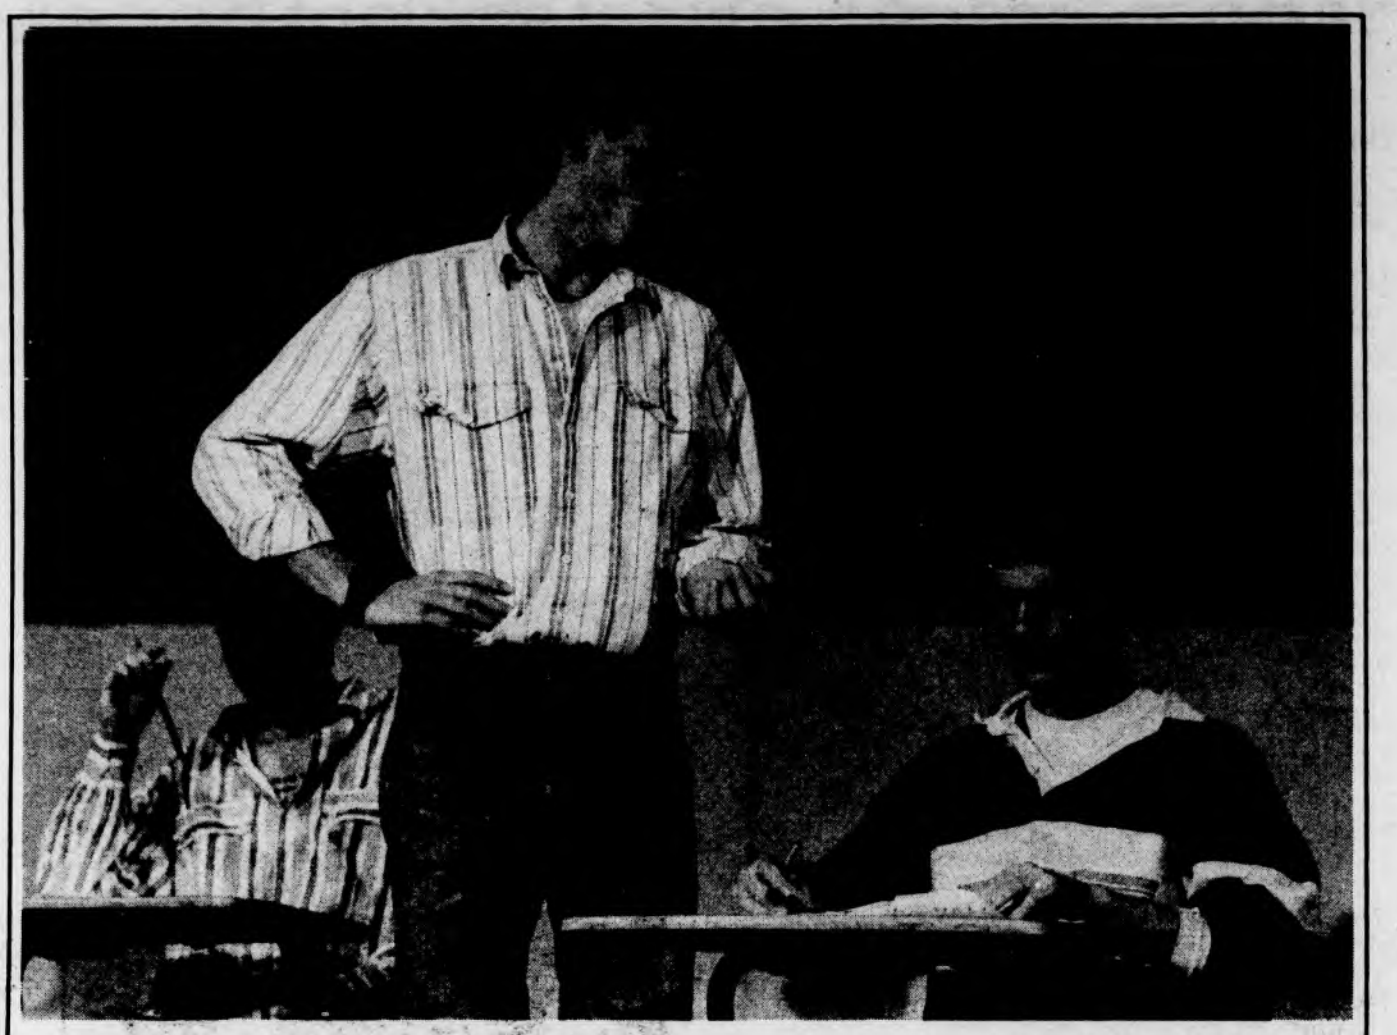
Safeguard our water

To the Editor:

At last Wednesday's Planning Board meeting, the 1985 decision to disapprove Lily Pond Estates 32 acre subdivision bordering Cohasset's water supply was reversed.

The Planning Board was advised by Town Counsel Henderson that they had no other course of action open to them other than to approve the plans as amended including four conditions that Town Engineer Modzalewski needed resolved.



Unfortunately for the town, developers Britt and Rosenberg were able to force their development approval through the findings of the Massachusetts Appellate Court. Given this precedent, the developers must now meet the septic conditions for each of the twelve building lots, and one can only speculate that if the Board of Health puts up the same degree of resistance as did the Planning Board three years ago, they too may have to bow to legal pressure initiated by the developers.

The question of an old cart path winding through the subdivisionand crossing several of the proposed building sites needs to be resolved because the original plans never showed the path and only was included after King Street neighbors told the Planning Board the cart path was still actively used by townspeople.

The greatest concern to the town is protection of our water supply, and we must be convinced that there is not a potential hazard locating septic systems close to Lily Pond. Three years ago, the Water Department agreed that the risk was too great. Selectmen considered taking the land by eminent domain and voted to appraise the land. Certainly these concerns are as important today, particularly since the town has been made aware of potential pollution leaching into Lily Pond from the Cohasset Heights landfill.

All concerned Cohasset residents should be informed of the proceedings at Lily Pond Estates and should attempt to safeguard our precious water supply.

CHS to present two theatre premiers

Two theatre premiers await Cohasset on the evenings of Jan. 19 and 21 when the Drama Workshop presents "Out of Control" and "This is a Test" at Cohasset High School.

"Out of Control" marks the return of a Michael Scanlan play to the Cohasset stage as this soon-to-be-published play is given its Massachusetts premier.

First presented at the Choate Summer Theatre School last year, the play deals with the interrelationship of three teenagers during the year stretching from the fall of 1967 through the fall of 1968. It is a work about love and loyalty as Ben (junior Zach Hochkeppel) finds himself caught up in a difficult love relationship with Robyn (senior Erin Monaghan), a student at a Catholic girls school, and in a disintegrating friendship with Jack (senior Matt Kuhn), who has helped Ben through the difficulty of attempted suicide and institutionalization only to feel that Ben has rejected him because of Jack's attitude toward Robyn.

A nun at the school (senior Allison Reilly) finds herself unable to help either Ben or Robyn. The play takes place against the background of musical hits of the time played by deejay Rockin' Ricki from WROC (senior Jay Staunton) and against the beginnings of reaction against the war in Viet Nam. As with all Scanlan works, the play features the language of real teenagers rather than those of too many popular movies.

Two of the last three years the Drama Workshop has finished high in the placement of finalists in the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival with works written by Scanlan. Three years ago "Candid" took the group to a fifth place finish in the state while last year "Fortress" barely missed being the winner of the competition. Between these two festival productions was sandwiched "What You Will!," an original script by Ron Emmons, the director of past and present Scanlan works. As was the case when "Candid" and "Fortress" were given their premier Cohasset productions, Michael Scanlan will attend the Saturday performance and answer questions about the script following its presentation.

The length of "Out of Control" prohibits its entry into this year's state competition, so the Drama Workshop is putting its trust this year in another work, one which will be previewed for the public in tandem with the Scanlan play.

This comedy entitled "This is a Test" was written by Stephen Gregg and deals with a nightmarish encounter with a test in a social studies class. Is it really happening or is it a nightmare? Anyone who has ever experienced the pressure of a testing situation will find his or her greatest horrors carried to the extreme in this clever and original new comedy. Emmons found the play under rather ironic circumstances last spring when he was invited to watch a production of his play "What You Will!" by a Concord school in the finals of the New Hampshire Drama Festival. Judging the festival was Michael Scanlan, who chose "This is a Test" as the winning play with "What You Will!" being named the runner-up.

Jan. 21, Emmons, Scanlan, and "This is a Test" will be reunited in a different configuration.

Featured in "This is a Test" are seniors Dan Farwell and Jay Staunton, who will alternate in the lead role of Allan with Farwell performing on Thursday and Staunton on Saturday. Allan's teacher will be played by senior Jack Beddows and his mother by Pam Hasse. Students in class will be seniors Erin Monaghan and Paul Froio along with sophomores Jen Plante and Doug Moe. Senior Brian Ormiston, junior Jason Cameron, sophomore Melissa Christoffel and freshman Lynda Hague form an ensemble of characters who distract, taunt, and mock Allan. Sophomore J. Gaston performs as the menacing offstage voice.

The production staff for the Drama Workshop is made up of stage manager Laura Gagliano, lighting operator Sophie Redfield, and sound technician Dan Farwell. Assisting in the creation of props is art instructor Colleen Lucas and in the creation of sound effects and music is instrumental music teacher Colleen Foley.

"Out of Control" and "This is a Test" will be presented at 7 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 19 and at 8 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 21.

Tickets are available for $3 in advance but will sell for $4 at the door. All seats will be reserved.

Further information may be obtained by calling Cohasset High School at 383-6100.

Grant defaults pose VoTech problem

The state defecit will make it tougher for the regional school committee to make ends meet in their budget if grant proposals continue to default. Paul Babcock, school development director, reported to the committee that the Board of Education has stopped funding certain projects.

The regional school was the only one in southeastern Massachusetts to be accepted for a reading educational grant. The school was approved for $25,000 to purchase computers for a reading program for both the Abington and Hanover campuses, but the board informed the school that no state money would be forthcoming in the future.

The school was also denied an anticipated grant for an asbestos management program. It was informed that it was not eligible because the member towns in the school district are above the accepted per capita income to attain funding.

In order to keep the facility in compliance, work may have to proceed, and the school committee will have to take funds from the school budget.

Narrow escape for local student

But her semester abroad in Israel, as well as side trips to Egypt and London, are topics she does enjoy thinking and talking about.

"I chose Israel because several good friends had gone there before and spoke very highly of their semester," said Woodbury, 21, a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Hingham.

"They said what a growing experience it had been.

"I was interested in studying the Bible, and very excited to go."

Before she left last August, she read such books as Exodus and Oh, Jerusalem as well as the Scriptures.

"They really came alive when I went over there," she said.

"The people really do, in a sense, live in the time of Christ.

"They are modernized, but not westernized.

"It was a whole new culture to get used to."

Woodbury attended classes at a university built by Brigham Young University about two years ago on Mt. Scopas, or the Mt. of Olives, in Jerusalem.

She was among a group of 102 students at the university, all Americans.

"No Israelis go there," she said, "not too many people know it is even there.

"Next door is the Hebrew University."

"I took Hebrew class, as well as Near Eastern studies and the Old and New Testament.

"The basic text was the Bible," said Woodbury, who studied about six hours a day during the week.

"The classroom was a tour bus a lot," she said.

"We spent two weeks on the Sea of Galilee. It was really fascinating.

"We stayed on a kibbutz. It was fun.

"We did a lot of studying. They didn't require us to do too much work.

"It was more recreation."

While on the kibbutz, the group had a surprise Thanksgiving dinner.

"The owner made pumpkin pie, turkey and stuffing and potatoes," she said.

"We didn't expect anything.

"They had a huge sign in red, white and blue in the cafeteria."

Woodbury said that Israel, a country about the size of New Jersey, wasn't really what she expected. But then, she didn't know what to expect.

"Jerusalem is a very heavily populated, crowded city," she said.

"It was a shock to see shepherds with flocks.

"The food was a shock. It was very foreign.

"Falafel was really good.

"I loved trying new things over there."

It was also an adjustment seeing all the armed soldiers there, she said.

"At age 18, all girls and boys have to serve in the Israeli Army for three years," she said.

"They are everywhere with rifles. They were friendly and young kids. You got used to it.

"I wasn't afraid."

There really wasn't a middle class in Israel, according to Woodbury.

"Either the people had money or they didn't have anything.

The "old city" in Jerusalem is filled with markets, she said.

"They sell food, clothes, souvenirs, antiques," she said. "It's always packed."

Further out, there was housing and schools, Woodbury said.

The dormitory at the university where she and the other Americans stayed was about three or four miles away. It had 24-hour security.

The students enjoyed a supermarket near the dorms.

But there, as well as other places, they and other customers were frisked before they entered.

"Everywhere you go, they frisk you and check your bags," she said.

"They check for bombs, guns, weapons.

"You got used to it, and it wasn't that big of a deal."

When the students would go into Jerusalem, the Arabs were very friendly, according to Woodbury.

"They would speak English if you didn't know their language," she said.

Residents of the Hebrew section were not quite as friendly, she said, though not unfriendly.

Food in Israel was inexpensive, according to Woodbury.

"Falafel was 50-cents," she said.

But other things, such as toiletries, were expensive.

"It was $10 for a deoderant," said Woodbury. "But I had been warned of that beforehand."

The group spent a week in Egypt, a six-to seven hour drive away.

"It was spectacular," said Woodbury.

"The pyramids were incredible.

"We took sailboats down the Nile River, and rode camels.

"But we were told not drink the water, or eat the fruits and vegetables that were grown there."

The group also went to the Sinai Peninsula and climbed Mt. Sinai.

Because of the intense heat, they climbed the mountain at night and reached the top at sunrise.

"It was tiring, but really fun," she said. "It was where Moses received the 10 Commandments."

Woodbury missed her family quite a bit while in Israel, she said.

She also missed such things as hair salons where she could get her hair cut.

She also missed cold cereal, and found that all the soda in the country is caffeine free.

"Caffeine is banned in Israel," she said.

"They had pizza, but everything is kosher so you couldn't get a pepperoni pizza."

A McDavid restaurant offered hamburgers.

"But they were all kosher," she said.

The Mormon group also had to have their church service on Saturday, the Sabbath, rather than Sunday.

Among the souvenirs Woodbury brought home with her were an olive wood creche and figures, a gold ring with her name written in Hebrew and hand-painted Arab pottery.

On the way home, she and some friends spent a week in London.

"I did Christmas shopping in London," she said. "We went to Harrod's department store and bought Christmas pudding, cookies, fruit cake.

"It was the biggest department store I've ever seen. It was very crowded."

She and her friends also waited in line for eight hours to get tickets for "Phantom of the Opera."

"We got great seats. It was wonderful," she said.

"I had never seen London before, and it was really fun."

Woodbury said she would like to return to Israel some day.

"The Scripture came alive for me," she said.

"I was able to really understand. I could relate to the area where it happened.

"I could place myself in it.

"The picture was painted for me and it came alive."

Resident donates books

We are delighted to announce that the spirit of Christmas is very much alive and well in Cohasset — just ask those of us who work in the school libraries.

This week we received a very generous gift to purchase books for each of the libraries from Anne Vanderweil.

Some of our wish list selections which will soon be on the shelves, thanks to Anne's generosity are the following:

For Osgood Library: two replacement copies of One Fish, Two Fish by Dr. Seuss, a perennial favorite with beginning readers; Island Boy by Barbara Cooney, a beautifully illustrated book depicting the "inderdependence of three generations of life off the New England coast"; Shy Charles by Rosemary Wells in which a simple, rhyming text and expressive watercolors combine with the author's humor and compassion to express the feelings of a very shy mouse; and Where's the Baby? by Pat Hutchins, a captivating book of bright watercolors which is sure to engage the little ones' attention as they turn one riotous page after another.

For Deerfield, at Marge Murphy's request, we have ordered for the reference shelf a badly needed Webster's New Geogrpahical Dictionary and finally for our high school library wish list we've ordered The Cultural Atlas of Japan, an outstanding reference tool we were very much in need of, and Exploring the Titanic by Robert Ballard, another excellent research source, full of paintings, diagrams and reproductions.

Our heartfelt thanks to Mrs. Vanderweil for making all this possible.

Sixth grade news production

Mrs. Cisneros' sixth grade class announces the first production of the Deer Hill News Show which will be shown on the local cable network (Channel 3), Thursday, January 12 at 7:30 p.m.

The whole class was involved in the production which provides real life, hands on experience related to writing styles, an integral part of the sixth grade language arts curriculum.

The students wrote their own news copy, edited their work and typed their final news copy. Editors were in charge of assigning news stories and following up on deadlines. Every attempt was made to give the students the feeling of personal control over their news cast from deciding on news topics, designing their own logo, to the naming of the news show. The students learned to operate the camcorder, edit their results and interview feature presentations.

In the studio, the students operated the T.V. cameras, learned to direct the entire news production and use the computer system to type credits at the end of the production. While the town of Cohasset will see only the four newscasters on camera, the students learned first hand that it takes many supportive services to make the newscasters job look easy.

We would like to bring your attention to the important people who made this video newscast possible.

Editors:

News: Martina Snyder; Features: Ann Dane and Megan Rhodes; Sports: Ryan Freeman; Entertainment: Jonathan Hislop.

Newscasters:

Corinna McMackin, Caitlin O'Leary, Kevin O'Donnell and Jeremiah Stevenson.

Understudies for the newscasters: Ryan Freeman and Ann Dane

Reporters:

Jemilah Afshar, Emily D'Urso, Kendra Grey, Matthew Higgins, Jessica Jenkins, Jeff Littlehale, Corinna McMackin, Kevin O'Donnell, Caitlin O'Leary, Sarena Quemere, Ben Redfield, Dan Silvia and Danny Varisco.

Writers:

Ann Dane, Jonathan Hislop, Brendan Kinchela, Corinna McMackin, Bradley Potolicchio, Megan Rhodes, Jeremiah Stevenson and Dean Volungis.

Camera Operators:

Trevor Cook, Danny Silvia and Dean Volungus.

The All Important Technical Crew:

Emily D'Urso, Jessica Jenkins, Jeff Littlehale, Sarena Quemere, Ben Redfield, Dan Varisco and Kendra Grey.

Set Designers:

Jemilah Afshar, Matthew Higgins, Brendan Kinchla and Jeremiah Stevenson.

Mrs. Cisneros and I would like to thank all the mothers who transported the students to the cable studio and who gave their time during such a busy season. A special thanks should also be given to Bob Belliveau, the liaison from the cable studio, who trained the students in the mechanical aspects of video production and whose enthusiasm for this project enabled us to bring our idea to fruition. We were also lucky to have a volunteer, Mary Greakin, who helped with many of the aspects of video production.

We hope you all enjoy our first video news production. I'm sure that there will be some familiar faces for all of you to pick out.

Grade 7 team reports

During the first school term grade 7 students have been actively involved in achieving the goals presented by a new school, curriculum, and teachers. After a busy September during which students learned of new expectations and became acquainted with new subjects, a field trip to Mt. Monadnock was undertaken. While experiencing New Hampshire's autumnal splendor, every student undertook the challenge of hiking to the peak. Those who reached the top also experienced their first snowfall of the season.

Also, in the second week of October each student received a progress report to help familiarize students with a different grading system and to indicate their average at the mid-point of the term. These reports will be given out half way through each term.

In November scholastic achievement awards were presented to students who earned the highest academic average in each of the subject teacher's classes. The list of recipients follows:

New bank board members

The Board of Directors of Cohasset Savings Bank increased the board to 17 members and elected Mrs. Francis W. Hagerty and Mrs. Charles E. Lynch to the new positions.

Hagerty is vice president of the Hagerty Company in Cohasset, makers of Cohasset Colonials. She was associated with her late husband in the company when it was established 50 years ago, originally to produce boats in kit form.

Upon the death of Mr. Hagerty in 1977 she served as its president and chief executive officer until 1984 when her son, John A. Hagerty, assumed direction of the company as president. Most recently it has been selected by Colonial Williamsburg to interpret selected pieces from their well-known collection. Hagerty holds a degree in education from Wheelock College, and before her marriage taught in the Newton public schools.

Lynch is an attorney on the staff of the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities. Long active in civic affairs, she is a former president of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters and has served on the Cohasset Housing Authority. She is a graduate of the College of New Rochelle and holds a law degree from Suffolk University.

On paper, it was perceived as a Cohasset-Scituate championship final in the resurrected Christmas Holiday Tournament at Scituate High School. But, Cohasset did not live up to its bargain as they were defeated by Snowden (formerly Copley High of Boston), 59-43, in the opening-round contest Dec. 28.

Behind the play of seniors Rodney Gamble and Troy Osgood, Snowden advanced to the championship final.

Gamble, a center, came through with 29 points while Osgood, a guard, scored 13 points and dished out 10 assists.

Despite the defeat, Cohasset got outstanding play from Lincoln Marsac, Jeff Bryant and Jim Reidy.

The Skippers, however, managed to salvage a victory, taking third-place honors with a 75-37 triumph over Medeiros Hall (Braintree) in the consolation game the following night. Cohasset (2-3) was led by Marsac, who scored 19 points for the winners.

In the championship game, despite a 44-point performance (which included six three-pointers) from Gamble, host Scituate captured the tournament with a 65-64 overtime victory over Snowden. Senior forward Chris Comrack led Scituate with 18 points.

Before the tournament, Cohasset bumped into the best pivotman in the state, Bill Curley, and, as a result, the six-foot and nine-inch junior center poured in 26 points and hauled down 12 rebounds to lead Duxbury to a 72-43 victory Dec. 20.

Senior guard Lyle Roberts contributed with 12 points and four steals for Duxbury.

Curley scored 14 in the first half, helping the Green Dragons to a 35-16 at intermission. Roberts scored eight in the first half while teammate Brian Wycall added two three-pointers.

Marsac led all Cohasset scorers with 21 points.

Girls' Basketball

Trailing by eight points, Duxbury rallied to tie, 34-34, then took the lead when senior forward Jen Harrington hit a pair of foul shots with a minute remaining, enabling the Green Dragons to pull out a 38-34 victory over defending state champion Cohasset Dec. 20.

Senior forward Joyce Linder led the Green Dragons (2-1) with nine points and Tara Pepin and Kim Dowd each scored seven.

The Lady Skippers (1-2) who led at the half, 20-18, were paced by Kristin Ellinger's 12 points and Sara Bishop with 11.

Seahawks compete in tournament

Cohasset's Taylor Devin of the Seahawks Mite A youth hockey team joined over 340 kids on 24 teams to compete in the fifteenth annual Santa Claus Tournament, December 26 to 29, at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham.

The Seahawks beat Quincy, Milton and Falmouth to earn a spot against the undefeated South Shore Eagles in the Comet division final. During the first two periods, the Eagles put up a good fight against the high scoring Seahawk forwards. But equally tough on defense, the Seahawk squad prevailed 7-3, to win the championship.

All teams played four games, and every participant received a commemorative patch, and either flight championship or runner-up trophy.

CHS hockey winning streak extends to three games

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Brian Pompeo and Joel Reidy combined to power the Cohasset High School team to a 6-0 victory over winless Scituate (0-7) Jan. 7.

More importantly, the win enables Cohasset (3-4) to extend their victory streak to three straight games.

Pompeo registered three goals, while Reidy made 18 saves to gain his first ever varsity shutout.

"I am very pleased to get my first hockey shutout. However, I am more thrilled in picking up the victory than the shutout," said the junior netminder, who added that the three-game winning streak gives his club confidence heading into a showdown with (7-1) Duxbury at Pilgrim Arena Jan. 14.

"If we continue to play good hockey, we feel that we can compete with them."

Forward Jim Gallagher opened up the Skipper assault with a power-play goal 3:02 into the first period. He tipped in Ned Chase's shot from the point.

Brian Curran closed out the period when Gallagher fed him with a picture-perfect pass. Curran, standing alone on the left side of the grease, lifted the puck over the sprawling Scituate goaltender Jon Dauphnee, 2-0. Mike Luddington also assisted on the tally.

In the second, Pompeo collected two of his three goals. After stealing the puck at center ice, the junior forward, who began the season as a defenseman, finished off the two-on-one break with a wrist shot, 3-0, at 4:39. Gallagher assisted on the goal.

Less than two minutes later, Cohasset capitalized on their second power-play of the game as Pompeo poked in a rebound off a Chase blast from the blue line after Pompeo won the face-off. Defenseman John MacDonald assisted in the score as well.

Cohasset put the game out of reach when Gallagher added his second goal with 27 seconds left in the period. He snapped a backhander underneath Dauphnee, 5-0. Incidentally, Cohasset had just killed a Scituate power-play advantage.

Pompeo recorded his hat trick at the 10:06 mark in the final stanza when his wrist shot from the blue line found its way through a screen in front of the net, 6-0 (power-play goal).

The best scoring opportunity for Scituate occurred when forward Kevin Stanley skated in alone at the 6:06 mark of the third, but Reidy robbed Stanley's breakaway bid, therefore preserving his shutout in the process.

Reidy received solid support from defensemen MacDonald and Chase (three assists).

Sara Bishop scored 13 points and had six steals and Nancy Riley added 12 points, powering Cohasset (4-4) to a 66-19 South Shore League victory over Carver Jan. 6.

The Skippers rolled to a 39-8 halftime lead and cleared the bench in the second half. Heather MacDonald chipped in with 10 points for the Skippers.

The high scorer for Carver (1-7) was Rachel Fries, who netted a mere total of five points.

WRESTLING

Ben Johnson and Tom Giove set the tone with early victories and the Rockland High wrestling team (5-1) easily defeated Cohasset (3-2), 59-11, in SSL action Jan. 5.

The lone two Cohasset victories came from the Froio twins, Paul and Chris. They collected back-to-back wins in the 160 and 171-weight divisions, respectively.

BOYS' BASKETBALL

With junior varsity coach Arnie Rapucci running the ballclub due to the sudden resignation of Eddie Minelli, the Cohasset High varsity basketball team dropped a 55-40 decision to Carver (2-7) Jan. 6.

Carver bolted to a 35-23 halftime edge and a 49-30 advantage after three quarters.

Linc Marsac led the emotion-filled Skippers with 16 points.

Spring soccer openings

There are still some openings for Cohasset spring soccer, town coordinator Larry Schultz has announced.

Despite a record 313 registrations for the town teams, which begin Coastal League play in April, more children can be accommodated, Shultz said. "We've added three teams," said Shultz, "and will field a total of 20 this year."

The age groups looking for more players are: Boys Under 10 (born in 1979, 1980, or 1981) — 10 openings; Boys Under 12 (1978 and 1977) — 2 openings; Boys Under 16 (1973 and 1974) — 9 openings; Boys Under 19 (1970, 1971, and 1972) — 6 openings.

Also: Girls Under 10 (1979, 1980 and 1981) — 12 openings; Girls Under 12 (1977 and 1978) — 4 openings; Girls Under 16 and Under 19 (1970-74) — 4 combined.

Registration forms are available from Shultz, who can be reached at 383-1694. Order forms for Cohasset Soccer sweat shirts and pants are also available, Shultz said.

Cohasset worship...

Sha'aray Shalom program

Congregation Sha'aray Shalom is sponsoring a special program on the impact of the elections, U.S. and Israeli, on American Jews. The program will be held Friday, Jan. 13 at 8 p.m.

The speaker will be State Representative David Cohen (Newton), newly-elected president of the New England American Jewish Congress.

Sha'aray Shalom is located at 1112 Main St. (Rt. 228) in Hingham.

First Parish special program

Sunday, January 15 at 10:30 a.m. the First Parish in Cohasset will have a special service of worship.

Entitled "Songs of Liberation," the service will feature guest musician Cantor Robert Solomon, of Temple Sinai in Sharon, singing and telling about songs that begin with the same Biblical settings that were used in Black Spirituals.

Cantor Solomon is celebrating his tenth year at Temple Sinai, and is a well-known composer and performer on a national scale. As singer and composer for the Jewish rock group Safam, he has appeared before sell-out audiences as nearby as Randolph and Boston, as far away as San Francisco, Florida and Houston.

Although the band's repertoire is Jewish in nature and partially in Hebrew, the jubilant quality of the performers and their music always has the audience singing and dancing along.

One song, "Leaving Mother Russia," which Robbie will perform with the First Parish Choir, was written about the recently released Anatoly Scharansky and has been sung at refusenik rallies everywhere.

First Parish services

Rev. Edward T. Atkinson, Minister, Parish House (617) 383-1100, 23 North Main Street.

PARISH NEWS: Parish Committee Meeting Change: The Parish Committee will meet Thursday, Jan. 19, not Tuesday, Jan. 17.

BELL RINGERS: We will begin ringing on Sunday, January 22 after church at 12:00, in preparation for a Spring ring (or sooner!). Extra work in sight reading for new ringers and maybe some change ringing, too!

Second Congregational Church

Minister: Gary A. Ritts, Office Phone: 383-0345; Secretary: Muriel Wheelwright, Parsonage Phone: 383-1422; Office Hours: Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to noon.

THANK YOU NOTE for the beautiful (anonymously donated) arrangement of red roses on the altar for Christmas Day, presented to Gary's mother in Ohio.

CARILLON TO BE RENOVATED

A special and exciting project in the coming year will be the renovation of the carillon here at St. Stephen's. It is an instrument which is distinctive of Cohasset and in a real sense belongs to all New England.

It was originally given in 1924 by Mrs. Hugh Bancroft in memory of her mother, Jessie M. Barron. It was the country's largest carillon at that time. The renovation affords the opportunity for all of us who wish, to contribute to this unique and beautiful musical instrument in honor of our loved ones.

The renovation will consist of replacing the upper range of bells and the playing mechanism so that the bells will be more in tune with each other and may be played with a finer touch artistically.

The Vestry's renovation committee consists of John Mullett, Chairman, George Fowle, Roger Nast, Sally Slade Warner, and the Rector. A brochure describing the renovation in more detail will be sent to you soon, as well as to the town and to carillonneurs nationally.

"PLANET OF THE YEAR" — FORUM

An Adult Education Forum will be offered on Sunday, Jan. 15 at 3 p.m. to discuss issues of the environment from a Christian perspective. Child care will be available. Time magazine has put the planet earth on its cover. The Boston Globe recently observed: "Suddenly, events like the floods in Bangladesh, the drought in the Midwest and the appearance of hypodermic needles on East Coast beaches no longer were seen as isolated incidents, but rather as disparate symptoms of a sick planet." Discuss what our faith has to say about this earth on which we live.

ENQUIRERS' CLASS TO START

An Enquirers' Class taught by the Rector for adults will begin on Thursday, Jan. 19 at 7:30 p.m. The object of this class is to answer your questions about the Episcopal Church and give a review of how we as Episcopalians give expression to our faith in God. The class will meet on Thursdays, January 19, 26, February 2, 9, 16 and March 2.

Those at the end of the course wishing to be confirmed, or received into the Episcopal Church, or who wish to reaffirm their faith may do so when the bishop visits us on Sunday, March 5. Confirmation is a public reaffirmation of the promises we made or which were made for us at baptism, and a strengthening of our Spirit that we may carry them out.

CONFIRMATION CLASS

A Confirmation Class for those in Junior and Senior High will begin Sunday, Jan. 29 at 4 p.m. The course will be taught by the Rector, and will explore different aspects of our faith. The course will continue February 5, 12, and 26. There will be an overnight at the church on March 3. Confirmation will take place on Sunday, March 5.

RELIEF TO ARMENIA

The Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief is a most effective way to send much needed help to earthquake victims in Armenia. This fund of the Episcopal Church is currently involved in a Focus on Hunger Campaign to raise two million dollars to alleviate the hunger of children and their parents.

If you would like to help those devastated by the terrible earthquake in Armenia, you may send your contribution to: The Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief, G.P.O. Box 5578, New York, NY 10087-5578.

ANNUAL MEETING JAN. 22

The Annual Meeting of St. Stephen's parish will take place on Sunday, Jan. 22 after the 10 a.m. service. Committee chairpeople are asked to have their reports in to the office by January 6 so that the annual report of the parish may be made available to interested parishioners on the Sunday prior to the meeting.

The meeting will entail a hearing of these reports, the election of the officers of the parish, and a delicious brunch put on by the Fellowship Committee. You won't want to miss it.

Eastern Edison Rate Hike

The State Dept. of Public Utilities recently reduced Eastern Edison Company's proposed 6.2 percent rate increase to 4.6 percent.

As a result of today's decision, the average monthly bill for a residential customer (non-heating) would increase by $2.35. For residential heating customers the estimated monthy increase will be $9.15.

The State Department also ordered changes to the company's discount rate for low-income customers, now limited to recipients of Supplemental Security Income (SSI.)

The new rate will allow a 35 percent discount on all usage charges for customers receiving not only SSI, but also Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), Medicaid, Food Stamps and General Relief.

Eastern Edison received a rate increase in 1984.

Murder Mystery Night at the Velvet Room

If you've been wanting to go on one of those weekend murder mysteries but couldn't quite fit it into your budget, now's your chance to enjoy a one-night capsule version.

On Saturday evening, Feb. 11, the Cohasset Dramatic Club will host a Murder Mystery Night at the Velvet Room speakeasy on Stagecoach Way (formerly the Greenhouse Restaurant and site of their smash hit, "Sugar Babies").

The setting is the 1930's and this swank joint is frequented by gangsters in striped suits and gun molls in boas.

You can expect to meet our crooked Mayor Curly Black, Stella Stiletto, Shutterbug Sims, South Side Boss Dom Perignon and North Side Boss Dom Marconi to name just a few. Bugsy, the Dom's bodyguard will be frisking you's hoods at the door and all weapons must be left outside.

A secret password will admit you into the back room gaming tables for high stakes and, as usual, Silkie Smoke will be singing at the piano bar.

All guests will come in costume and remain in character throughout the evening. A few weeks prior to the opening you will receive a kit containing all the character information, instructions, costume ideas, props, clues, play money and accessories you need in order to participate.

You can play your role as sedately or outrageously as you wish. There is no script to memorize, no pressure to perform, and lots of room to improvise your role.

One of our guests will be bumped off and it just could be you! An investigation will take place under the direction of a world famous detective and all guests get to live out their Miss Marple and Sherlock Holmes fantasies.

So dust off your magnifying glasses and get cracking.

This is a one-night-only event and we must limit it to the first 100 reservations, so please act now.

Remember, lots of people were turned away from "Sugar Babies" because they didn't act soon enough. Don't let it happen to you this time! This is a great opportunity for an outrageous evening of intrigue in what could otherwise be a long and boring winter.

This event is being sponsored as a fundraiser to help the dramatic club pay for the lease of its new clubhouse. (By the way, this makes a great gift for Valentine's Day!)

For reservations, mail $25 per person to the Cohasset Dramatic Club, P.O. Box 225, Cohasset, MA 02025. Include the name, address and phone number of each participant. You will receive your kit in the mail by the end of January. For more information, call Bonnie Haley at 545-6485.

Watercolor classes

The Cohasset Senior Center will be offering a 10-week course in watercolor painting, on Thursdays from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. beginning January 19.

The course is open to all residents at $24, and non-residents at $36. All ages, regardless of ability or previous experience, may join.

The instructor will be Sister Veronica Julie, who has taught various approaches to creative paintings throughout the South Shore. Her methods and techniques include use of materials, brush strokes, and washes or glazes in class.

Call the Cohasset Council on Aging office at 383-9112 to register.

Celestial marriage sermon

The subject of the sermon at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be: "Do you have grounds for a Celestial marriage?"

Bishop Bradley K. Johnson has invited Mark and Kristina Koopman, members of the congregation, to speak on this subject. The family worship hour begins at 9 a.m. Visitors are always welcome.

Pack 37 Cub Scout newsletter. . .

It was so nice to see Pack 38's Christmas spirit at the Cohasset Christmas Fair on the Common. The den's cooked, baked and made many tasty cookies, fudge, and goodies or made Christmas decorations. Many thanks to our den leaders and assistants who helped their scouts with their donations.

The Thanksgiving food collection was given to Maryanne Hansen at the Social Service League of Cohasset.

The Merry Christmas tree was generously donated by Tom Sinclair, who has his tree sales at the Davenport's Florist on Route 3A. This year our tree had its first decorations made by Troop 28 Boy Scouts.

The Christmas Party was hosted by Kate Caldwell and Beth Christoffel. Our welcome guests were the Tiger Cubs: Ethan Begley, Robert Butman, Robert Cunningham, Brian Hurley, J.B. Nohe, Ryan O'Hart, Christopher Pratt, Jamie Simons, Alexis Mincolla, and Eric Hanian.

The Christmas food collection was donated to Cohasset's Social Service League. The toys for Christmas Gifts were donated to the Home for Little Wanderers by Kate Caldwell.

One of our newest members, Nicholas Herzog, has been a busy scout. He earned his Bobcat. Congratulations!

Jan. 15, Sunday — Committee meeting at the Parish House 7-8 p.m. Den leaders, Blue and Gold members and parents invited;

Jan. 18, Wednesday — Pack meeting, 7 - 8 p.m., Deer Hill School;

Jan. 20-22 — Klondike Derby. Webelos invited to attend this Boy Scout event. Boston Council Camp Sayre Park, Blue Hills. See Bestick for more info;

Jan. 26 — Council dinner at Lantana in Randolph ($18.50 per person). Begins at 6:30 p.m. All adult Scouteer, spouses and friends of Scouting are encouraged to attend this annual event. Call Linda Farrag.

FEBRUARY 12 is The Annual Blue and Gold Dinner at the Cohasset High School. All Cub Scouts should try to complete all their achievements to earn their badge: Wolf, Bear or Webelo. Our den leaders will be busy preparing for the dinner by helping the Scouts make centerpieces, placemats etc. The parents are needed to give their time to their Cub to help the Cub earn the achievements.

This annual Dinner is for the Cubs and their families to honor the Cubs, leaders and other Scouting members for their time, and dedication to Pack 38.

Nate Caldwell, Dennis Conway, Hazel Edmonds and Linda Farrag will be organizing the dinner. We would welcome others to help with suggestions and ideas to make this a fun Blue and Gold.

Post offices closed Jan. 16

All post offices will be closed and there will be no regular mail delivery on Monday, Jan. 16, in observance of Martin Luther King, Jr. Day.

In keeping with postal policy, Special Delivery and Express Mail will be delivered on the holiday. Collection boxes will be picked up according to holiday schedules; in Boston, there will be additional collections beginning at 4:00 p.m. to accommodate businesses open on the holiday.

Customers are reminded that 24-hour service, seven days a week, is available at Self-Service Postal Centers located in the lobby of the Boston General Mail Facility, 25 Dorchester Avenue, Boston and at the Middlesex-Essex General Mail Facility, 463 Washington Street, Woburn.

Barrow campaign is put on hold

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Local elections are rarely dull in Cohasset, and this year may be no exception.

The first person to take out nomination papers for the office of selectmen has forfeited them to the town clerk.

Richard Barrow, a sergeant in the Cohasset Police Department, was informed last week that according to his department's regulations, he must take a leave of absence if he campaigns for selectman.

Barrow does not intend to take that leave of absence, and has challenged the regulations, saying they have never been adopted by the Cohasset police union.

In an effort to quickly clarify the situation, Barrow returned the unsigned nomination papers to the town clerk's office. He has obtained an attorney through the police union, and he will discuss the matter with selectmen Monday night.

"I'd call this an emergency situation," Barrow told selectmen Tuesday night. "I have a problem here."

Last week, Barrow asked Town Counsel Richard Henderson for an opinion whether the police sergeant could seek public office.

According to Atty. Henderson, it is "perfectly legal" under the state's Conflict of Interest statute for a police officer to run for public office. Once that employee is elected, he must forfeit one of the salaries he receives and not vote on any Selectmen chairman Burt Pratt relaxes at his Ripley Road home with his prized possessions dating back to the Big Band era.

Being a selectman has ups and downs for Pratt

Selectman chairman Burt Pratt is a "townie."

"Do you know the definition of a townie?" asked Pratt during an interview at his Ripely Rd. home.

"A townie is one who was born here but never wanted to live anywhere else.

"There is only one exception," he said, "and that is to leave for military service.

"I'm a townie," said Pratt. "My roots are here.

"I was born next door on the second floor.

"You can see I haven't come too far," he joked, "I moved about 100 feet."

Pratt, 69, and his wife, Helen, live in a home which was remodeled from a barn. They are the parents of a son, Peter, 33, who is in charge of telecommunications for Somerville, and a daughter, Joy, 23, who is in public relations.

Pratt was one of eight children in a family which dates back to Plymouth.

After graduating from high school, he went to work at the Cohasset Savings Bank for five years.

In 1937, "There wasn't much money around for college," said Pratt.

After three years in the Army during World War II, including two years in Europe, he returned home and began working as a correspondent for The Patriot Ledger in the late 1940's and early 1950's.

"I had written a lot in the army," explained Pratt.

"And when I came home, I found that a lot of people had saved my letters, they liked the way I explained things."

He covered Cohasset and Scituate for the Ledger, and also contributed to the Cohasset Cottager, now part of South Shore News.

"There was no money in it, but it was good experience," he said.

Pratt also met his wife while covering swim meets at Cohasset Harbor.

"She came down as a Red Cross swimming instructor," said Pratt.

The carillon in St. Stephen's Church will be undergoing major renovations with donations made by church members and the public.

A 65-year tradition undergoes change

Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

During the 1930's, crowds of up to 2,500 people would gather on Cohasset Common for summer concerts by the Carillon at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave.

And even though the crowds may not have stayed quite that large, the bells have remained a popular tradition for 65 years.

To make sure that the tradition continues, the carillon will undergo renovation this year with funds to be solicited from church members and town residents.

The renovation will make the Cohasset Carillon the largest in number of bells, 57, in New England, according to the Rev. E. Clifford Cutler, St. Stephen's rector for the past four years.

"It will also improve the quality of the sound" he said.

"The bells were out of tune," said Rev. Cutler, "and a new mechanism will give more control (in playing them)."

"We will also add six new bells to bring it to concert pitch."

When all the work is completed, the ringing of the bells will last longer, according to Rev. Cutler.

"The new bells will resonate a lot more clearly," he added.

Mrs. Jane W. Bancroft gave a carillon of 23 bells to St. Stephen's in memory of her mother, Jessie M. Barron, in 1924. It was among the first installed in America.

Within a year, 20 additional bells were presented by Mrs. Bancroft, making the Cohasset Carillon the largest American carillon of its day.

"From the earliest days, they were called the Cohasset Carillons, not Stephen's."

The Sunday concerts in the summer, which are still held, drew crowds from near and far.

Who's going to run?

Sen. William B. Golden has not quite announced for lieutenant governor in the 1990 election but already at least three South Shore residents are giving guarded thought to succeeding him in the State Senate.

"I'm exploring the possibility," said Democrat Brian J. McDonald, who has just started his second three-year term on the Weymouth Board of Selectmen. "But I'm not going to make a decision until I talk to some friends and my family, that sort of thing."

"I'm interested," said Republican Christy Mihos of Cohasset, owner of Christy's Markets. "But it's not set in stone. It's something I've been considering for a long time. The only thing that will weigh heavily on my decision is the possible effect on my family."

Even Rep. Robert B. Ambler, who has represented Weymouth in the State Legislature for 24 years, says he has felt a stirring of interest.

"I'm not retiring," said the 63-year-old Ambler. "My interest now is seeking reelection in 1990. But I think I'm going to take a good hard look at the Senate before I make a final decision."

Nominations available

Nomination papers for the April 8 town election are now available at the town clerk's office.

The last day for candidates to obtain nomination papers will be Thursday, Feb. 23, until 5 p.m.

All nomination papers shall be submitted to the registrars of voters for certification of names and addresses on or before Monday, Feb. 27, until 5 p.m. at the town clerk's office.

Positions that will be available for nomination are as follows: Selectmen, two positions for three years each; Assessor, one position for three years; School Committee, two positions for three years each; Trustees of Paul Pratt Memorial Library, three positions for three years each; Board of Health, one position for three years; Planning Board, one position for five years; Water Commission, one position for three years; Sewer Commission, one position for three years; Recreation Commission, one position for five years; Cohasset Housing Authority, one position for five years.

Fifty signatures are needed to have a name placed on a ballot. Campaign forms must be filled out.

Chamber award nominations

Ballots are available for the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce's fourth annual Forrest E. King Award. They will be mailed to members.

The award, named for the late Forrest E. King, longtime proprietor of King Jewelers in Cushing Plaza, is presented annually to the chamber member who has demonstrated during the year the highest standards of business ethics, management, employee and public relations and civic responsibility consistant with the goals of the Chamber of Commerce and whose actions have reflected favorably upon the membership and to the credit of the member, their business organization and the Cohasset community.

This year's three nominees are Joanne Winters, Leo Fiore and Robert Davenport.

Winters is leaving Hogo's after twenty three years for a new challenge. Her nomination for the King Award recognizes her years of personal dedication to a very public job where she has been the supreme conductor of the town's public and private events.

Davenport, a life-long Cohasset resident has been involved in the florist/nursery business for over twenty five years. He and his wife, Barbara, own and operate Elena Sestito Florists, located on Route 3A in Cohasset with a second shop in Hingham, on Station Street.

Fiore is the owner of the Exxon station on Route 3A in Cohasset, the friendliest station in town. This year Leo celebrates twenty five years in the business. . .A fitting time in his life to be nominated for the King Award.

The award presentation will be made at a dinner on February 15 at Kimball's By The Sea. The board of directors urges all members to cast their ballots and join in the celebration at Kimball's.

Selectmen's action

Selectmen took the following action at their meeting Tuesday, Jan. 17, at Town Hall:

• Granted a one day alcoholic beverage license to the Cohasset Dramatic Club for a dinner party for members Saturday, Feb. 11, 8 p.m. to midnight, at 8 Stagecoach Way.

A representative of the club said that the money raised would go towards operating expenses.

• Appointed Jacqueline Moores of Elm St. and Edmund J. Bielecki of Jerusalem Rd. to the Animal Control Study Committee.

• Appointed Richard Senechal of Fairoaks Lane to the Housing Partnership Committee.

• Postponed any action on rental of additional garage bays by the tree and park department.

• Awarded the report and warrant bid to Athol Press Inc.

• Voted 3 to 1 to write a letter of thanks to the Zoning Board of Appeals for their work on the Deck Point proposal which was recently granted a comprehensive permit.

"It was a very well written decision," said selectman Martha Gjesteby.

She said that the chairman, Myrna Putziger put in over 100 hours on the written decision.

Selectman chairman Burt Pratt was opposed.

"It was a disjointed, disoriented and hard to understand report," he said.

• Learned that a tax problem is holding up transfer of the license for Central Market.

• Congratulated selectman James Gallagher on the birth of a granddaughter, Heather Colleen.

Burning permits available

Burning of materials such as brush, cane, driftwood and forestry debris from other than commercial or industrial land clearing operations is allowed with a permit, according to Fire Chief Daniel Brock.

Burning is allowed Jan. 15 to May 1 under the following conditions:

• It must be at least 75 feet from all dwellings;

• Take place between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.,

• Be located on land closest to the source of material to be burned.

"While burning, an adult must attend the fire until completely extinguished," said Brock.

"They must have available a water supply, such as a pressurized water pump can or hose, and shovels or rakes for controlling the fire," he said.

Permits may be obtained by calling the Fire Department at 383-0616, between 9:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. on the day you wish to burn.

"SHE SAID IT'S HER LIFE PRESERVER IN CASE HER SHIP DOESN'T COME IN."

"Mother always said to save for a rainy day," my customer remarked. "But I'm saving for where the sun shines—all the time."

Her youngest child was out of college. And now it was time to start saving up a little extra for retirement.

She opened our new Horizon passbook savings account. "I want a passbook I can hold and watch grow."

I told her about our high rate. "That's a bonus," she said. "If I play my cards right, all I'm going to need is a towel and a bathing suit."

Some local interest in Sen. Golden's seat

Two other possible candidates, Democratic Rep. Frank Hynes of Marshfield and Republican Rep. Mary Jeannette Murray of Cohasset, contacted by The Mariner said they are not really interested in a Senate run.

The Norfolk and Plymouth District, reading north to south along the shore, includes the towns of Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury.

Golden's successor, when the three-term senator does bow out to run for higher office, most likely will be a Democrat from Weymouth since the district is largely Democratic and that town has 39% of its population and 35% of the registered vote.

McDonald, a longtime Golden supporter and chairman of the South Shore Coalition which includes all the district towns, says he is in no hurry to announce his intentions.

"Bill hasn't actually announced for lieutenant governor yet," he said, "although he has sent out some very strong signals. But I talked to Bill and I told him I was considering a run if and when he ran for lieutenant governor.

"I have no target date for a decision. The election is nearly two years away and two years is an awfully long time to be engaged in a political campaign. I'm going to continue to think about it and consider the strain of a campaign on myself and my family."

McDonald, who works for the State Department of Revenue, has a wife, Libby, who is a lawyer. They have no children.

Mihos, who has never run for public office but has served on several Cohasset town committees, said he has been thinking about running because public service appeals to him.

"It appeals to everybody," he said. "I feel a sort of frustration with the way state government is going. Republicans are outgunned and outmanned. I'd like to serve in their ranks.

"But there are family considerations. I have a pretty thick skin. I would have to talk to my wife and little children about different issues before I make a decision."

Mihos and his wife have a son, 4, and a daughter, 7.

Ambler, who was a member of the House leadership until George Keverian replaced Thomas McGee as speaker, said he has had friends call and ask him to take a look at running for the Senate.

"I looked at a run for the Senate twice before," he said, "and I always declined because I was happy in the House. The speaker change could give me a reason to change my mind.

"I've never represented any of those towns except Weymouth but, as a business agent in the union movement, I have a good base in every area so I don't want to shut the door on any possibility."

Although his children are grown, Ambler said his family is still a consideration.

"My wife has no problems with the state rep's job," he said, "but it might be different if I had to start going to meetings in Duxbury."

McDonald said recent history has indicated the importance of Weymouth in the district. The last two senators, Golden and Allan McKinnon, now chairman of the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority, have come from that town.

"Weymouth is the biggest community in the district and a solid Weymouth candidacy is a good base to begin with," said McDonald. "But there are a number of very qualified people thinking of running. Just as Golden captured the imagination of a lot of people, maybe someone else could do the same thing."

Murray says she thinks the dominance of Weymouth may be overrated.

"People have said that the senator has to come out of Weymouth," she said, "but Bill Weeks, a Republican, disposed of that theory when he was elected twice in the early 70s."

Murray, whose representative district covers Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, said she considered running for the Senate in 1984 when McKinnon bowed out but her husband, Phil, talked her out of it.

"A lot of people were pushing me," she said, "but Phil said I would try to serve the seven towns in the same way I serve three now. He said, 'If I thought you could change I'd push you too.' Phil was right. I like what I do."

Hynes, who is just starting his fourth two-year term representing Marshfield and Scituate in the House, said he too is "very content with my present job."

"The House is the place where I feel I can do the most for the people of Marshfield and Scituate," he said. "The Senate is the place where people with political ambition choose to run for higher office. It's not as demanding in time as representative."

Dealer license violations resolved

Two alleged license violations by automobile dealers were resolved at the selectmen meeting Tuesday night, Jan. 17.

The board voted to have Cohasset Imports, Inc. 508 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, keep to its 20 car limit to the best of its ability.

Atty. Charles Humphreys said that his client, Peter Capozzoli, was before the board for alleged violation of a 20 car limit.

"But the business has been operated substantially in compliance with the 20-car limit in the four years it has been there," he said.

Humphreys said that the building inspector had been sent to the business in excess of 20 times by selectmen and others.

"He found no violations, except for two times," said Humphreys. He said that on one occasion there was one extra car, on another occasion, two extra cars.

"That doesn't amount to anything," said Humphreys.

"He has never had more that 20 cars for sale on the lot.

"There are reasons that secondary cars are there."

Humphreys said that some cars may be there to have work done on them, and others may have been taken in trade but are not ready for sale.

"I think it (the hearing) is harassment if you want to know the truth," he said.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said that he has received complaints of too many cars on the lot.

"People complain to me about it," he said.

"There have been 25, 26, 30 cars there," said Laugelle.

"You have to have cars coming and going to operate," said Capozzoli.

"I count cars morning, noon and night."

Humphreys suggested that his client submit a business plan with areas designated for the cars.

"There is a question about what the cars are there for, and which come under the 20 car limit," he said.

"It gives the impression that he is a chronic violator, but there is no question he has substantially complied."

"I think you've satisfied me that you have tried," said Selectman Martha Gjesteby.

"I haven't had any complaints," said Selectman James Gallagher.

"I have," said Selectman Chairman Burt Pratt.

Laugelle made the motion to resolve the matter.

The board also voted to accept a report from Robert Guarino regarding removal of tanks from Autohaus, Inc., 742 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

Guarino said that removal of the tanks would begin within a few weeks, but not later than March 15.

Completion will be by April 12, he said.

DISTANT RELATIONS

To understand the causes and treatment of back pain, the patient must realize that his back problems are not necessarily isolated from the rest of his body. On the contrary, the back, as the center of the body, can be affected by muscles and joints that seem nowhere near it. The spine is made up of thirty bones (vertebrae) aligned in three flexible curves: cervical (neck), thoracic (middle back), and lumbar (lower back). The key to a healthy back is to ensure that these three natural curves are in balanced alignment when a person sits, stands, lies down, or moves. The back's balancing act is made possible by strong, flexible back, abdominal, hip, and leg muscles which support the spine. This is why the doctor of chiropractic pays attention to seemingly unrelated joints, muscles, and bones of the body when treating back problems.

At SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC we often see patients who have been on pain pills, muscle relaxants, been to see their family doctor, and only after long periods of suffering, finally come to us. Many would have come sooner, if they knew about the value of chiropractic. We present this weekly column so that we can educate the public about chiropractic. We sincerely hope you enjoy reading it. Give chiropractic a try and see just what it can do for you. We are located at 80 Front St., Scituate Harbor, 545-7388. Early morning and late evening appointments accepted. Most insurance plans accepted as well as Worker's Compensation cases. MasterCard and Visa honored.

Barrow campaign on hold . . .

matters pertaining to the police department.

But that officer, Henderson said, must also abide by the rules and regulations of the police department.

In 1983, Henderson explained to selectmen Tuesday night, the board of selectmen approved a revised set of police department regulations.

And one section of those rules, he said, prohibits a police officer from campaigning for public office unless he takes a leave of absence from his job.

At Tuesday night's selectmen's meeting, Barrow asked for a continuance of the matter until he is represented by an attorney. Barrow said he would return Monday night, Jan. 23 with his union attorney. Selectmen granted that request.

At Tuesday night's meeting, Atty. Henderson explained that under the 1983 revised police department regulations, a police officer must go on leave from the day he files nomination papers, until election day. If he is elected or defeated, the officer may then be reinstated, he said.

"The question is whether those regulations have been validly enforced," Henderson said.

In researching the case, Atty. Henderson discovered that the regulations revised by former Chief John DeBassio were adopted by selectmen in March, 1983. Those regulations were turned over to labor counsels for the town and the police union. The union, he noted, objected that the rules were never properly accepted by the membership and a grievance was filed. There is correspondence that suggests that the grievance was withdrawn "and therefore the regulations presumably were accepted," Henderson stated.

Police Officer Paul Laugelle, president of the union in 1983, said those regulations were never accepted or voted upon by the union. There were several issues within the new regulations that were unacceptable to the members. "A grievance was never filed by the union regarding the regulations," he added. "A grievance can only be filed against the contract. The regulations are not part of the contract."

Because the 1983 revised regulations were not accepted, the union maintains the 1976 regulations are still in effect. "And nowhere in those regulations does it say a police officer has to take a leave of absence if he campaigns for public office," Laugelle said.

The former union president also noted that department rules must be filed within 10 days of acceptance by the union. "There's no record of those rules," Laugelle said.

"Personally, I'd like to know why this issue is coming up now. Sgt. Barrow has been an elected official (on the recreation commission) for 15 years."

Town Clerk Frances Marks called the state elections commission this week and asked what course she should follow. Marks was told to abide by the advice of town counsel, who said the officer must adhere to the department regulations. In the meantime, Marks has accepted Barrow's returned nomination papers.

At Tuesday night's meeting, Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she had never seen a copy of those 1983 revised department rules. "Has the union ever accepted them?" she asked town counsel.

"The two parties (the union and the town) reached some agreement, and the grievance was withdrawn," he answered, explaining that correspondence he received from the selectmen's office indicates the union's objection to the regulations was withdrawn.

That correspondence, according to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon, was from the Labor Relations Commission "acting as an intermediary between the two sides."

Barrow asked for a continuance of Tuesday night's meeting, saying "The chief got a call to suspend me. I'm just trying to cover my tracks."

Selectman Gjesteby said she would "hate to deny the Constitutional right to run for public office just because we can't ascertain the right case. In a small town we must be careful not to deny someone his right to run for public office. Democracy is so powerful."

Cohasset's famed carillon to undergo repairs

Four years ago, when Rev. Cutler told his mother-in-law that he would be coming to St. Stephen's, she recognized it as the "church of the bells."

"When she was a girl 50 years ago, she would come from Lebanon, N.H., just to hear the bells," said Rev. Cutler.

He said that this summer was a short season, just five recitals.

"The one-hour concerts are held Sundays at 6 p.m. and people are encouraged to bring a picnic supper," he said.

The carillon plays everything from classical music to show tunes to ecclesiastical music, according to Rev. Cutler.

"I like Easter music," he said, "and rag time like Scott Joplin."

In addition to the summer concerts, the bells are played for town events, the village fair, South Shore Art Festival, historical society and chamber of commerce events, and throughout the Christmas season.

"They are also played Sundays before worship, and at weddings and funerals," he said.

After the carillon is renovated, speakers may be installed inside the church, Rev. Cutler said.

"When you are in the church, you can't hear them," he said.

The carillon is played from a specially constructed keyboard located one floor below the belfry.

When a key or pedal is pressed, a direct connection is made with the clapper which strikes the bell.

The bells do not move and there is no electrical assistance.

Sally Slade Warner is a carillonneur at St. Stephen's and at Phillips Academy, Andover.

She studied in Cohasset with Earl Chamberlain, with Piet van den Broek in Belgium, and with Milford Myhre at the Bok Tower in Lake Wales, Florida.

Mary Kennedy of Cohasset also plays the carillon, according to Rev. Cutler.

The bells will be renovated by John Taylor & Co., Bellfounders,in Leicestershire, England, he said.

The three smallest bells have already been shipped, according to Rev. Cutler. They will be melted in with the new bells.

"We'll leave the rest intact until mid-July," he said.

"Then they'll be taken out."

"The remaining steel work will be repainted and refurbished."

"The bells and support system will be back by the end of the year."

The renovation work will cost a "sizeable amount" according to Rev. Cutler. Letters were recently mailed to residents inviting donations. John Mullett is chairman of the Cohasset Carillon Renovation.

"We want to encourage people to give whatever they can," said Rev. Cutler.

"Donations of any size will be welcome."

The names of everyone who donates will be listed in a book of remembrance to be displayed nearby, he said.

In addition, bells may be donated for $1,000 to $2,000. The names of loved ones in whose honor the new bells are given will be engraved on a brass plaque at the foot of the bell tower.

For a larger donation, the name of a loved one can be inscribed on one of the 13 largest bells, he said. Deadline for submitting such names is Feb. 17.

"I'm sure the project will be completed and we will have sufficient funds to do it," said Rev. Cutler, who stressed community involvement in the project.

"It's an opportunity for people to feel part of the carillon, to widen the community family," he said.

More information on donations is available by contacting Rev. Cutler or Mullett at 383-1083.

Members of St. Stephen's first started thinking about modernizing the carillon about two years ago, according to Rev. Cutler.

"We had a study of the carillon made by Richard Strauss of Albany, N.Y.

"He said that the mechanism could be much more responsive and that some of the bells were out of tune."

(See page 13)

Pratt enjoys being selectman

They were married in 1953.

He spent seven years working part time on the Narrative History of Cohasset, Volume II, a 300-page book published under the auspices of the Committee on Town History in 1956.

"It's still sold by the town treasurer's office," said Pratt, who was paid $700 for the job.

"I feel it's stood the test of time.

"There should be a sequel to it," he added.

During that time, Pratt was national advertising manager for New England Art Publishing, a greeting card company, in North Abington, for 12 years.

"In 1982, I decided I had had enough of printing in general and I retired," he said. But not for long.

He had 40-50 companies who were loyal to him, and decided to be self-employed for a year or two.

Then in February, 1984, he joined Pyramid Printing and Advertising, Weymouth.

He recently retired completely.

"It feels great," he said. "There are too many other interests in life."

"Now I just work for the town of Cohasset."

Pratt had served on the planning board for 10 years during the 1950's and 1960's, half of those years as chairman, and on the board of registrars for four years, before he was elected selectmen two years ago.

He had also run unsuccessfully for selectmen four times over the years before he was finally elected in 1987 to a three year term.

"I was semi-retired then," said Pratt.

"I was getting excited about some directions the town was going in that I was displeased with.

"I talked with my son, and he said I was crazy. But he helped with my campaign.

"To my knowledge, I ran the only local computer-oriented campaign.

"You identify your voters, and zero in on people you identified."

When asked whether being a selectmen was what he expected, Pratt andwered "yes and no."

"When you are running for office, there are things that you think should be done.

"But when you get on the other side of the fence, it looks entirely different.

"It was the same way on the planning board.

"There is a hell of a lot of work, but I enjoy it."

Pratt admitted that he is frustrated by the amount of time it takes to get things done in town government.

"At my age, you tend to be impatient," said Pratt.

"You want to get things done.

"I've been in business all my life. You make decisions and you get things done.

"But in government, it takes so long."

He said his greatest satisfaction has been seeing the $1 million town office building come together.

"All the departments will be under one roof," he said. "That's been a great satisfaction."

"Physicly, the housekeeping has been much improved. "The whole working atmosphere is much, much better."

The remaining town departments in the Bates Building will be moved into town in two to three weeks, he said.

Pratt admitted that he doesn't like some aspects of the building.

"The design is atrocious," he said. "And the space is wasteful."

Pratt said it was a particularly difficult time after executive secretary Don Andrew left last summer.

"There was a 90-day hiatus," he said. "We were trying to finish the new building, working with architects and builders."

He praised the new executive secretary.

"Greg Doyon is the first fully qualified executive secretary we have had," he said.

"No one has had the education, background and experience he has had.

"He is a real take-charge person."

As a selectmen, Pratt said he receives quite a few calls from towns people.

Subjects can range from a dead cat to a lost mooring to a philosophical discussion, he said.

"Philosophical discussion is the heart of the matter," he said.

"We suffer in town from a lack of long-range planning.

"There are as many opinions as there are people in town.

"We should have a master plan, a detailed capital budget plan, what facilities are needed.

"We are making some progress in capital budgets.

"It's a very basic thing.

"It's no different than running a household.

"You decide what you need and can afford.

"We've been a long time getting into this type of plan, and the town has suffered because of it."

When he is not acting as a selectmen, Pratt has a number of things on his agenda.

"I have never understood why anyone feared retirement because there was nothing to do," he said.

His first priority, he said, will be to continue puttering around his house.

He is also a director of the South Shore Playhouse, Inc., parent company of the South Shore Music Circus.

His association with the summer theatre goes back to 1934 as an usher at the age of 13 and 14 when the productions were staged at Town Hall.

"Humphrey Bogart was in the first few plays," said Pratt.

"We used to love him; he had that funny voice.

Pratt is also an amateur trumpet player as well as collector of Big Band posters and records. He has 3,000 to 4,000 records.

"They are mostly 78 r.p.m.'s," he said.

"I grew up in the Big Band days. It was very exciting.

"It's still my favorite kind of music.

"I listen to it on all our radios.

"I could spend the rest of my life taping the records and putting them on cassettes."

Winter is for skating, and in Cohasset one popular place to do that is on Todd's Pond. (L to r) Chris McKenna, Kevin McKenna and Michael Coates enjoy the sport during a recent afternoon.

□ There is a nifty party being planned for this Sunday, Super Bowl Day! It is a shindig to be held to raise money for the Project Playground for the Osgood School. It will be held on the 22nd, beginning at 4:00 p.m. and listen to what it includes!! Great free buffet door prizes, and a cash bar. Not only that, you can see the game on a big-screen television! The price, with all the money going to the Playground Project, is $15 per person or $30 per couple. Call Dick Bugley at 383-9482 or John Carr at 383-0331 for more details. What better way to spend Super Sunday, and it all goes to our children.

□ How about that Michelle Hartley, she just keeps knocking 'em dead in the world of gymnastics! A junior at CHS (and one who makes the Honor Roll to boot), she is really awesome in each event that she competes in. You know she is special when WATD calls for an interview, which is exactly what they did last Sunday. Michelle was as composed on the radio as she is during an event. Continued success Michelle, everyone is so proud of you! And, it behooves you the reader, to go and see her at one of the home meets, you won't forget her performance in a hurry!!

□ Okay folks, here is another premiere event to mark on your calendar. The high school drama workshop is holding its winter production this weekend (Jan. 19th and 21st) in the high school auditorium. They will present "Out of Control," and "This is a Test." "Out Of Control's" cast includes Erin Monaghan, Matt Kuhn, Allison Reilly, Jay Staunton, and Zach Hochkeppel. "This is a Test" will feature Dan Farwell and Jay Staunton (who will alternate in the lead role) and Jack Beddows, Pam Hasse, Erin Monaghan, Paul Froio, Brian Ormiston, Jason Cameron, Jen Planted, Doug Moe, Melissa Chistoffel, J. Gaston and Lynda Hague. The curtain goes up at 7 p.m. on the 19th, and 8 p.m. on the 21st. If you buy your ticket in advance it will cost $3.00, if you purchase it at the door it will be $4.00. Be sure that you lend your support to the High School Drama Workshop. Director Ron Emmons and his cast and crew guarantee you will be glad that you did. If you need more information, call 383-6100.

□ Congratulations to Kathryn Earle, who has been named director of quality at ODI, an international management consulting and training company with its headquarters located in Burlington Mass. She will work with senior management to support the strategic planning process, promote the development of business improvement goals, deploy quality action plans and sustain the process of continuous quality improvement at ODI.

□ Hats off to Mrs. Francis W. Hagerty and Mrs. Charles E. Lynch, both of whom were recently elected directors of Cohasset Savings Bank.

□ Leslie Woodbury certainly had a wonderful experience in Israel, we are glad that she is home safe and sound. After reading all of her adventures, we are sure that she will never forget that trip! Sure is grand how colleges today are offering such exciting trips to their students.

□ Steve Migliaccio and Matt Silvia are two happy guys, after winning in the Art For Kids contest. They were at the awards ceremony held at the Wang Center for the Performing Arts, and we are sure they will treasure their prizes. Well they should, with talent like that.

□ And the Devin names goes on for another generation...Taylor Devin is who we are talking about, son of Bob Devin all-around star in the '60's. Taylor competed in the recent Tournament held at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham, and we are sure that his name will be in the limelight for a long time to come.

□ It's that time of year again, when your local girl scout will be knocking at your door selling her cookies...be sure that you lend your support, it is needed.

□ That's the news for this week, surely you have some of your own that you would like everyone to know about. Give me a call at 383-0560 and we will get it "around town."

Editorial

Best for everyone

The situation is over. The lingering debate and seemingly endless controversy over basketball coach Eddie Minelli concluded last week.

Minelli, who was with the Cohasset High School program for the past seven years, bringing glory and gossip wherever he went, has ended his reign at the school.

All things considered, we think it was the best solution for both the school, the players and their former coach.

The varsity players, who were always the first consideration throughout last week's ordeal, have been left in capable hands. We congratulate coach Arnue Reppucci and wish him the best of luck during the remainder of this season.

He came into this position under the worst conditions, so things can only go uphill for the former junior varsity coach. But Arnie's been around the backboards long enough to realize how to play the game. A high school coach is, afterall, a confidante, a teacher, a parent, a disciplinarian and a politician. He seems to be a classy guy who has made a classy entrance into a sticky situation.

As for the tenure of Coach Minelli, it's truly anyone's guess why things happened when they did. When he first came to Cohasset, we never thought he'd last seven years.

Minelli is a showman, no doubt about that. He loved to steal a scene and the media ate it up. He was a winner, and everyone loves a winner. Minelli was no exception.

The Mariner has been accused of going needlessly overboard over this victorious coach. Our many front pages devoted to Eddie and his Cruisers infuriated some people who "knew the inside story."

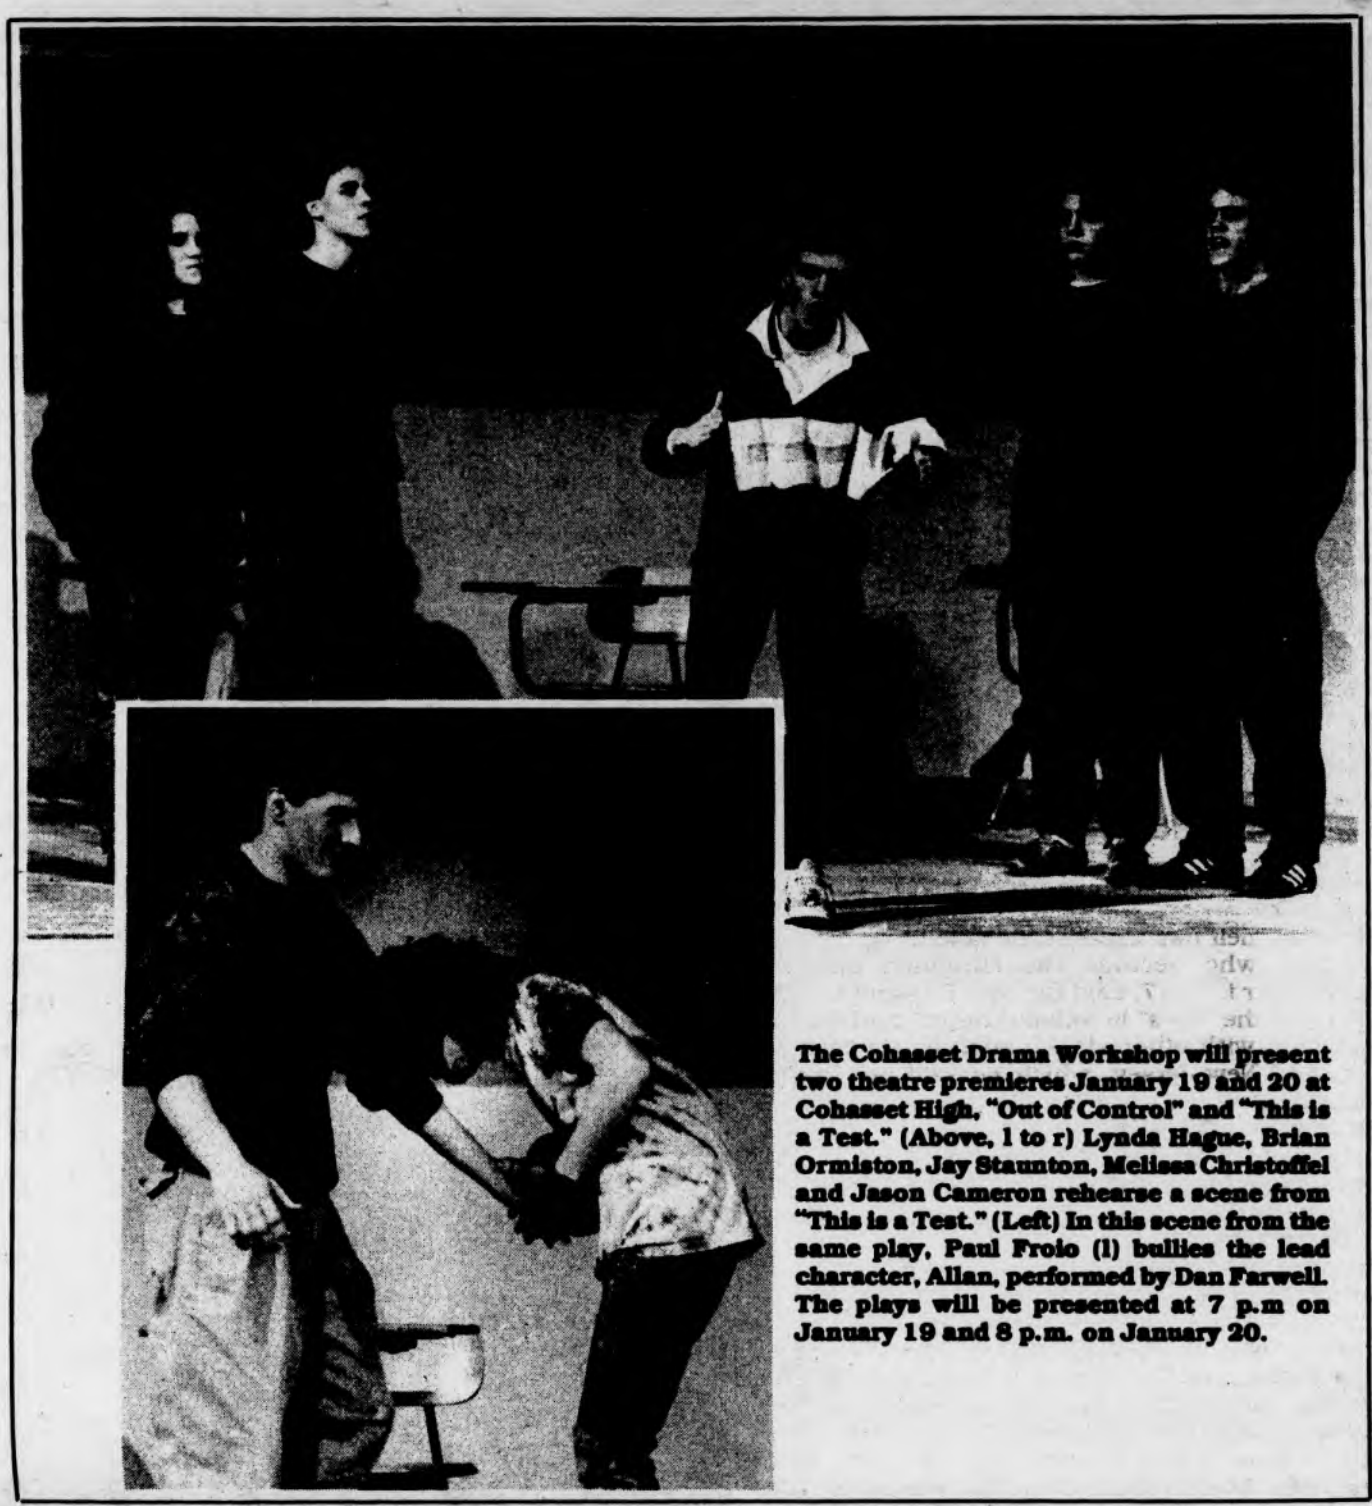
But here was a coach who had compiled a 111-13 record in five years, bringing home state championships and division titles to this tiny town. Many people say Minelli won those years thanks to star players like James Creed, Tony Bogarty and Bryan Edwards. But every player, even a Larry Bird, needs a good coach. And a good coach needs more than one great player to capture two state championships against high schools twice our size.

Our star players were coached by a man who devoted his life to them. Minelli ate, drank and talked about nothing else but basketball. His focus was entirely on the kids on his team. He pushed them, no doubt. He yelled at them, and ridiculed them as coaches will do. But he embraced them.

Many argue that Minelli did not teach the basics - that few of his brilliant star players have managed to stay in the sport beyond high school. But let's face it, we're talking about little Cohasset. He did his best with the limited amount of talent he had to work with. We had, and continue to have, talented kids. But they are in a limited quantity merely because of our small population. And if those stars did not pursue a basketball career into college, perhaps academics had more to do with their decision than athletics.

No coach is perfect. He is going to anger kids who have not made the team, who warm the bench because they feel they've been unjustly overlooked. He's going to yell in the heat of a tense game and annoy some other players. And those players tell parents. It's the name of the game in school sports. You can't please everyone all the time. It's impossible. Perhaps he did treat some players unjustly - overlooking them in favor of his stars.

And that is perhaps where Minelli was the least successful. He wasn't the consumate politician. He played the METCO kids while some of our local players warmed the bench. He tried to pull together a winning team, rather than ensuring playing time among all members of the team. A winning team is a crowd-pleaser, but it does not necessarily endear the coach to all his players or their parents.



Minelli left a legacy in this town that will not likely be matched. For five years, the spotlight was turned on Cohasset and we reveled in it. Minelli helped bring that fleeting fame to Cohasset, and for that we owe him our gratitude. It was so much fun while it lasted.

We believe many kids in this town are better off because they knew him and were part of his team.

Minelli isn't about to crawl off in some hole now that he's left Cohasset. Chances are he'll be snatched up by some other school and he'll be just as happy there as he was in Cohasset. And our players won't give up because they lost their coach. The season is far from over. With a new coach comes new hope.

Miscommunication base of problem

To the Editor:

Having read with great disappointment, a number of articles in the South Shore and Boston press during the past week about the resignation of Mr. Minelli as Cohasset's head basketball coach, I feel compelled to make a statement as President of American Field Services (AFS) in Cohasset.

The events related to this incident are most regrettable for all, especially for our visiting AFS student, a valued guest in our community.

Cohasset has traditionally extended a warm welcome to visiting exchange students. This courtesy has included an invitation to take advantage of whatever opportunities our community has to offer, including athletics. Students from different cultures bring new and enlightening perspectives to group activities and sports team participation. Both foreign and local students benefit from such interchange. However, no one involved with AFS, including host parents, would ever suggest that such opportunities should be offered to visiting students at the expense of resident students. In the case of our visiting student from Peru, there were no expectations that this young man should fill any particular position on the team. He only asked to have the opportunity to participate in some capacity. Had that meant practicing with the team and sitting on the bench, it would have been entirely satisfactory. At the same time, Cohasset is in the fortunate position to be able to meet student needs on an individual basis (All students.) The size of the school has made it possible to allow visiting students to participate in sports if they so choose. In years past the precedent was established to offer foreign students this opportunity for interaction as long as it didn't interfere with the same opportunity for local students. Two previous exchange students had participated in the basketball program under Minelli. They rarely played, but when they had that chance, everyone was delighted with their efforts. This kind of community support is essential to a young person who is away from home and family for an entire year.

I believe that no coach should be told who he should play on his team. Indeed, coaches need autonomy. At the same time they have a responsibility to insure fairness in the process. There was legitimate reason for the visiting student's parents to question the process of "Try Outs" as it related to him. This may have been a matter of miscommunication. But, had Mr. Minelli taken the time to sit down and discuss any misunderstanding with the student and his parents, the incident could surely have been averted. Under the circumstances, the host parents acted responsibly and properly on behalf of their (guest) child by verbalizing their concern. In fact I applaud the commitment they have made to this student.

It should be noted that neither AFS nor the host family requested reinstatement once he had been cut from the team. The only request made, at that point, was that someone from the coaching staff sit down with the exchange student and help him understand what the process had entailed.

The AFS community is grateful for the response and support which have been forthcoming from the school administration in this matter. We are fortunate to enjoy such commitment from our school officials for enrichment through cultural exchange.

Chamber against project

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has been asked to make a statement regarding the "Deck Point Issue." Our statement is: "the Board of Directors of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce recognizes the fact that we do not have any standing to make an appeal of the decision regarding the Deck Point Project. However, the Board reiterates its opposition to this project primarily because this is an unsuitable location for such a project."

Sincerely,
Janet Mahoney, Secretary for The Board of Directors
Cohasset Chamber of Commerce

Residents must clear brush

To the Editor:

(This letter was written to homeowners and residents on private ways. Ed)

This letter is a reminder that all hanging branches and brush that interferes with the plowing and sanding of private ways is the responsibility of the residents of these roads. The Tree and Park Dept. is not responsible for the cutting back of these hazards, which makes the maintenance of these roads very difficult and causes damage to Town trucks. If these problems are not taken care of by the residents, the Highway Dept. will not plow or sand these roads.

Cohasset animal control officer among grads

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

Seven area animal control officers are among the first graduating class at the Criminal Justice Training Council's academy in Needham.

Animal control officers from Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield, Braintree, Holbrook, and Canton received certificates during ceremonies held Jan. 13.

Eighty-eight officers from all over Massachusetts completed this first formal training program in the state for animal control officers.

For some graduates, their certificates were received after more than a decade on the job, where their only previous training was gathered from each other, humane societies, and common sense.

Hingham ACO Paul Murphy was not only a graduate but also the academy coordinator.

He said the nine-month program covered a wide-range of courses, concerning animal health, legal and administrative procedures, and public relations and education.

Eight hours of classroom instruction was conducted one or two days per month, for a total of 100 hours of formal training, with some animal control officers travelling from the western part of the state and from Martha's Vineyard to attend.

Approximately half the officers attended the academy at their own expense, he noted.

Murphy, who became the Hingham animal control officer in 1977, said the New England states are "behind the times" in animal control matters, in comparison with other states, such as California, Texas, and New Jersey, which he said are "more progressive and sophisticated" on this subject.

Not only do other states provide better services to the community, animal control departments return revenue to the cities, towns, and counties.

He has learned the amounts exceed the cost to run the departments.

Veteran ACOs who graduated last week all recalled the lack of training when they first came on the job.

When he was hired, Murphy said, he was given a gun, a badge, and the keys to a town vehicle. His uniforms consisted of hand-me-downs from the Hingham police.

At the time of her appointment 16 years ago, Marshfield ACO Norma Haskins was only the second woman in the state named to this position.

"The day I was hired, they handed me a paper with my appointment on it, and book with the dog laws. I had to wait for a while to get a vehicle," she said.

"We didn't have a kennel. A man who took the stray dogs chained them to trees in his backyard," Haskins recalled.

"I had to educate a town and I had nothing to do it with."

Canton dog officer Richard Stein said when he was appointed 16 years ago he was handed "the keys to the fire chief's old car, and that's it."

"I didn't know a heck of a lot about animals at the time," Stein said, adding he "didn't even believe in the leash law."

"I thought it was better to let dogs run," he said.

Over the years, Murphy and Stein have travelled, at their own expense and using their vacation time, to numerous humane society conferences around the country, to educate themselves.

From this, Murphy and Stein were both instrumental in the formation of ACOAM (Animal Control Officers Association of Massachusetts) in 1980.

ACOAM then began working toward providing a program of formalized training for officers.

The response was overwhelming, academy liaison Gordon Parry said during the graduation ceremony last week.

The Criminal Justice Training Council expected 40 participants in this first class, he said. Notice of the academy was sent out via police teletype, and within two days that number had been reached.

After four days, the number of interested ACOs reached 75, and eventually, 112.

Rather than limit the number, Murphy said, the training council allowed classes to be held in the Needham academy auditorium.

A grant obtained from a private foundation three years ago provided the "seed" money for development of the academy curriculum in conjunction with the academy staff, he said.

Animal control officers deal with a wide variety of domestic and wild animals, Murphy said, adding they must also deal with two-footed animals, who are often more difficult.

Courses were taught by veterinarians, humane society officials, law enforcement officials, and attorneys.

Animal health-related classes addressed first aid for animals, disease recognition and immunizations, animal behavior, zoonosis (the transmission of diseases from animals to humans), and euthanasia.

In addition, the ACOs also received instruction in court procedures, investigations, governmental forms, civil liability, equipment, and stress management.

"People don't realize what's involved," Murphy said, referring to size of the curriculum.

"I've learned there's a good reason for every animal-related law on the books," Stein commented this week.

Over the years his education came from his own experiences, sharing information with his colleagues, and from his attendance at humane society conferences.

For the academy program, Stein said, his budget covered the $100 fee. However, he added, if the funds had not been available, he would have attended the academy at his own expense.

"The more education I get, the more protection there is for the town," he noted, pointing out the towns' increasing concern over liability.

Dog owners must learn the consequences of allowing their pets to run loose, Hingham ACO Murphy said. In the week between Christmas and New Year's Day, six dogs were struck and killed in Hingham.

In addition, owners can be liable if the animal causes a accident, such as a motorist swerving to avoid hitting it.

Local animal control officers who participated in last week's graduation included: (l to r) Gordon Perry, Mass. Criminal Justice Training Council, Mario Centamore Jr. of Walpole; Richard Stein, Canton; Michael Cahill, Braintree; William Quigley, Cohasset; Leslie Cook, Scituate; Kenneth Conway, Hull; Norma Haskins, Marshfield; William Bowes, Duxbury; Paul Murphy, Hingham and Al Haite, Holbrook.

This liability also applies to the towns.

"Once we touch him, we're responsible: if the dog jumps out of the van and is hit by a car, or causes an accident," Murphy noted.

Stein called the academy program "excellent," noting the specific value of courses in animal handling taught by veterinarians, and the stress management sessions.

"None of us realized the degree of stress we face on this job," the Canton officer said.

While he views the academy from the vantage point of more than a decade on the job, Stein notes the particular value this program will have to his younger colleagues.

"They have a better understanding of the job and a better understanding of the problems they'll face," he said.

Some of their biggest problems will not come from animals, but rather from humans, Stein added.

"There are a lot of nutty people out there and they do a lot of nutty things."

With this in mind, ACOs must also be prepared to educate the public about the laws concerning animals, and about the health and safety of the animals.

He noted that the Canton dog licensing structure has a $5 annual fee for male dogs, with $5 for a spayed female and $8 for an unspayed female.

He hopes to change this, to charge higher fees for unneutered male dogs.

"People ask me what kind of dog makes the best pet," he said. While he does not specify any breed, he tells people a neutered male dog of any breed is best.

"They're a better dog. They're calmer and they stay healthier," he said, adding the advantage of controlling animal over-population.

While he has learned much about his job over the years, Stein noted the support and cooperation he has received from the residents and public safety officials of Canton.

Ten years ago, Canton constructed an animal shelter, with 12 cages. He hopes to enlarge the facility, to allow him to locate his office there.

Marshfield's ACO Haskins applauds the academy for the training in kennel management, sanitation, and nutrition.

"I never had to do this before," she said, adding this education will be "a huge benefit to the town."

Haskins said Marshfield expects to open its shelter later this year.

At the academy, "I learned a lot. I'm very, very pleased, and my town is pleased," she said.

William Quigley was appointed Cohasset's part-time animal control officer almost two years ago. He is also assistant ACO in Hingham.

He said the academy training in animal first aid and the legal procedures were especially valuable to him.

Cohasset provided the funds for his attendance at the academy, he said, but he would have enrolled in any event.

Academy director Thom White of the Animal Rescue League of Boston said during the graduation ceremony he is impressed with the dedication of the ACOs who managed a "difficult juggling act" of balancing the academy with their jobs in their respective cities and towns."

Animal control officers fill the role of the "sixth man," said Frank Ribaudo, an investigator with the Humane Society of the United States.

"They're never on the first team; they never receive the recognition, but are required to make quick decisions and to have sound judgment," he said.

ACOs must, on a daily basis, deal with the consequences of animal over-population, and with cruelty to animals, including the alleged sport of dog-fighting, Ribaudo continued.

They educate the general public; they assist farmers; they are aware that animal abuse by children may be a sign of more serious problems, he noted.

The ultimate goal of the ACOs is to protect animals and the general public, he added.

Boston Animal Rescue League president Arthur Slade said the training of animal control officers is essential for the well-being of the community.

Murphy noted that a program of follow-up training will be held annually, for those who have completed this course, to update ACOs on new procedures and changes in the laws.

The follow-up courses will include firearms training, Murphy said, noting that, during the course of a year, he uses his sidearm more than police officers.

Canton's Stein said he does not carry a weapon because he has never been trained. When necessary to put a critically injured or diseased animal out of its misery, he calls in his police department and explains how to do it quickly and mercifully.

Murphy said ACOAM does not encourage the use of tranquilizer guns because the dose of serum in the cartridges can be fatal to children.

"If we fire and miss, and can't find the cartridge, a kid could find it instead," he explained.

Eventually, he would like to see the creation of a county "chemical immobilization team," of trained specialists to respond to any situations where a sick or injured animal should be taken alive.

This would allow the animal to be treated for injuries and tested for diseases that may not be detected if the animal is killed.

ACOAM is working to standardize animal control procedures throughout the state, to increase professionalism in its ranks, and to educate the public, Murphy explained.

Stein noted that ACOAM has provided a professional organization where policies and procedures can be exchanged between communities.

Often one town's program can solve a problem in another community, he said.

Cohasset girls' offense falls to Norwell team

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Meghan Goughan's three-pointer at the buzzer in overtime provided the only points of the extra period and lifted Norwell to a 35-32 victory over Cohasset January 13.

Goughan missed a three-pointer with seven seconds left but grabbed her own rebound and buried the winner.

Cohasset (5-5 overall, 2-2 in the South Shore League Smalls) walked off the Norwell gymnasium with a one-point lead at halftime (16-15.) Both teams were unable to convert their half-court offense successfully due to the tenacious defense.

The biggest lead throughout the whole contest by either school was four points.

In the fourth quarter, Cohasset's Barb Lagrotteria hit two crucial field goals, including the tying basket with 40 seconds left in regulation that eventually sent the game into overtime.

Cohasset had their chances to score in the extra period but missed free throws prevented them to do so. In fact, the Skippers finished six-of-18 from the foul line and 30-percent from field goal range.

"I was pleased with our defensive effort, but our execution on offense could have been better," said Cohasset coach Bill Fallon. "Norwell is the team to beat in our league (8-2, 4-0 SSL)."

Cohasset's Kristen Ellinger was the game-high leading scorer with 12 points, while teammate Nancy Riley hauled down a team-high 12 rebounds in the losing cause.

Cohasset will now enjoy the rest of January at home with four straight contests, starting with Hull this week.

Boys' Basketball

The Cohasset boys' basketball team had a rougher time with Norwell at home, losing at 43-30 SSL decision last Friday night.

Norwell improved to 7-3 overall without a double-figure scorer in the game book.

The Clippers received nine points from Kevin Mildrum and seven from Mark Hopkins.

Cohasset (2-7 overall, 0-4 SSL), which trailed by six points at halftime, was led by Mike Ellinger's eight points.

Hockey

Rich McGlaughlin and John McDonald scored goals 18 seconds apart late in the third period to give visiting Cohasset a 3-3 tie with Sandwich last Saturday night.

Jim Gallagher gave Cohasset an early advantage in the first period, but Sandwich came back to score three unanswered goals to lead, 3-1, after two periods.

Skippers' goalie Joel Reidy held the fort in the final stanza as he stopped every Sandwich shot to earn the tie.

Cohasset(3-5-1 overall) will meet Randolph at home (Pilgrim Arena) this week.

Wrestling

Victories by Chris and Paul Froio and Pat Conroy clinched the 33-32 win for the Cohasset High wrestling team over Quincy (7-2) in a non-league match January 14.

Chris won his 171-weight division by forfeit, while twin brother, Paul, pinned his opponent in the 160 class. More importantly, both wrestlers still remain undefeated (6-0) on the season.

Conroy also pinned his opponent at the 189-pound division.

Cohasset improved to 4-2 with the victory.

Other results: 103: Greg Nourie (C) defeated Tim Schultz (Q), 10-6. 112: Steve Harrington (C) won by forfeit. 119: Greg Sousa (Q) defeated Bill Baird (C), 15-0. 125: Brian Gannon (Q) pinned Nathan Fiore (C). 130: Tim Pierotti (C) defeated Ennio Eleateri (Q), 5-0. 135: Dennis Mulligan (C) defeated Bob Stanton (Q), 7-2. 140: Scott O'Brien (Q) pinned Mike Stevens (C). 145: Robert Connolly (Q) pinned John Bowen (C). 152: Todd Kimmell (Q) defeated Jim Donohue (C), 6-3. Heavyweight: Tony Madden (Q) pinned Matt Deveney (C).

Gymnastics

Although Cohasset's Michelle Hartley won each event and then took the all-around (33.3 points), Randolph (2-2), led by steady performances by juniors Krystin Gamel and Julie LaMarca and bench depth in the floor exercise, squeezed out a 113.5-112.5 SSL decision January 9.

With the defeat, Cohasset fell to 1-4 on the season.

Scoring results: Bars: 1. Hartley (C), 8.4; 2. LaMarca (R), 7.87; 3. Tara Gallagher (C), 7.3. Beam: 1. Hartley (C), 8.3; 2. Gamel (R), 7.2; 3. Gallagher (C), 6.4. Vault: 1. Hartley (C), 7.9; 2. LaMarca (R), 7.7; 3. Gallagher (C), 7.6. Floor exercise: 1. Hartley (C), 8.7; 2. LaMarca (R), 8.3; 3. Gamel (R), 8.0. All-around: 1. Hartley (C), 33.3; 2. LaMarca (R), 29.7; 3 (tie). Gallagher (C) and Jennifer Pokaski (R), 28.3.

Deck Point studies feasibility

Engineers and architects for Deck Point Inc. are trying to determine if the condominium project on Cohasset Hill is still feasible.

Last week, the zoning board approved a comprehensive permit for 108 condominiums to be built on Cohasset Hill by Deck Point Inc. Along with that permit, the board included 34 conditions, including installation of a pedestrian crosswalk, a 210-foot by 310-foot "common" open space area, a five-foot high fence along the westerly side of the development, and an open leaching field.

Following the plan's approval last week, Tony Dugenik, a consultant for Deck Point inc., said that architects and engineers will now determine if the project is "physically and economically possible."

The first order will be to determine whether the project is physically possible. The next step will be an economic feasibility study.

"These has to be completed before Deck Point will decide whether to accept the zoning board's decision, or whether to appeal it," Dugenik stated.

Deck Point's attorney, Robert Devin agreed that no decision has been reached by Deck Point Inc. He noted last week that the project planners have the option to appeal the zoning board's decision to the state Housing Appeals Committee. By appealing the decision, Atty. Devin said, it will extend the construction timetable by six months to a year.

Dugenik objected to the reference that the proposed project abutts the commercial landfill. The 16-acre Deck Point property is separated from the state DPW property by a 12-acre parcel, he noted. The Cohasset Heights Ltd. landfill property is on the other side of the DPW property, he said, approximately 1,000 feet away from the state land.

Theater audition

Quincy Center Dinner Theatre will hold auditions for a March production of "No Sex Please, We're British" at 7:30 p.m. on January 29 and 30 at the Masonic Temple, 1170 Hancock St. in Quincy.

This bawdy, British farce calls for a cast of four females and six males of varying ages, including a young leading man, a young leading lady and two "ladies of the evening."

The show will be directed by George Stevens.

Cohasset carillon renovations

The 57 bells of the renovated Cohasset Carillon will range in weight from the smallest bell of 29 pounds to the largest bell, the six-ton bourdon.

The bells are tiered two stories high in the gothic tower of St. Stephen's Church.

Carillon bells produce overtones, five distinct pitches, when rung, which give them their distinct sound.

The craft of tuning bells to produce these overtones was perfected in Belgium and Holland during the 17th century.

So closely did bell foundries guard the secret of this tuning that it was almost lost and only rediscovered in England at the close of the 19th century.

The upper range of bells in the Cohasset Carillon will be replaced; the 16 largest bells will remain.

"It will be fun to see more bells put up," said Rev. Cutler.

He said that after all the work is completed, a rededication will probably take place in the spring of 1990.

"We live in a world that is so frantic and frenzied," he said.

"But when you hear the bells, it just stops you in your tracks."

"It's God's presence in a very beautiful and special way."

New vicar

Rev. Paul V. MacDonald, pastor of Sacred Heart Church, Weymouth Landing, has been named by Cardinal Bernard Law to head a newly created vicariate comprising 11 South Shore parishes. The area extends from Weymouth, including the section of Braintree whose residents belong to Sacred Heart Parish, to Marshfield. The area was formerly part of the Quincy vicariate, an administrative unit within the territory of South Area Bishop Daniel Hart. Fr. MacDonald, a Dorchester native who came to Sacred Heart two years ago from Brockton, will be visiting the churches in the new Weymouth vicariate.

Images (Formerly The Bridge Program)

The South Shore Images Program is a program coordinated by the South Shore Elder Services Inc. in association with the Massachusetts Commission for the Blind.

The program is a socialization program for people age 55 and older who have vision impairment and who have been registered with the Massachusetts Commission for the Blind.

The Image Connection exists to bridge the gap between social isolation and socialization. Vision loss is a common occurrence in the elderly. In Quincy, Weymouth and Braintree alone, there are approximately 650 blind elderly, many of whom may be socially-isolated. The Image Connection serves as their link to the community.

"Legally Blind" is a specifically defined condition applying to a person who has debilitating loss of vision when wearing the best possible prescription glasses or contact lenses.

In Cohasset we have a discussion group that meets and discuss concerns and needs of people with vision problems. We meet at the First Parish Church, 23 North Main Street in Cohasset on the second Tuesday, February 14th at 10:00 a.m.

For more details on Programs or to volunteer please contact: Mary Gougian or Ina Jones at 848-3910 or Kathy Bryanton at 383-9112.

TREAT THE PROBLEM NOT THE PAIN

Pain is only the tip of the iceberg. Chiropractic concerns itself with the body's nervous system. Regardless of a person's age it is the nervous system that helps maintain health and integrity of body organs, muscles, bone structure and related tissue. All too often pain, fatigue, or sickness in any area of the body can be traced to the impaired nervous system that governs that body area.

Art center volunteers thanked

The South Shore Art Center recently held a reception to pay tribute to its many volunteers, faculty, and gallery artists.

Set amidst the inviting 'Contexture' exhibition, curated by Cliff Roberts, 75 people enjoyed refreshments provided through the generosity of Sea 'N Cheese and Cohasset Meat and Produce Center. The door prize, won by faculty member Roz Farbush, was donated by Proctor and Gamble.

Gallery 360's Thomas Hamilton, Vice President of the Board of Directors, acknowledged with appreciation the importance of each individual's contribution of time, interest and dedication to the art center. He presented a Certificate of Appreciation to Robin Suhrbier who had recently retired as Public Relations Director and thanked her for her six years of service to the center. Suhrbier wanted everyone to remember that the new facility was a tribute to Margaret Dillon, director of the SSAC for eleven years.

The art center received an enthusiastic response to the Open House and Reception on January 8. It marked the beginning of two new exhibitions, "Recent Works" by Lois Griffel, Charles Kellman and Bonny Opie, and the Annual Faculty Show.

Classes start the week of January 23: call 383-9548 for information on membership and classes.

Funding public education

At the invitation of the Hingham 766 Parent Advisory Council and the Hingham School Committee, Senator Richard A. Kraus will be speaking on Monday, Jan. 23 at 7:30 p.m. at Barnes Auditorium in Hingham's Town Hall. He and his staff will address the current public education funding crisis.

In discussing the reason for the forum, School Committee member Sandra Cleary stated, "Education costs are not declining. How we will fund education is perhaps the most important question towns will face in the next few years."

Senator Kraus is the Chairman of Senate Committee on Education. In this role and as a member of the Senate Taxation Committee, he has proposed new legislation that would drastically change the way public education is funded.

Prop 2 1/2, the State Tax Cap, and now the state deficit can have a combined impact that can force towns to cut back on their local education programs. Hull, for example, faced a crisis last fall that resulted in the need for private funding of their athletics programs. As Senator Kraus describes the realities of the need for Prop 2 1/2 overrides, "We are all on a big conveyor belt. . . .some towns are just falling off sooner than others."

Focusing on our children as the key to the future, Senator Kraus has three main concerns: The reduction of advanced courses at the secondary level due to declining secondary enrollment, the high school drop-out rate, and the low skill level of many high school graduates. The resulting impact on our future economic growth concerns him and many business leaders today.

In this talk, Senator Kraus and his staff will discuss the symptoms of the current crisis, how it has evolved, and how public education is funded today. Senator Kraus will then explain his new proposal and answer questions from the audience.

Joining the PAC and School Committee in inviting Senator Kraus are the League of Women Voters of Hingham, the Hingham Teachers Association, and the Hingham High School Parent Faculty Organization.

"Every taxpayer is affected by the funding of our school programs," said Nancy Grejtak, PAC President. "Through this forum we hope to start a local dialogue, so that potential funding problems can be addressed before they reach crisis proportions."

For more information, contact Nancy Grejtak at 749-8736, or Sandra Cleary at 749-0632.

Murder Mystery night

Reservations are pouring in for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's Murder Mystery Night planned for Saturday, February 11.

Have you been thinking about going but not sure what to expect? Imagine: You're attending a party with an assortment of interesting and outrageous guests, each dressed up and acting out a character role. And you're a character too! You have no script to memorize or pressure to perform. You can ham it up or remain cool and mysterious. Now watch as a murder mystery unfolds before your eyes. You know that a mock murder will be committed. But where, when, and to whom? Will you be the victim? Or perpetrator? Are your palms sweaty? Heart beating faster? How would you plot your crime? Think you could get away with murder? The anticipation is nothing short of devilishly delightful.

Or perhaps you fancy yourself a super sleuth! During our investigation, you and your friends will hunt for clues, question suspects, piece the puzzle of mystery and intrigue together, play your hunches and cast your vote for whodunnit. Were you really as observant as you thought? Are you a discriminating detective?

Clue: Someone in the room is guilty.

So hurry, dress up as your new character and get ready for an evening of mystery, sleuthing, and the most fun you've ever had at a party. This is a one-night only event and space is limited, so act now.

For reservations, send $25.00 per person to the Cohasset Dramatic Club, P.O. Box 225, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Include the name, address and phone number of each participant. You will receive a kit in the mail about a week before the event. This event is being planned in conjunction with Murder By Mail Mystery Parties of Vineyard Haven as a fundraiser to help the club pay for the lease of its new clubhouse.

For more information, call Bonnie Haley, 545-6485.

The exhibition is open to both amateur and professional photographers. Up to five original works must be delivered to the Art Center at 119 Ripley Road. Entries will be received 12 to 4 p.m. Friday, Jan. 27 and from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 28. All works must be securely framed and ready for hanging. Unaccepted works can be picked up Friday, Feb. 3 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday, Feb. 4 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Jurors for the exhibition are Anita Douthat, Director of Exhibitions at the Photographic Resource Center in Boston and Marie Cosindas, a pioneer of Polaroid art photography. Give some electricity to your neighbors

Obviously, you can't — but you can help a needy neighbor pay for any energy bill — electric, gas, oil — by contributing to the Good Neighbor Energy Fund.

WHO GETS THE MONEY? You'd be helping people who need assistance —but who do not qualify for aid from the state or federal government. These may be the working poor, the handicapped, the elderly, and people facing a temporary financial crisis.

WHAT DOES EASTERN EDISON COMPANY DO? For every $2 you give, Eastern Edison Company will give $1.

WHO ADMINISTERS THE PLAN? All the money goes to The Salvation Army — and The Army will identify households anywhere in the state that need assistance, and then use the Good Neighbor Energy Fund to help pay utility and heating bills for those families.

HOW DO YOU CONTRIBUTE? By clipping this coupon and sending a contribution directly to The Salvation Army.

The Good Neighbor Energy Fund

Enclose your tax-deductible donation, payable to "The Good Neighbor Energy Fund" and mail to: 16

School news

Applause! Applause!

The children and the Staff of the Osgood School express a deep and special thanks to Barbara Meehan and our PSO for their long and ambitious efforts in the organization and directing of our journey to the world of the NUTCRACKER. The magic and wonderment of that experience will remain with us long into the future.

A special welcome

We are pleased to announce as an addition to our staff Mrs. Judith Ritts who has assumed duties in our resource room for the remainder of the academic year. Mrs. Ritts is a relative newcomer to Cohasset, has children in the Cohasset Schools, and resides at 22 Red Gate Lane.

Superbowl party

If you notice a lot of smiling faces around town don't be surprised. People are feeling good about themselves and for a wonderful reason — involvement in their community playground project.

Plans for the January 22 Superbowl Party at the Cohasset Community Center are in full swing.

Cohasset Meat and Produce graciously donated all the cold cuts and salads for dinner and the best quality certified black angus beef for a half time raffle.

Melinda Mincolla, owner of Design In Bloom has offered festive floral arrangements for the tables.

Bill Ryan at Super Stop and Shop has donated all the rolls for our expected crowd of at least 200!

Playground volunteers are busy making hors d'oeuvres and desserts and there will be a cash bar to benefit the Community Center. Several local businesses have donated prizes including Bowman & Co., Kit and Kaboodle, and The Red Balloon.

Between the game, prizes and buffet, there promises to be something for everyone — even non-football fans!

Tickets are $30 per couple, $15 per person, tax deductible. Call Cheryl Bugley, 9482, or Susan Carr, 0331.

Two other fundraisers are in the works — "Put Your Heart Into Reading" at Osgood School and a March Dream Auction! Details of those will follow.

Artist of the Month Meeting

Plan to attend a meeting to discuss the next Artist-of-the-Month Monday, Jan. 23 at 10 a.m. in the Osgood Library.

Call Pat Baird (6997), Retta Dwyer (6629) or Olga Nohe (1273) if you would like additional information.

Nothnagle at conference

From January 17 to 21, Melissa Nothnagle, a senior at Cohasset High School, will join approximately 500 outstanding high school students from across the country at the 1989 Youth Inaugural Conference sponsored by the Congressional Youth Leadership Council.

The group will meet with members of Congress, executive officials and leading journalists to gain an understanding of the history, tradition, and significance of the electoral process. In addition to the swearing-in ceremony of the 41st President, program highlights include a congressional breakfast, blacktie dinner and performance at the Kennedy Center, and participation in the Youth Inaugural Ball. Melissa was selected by her high school principal based on demonstrated academic achievement, leadership, and citizenship, and will serve as a representative of her school and of Cohasset while in Washington.

Put your heart into reading

This week the Osgood School kicked off the Readathon with an assembly program for the children featuring a storyteller from The Little Book Room in Milton.

How does the Readathon work?

The children will collect pledges of money for each book that they read from Feb. 1 - 17, 1989. Pledge cards and money collected will be returned to the child's teacher on March 1, 1989. The Little Book Room is providing a listing of books and the children's librarian at Paul Pratt Memorial Library will have grade appropriate reading lists posted.

The Readathon is not a competition. We are interested in the quality of reading, not the quantity. Project Playground hopes the children will take great pride in helping to raise funds through reading. If every child at Osgood collects $10 in pledges, we will have more than $3,500 to add to our fund. We are hoping that parents and friends will match the funds which the children raise either individually, for the class, for the grade level or for the school.

Partying at the Osgood School with a Big Bear Bash

What would a bear bash be at the Osgood School without a visit from the bear family? The visitors included: (l to r) two baby bears, Jay Ramussen and Geralyn Miller, and Mr. and Mrs. Bear, Adrina Divitre and Danny Duffy.

Request denied: Barrow would 'still like to run'

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

A weekend strategy session will decide if Cohasset Police Sgt. Richard Barrow will somehow remain in the race for selectman.

By virtue of a split vote Monday night, selectmen decided not to rescind a police department regulation which prohibits a police officer from campaigning for paid, public office.

Sgt. Barrow, a 39-year veteran of the police department, and the first person to take out nomination papers for a three-year term on the board of selectmen, says he's unwilling to forfeit his $600 weekly paycheck in order to campaign for the office.

"I'd still like the opportunity to run for the office, because I feel the people have a right to decide who they want in office. But this has given me a real handicap," Barrow said.

Mary Deveney of Summer Street, Barrow's campaign manager, said workers will meet this weekend to decide how they will assemble a campaign for a candidate whose name cannot appear on the ballot.

"It's going to take a lot of telemarketing and direct mailing by a lot of people," Deveney said. "Being a sticker candidate is a difficult thing. If there is a campaign for Dickie, he'll have to be a sort of draftee. It's something we have to sit down and discuss."

Following Monday night's selectmen's meeting, the 63-year-old police sergeant said he would still like to run for the office. But he added, "I make $600 a week. Why should I have to afford to go without that if I campaign for office?"

The police sergeant drafted an article for the annual town meeting which would eliminate the $1,000 stipend for each selectman. He was told by Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt that the warrant was closed and there would be no further articles accepted for the April meeting.

Items included in school 'wish list'

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Two "wish lists" with items ranging from a bus coordinator to renovation of the Osgood School bathrooms were included for the first time in the school committee budget deliberations Monday night, Jan. 23.

The growth budgets, for the whole district and for the Osgood School, were compiled by School Supt. Stephen Hart.

"These are recommendations of things which should be considered if funds are available," said Hart after the meeting.

He said he wanted to bring attention to the needs so that the items might be funded this year or in the future.

Hart said that if any of the 10 items make it to town meeting, they will probably be included in the regular school department budget.

"Maybe before we finish the budget, we'll be able to include some of them or substitute them for other items," he said.

"Because of (fiscal) constraints, we believed it was time now to take initiatives," he said.

"I decided to put it in a separate budget consideration."

Hart said it was hard to say the chances of funds being available for any of the items.

He said the overall budget is up 9 percent from last year just to maintain services.

"And we still have to look over the Deerhill and high

No one comes close to Cohasset gymnast

Her five-foot frame attacks the equipment. She moves through the air with grace and power and confidence.

Michelle Hartley changes personalities - from a giggling teenager, chattering with her friends before a meet - to a fearsome competitor, singlemindedly intent on winning every match.

Hartley, 16, is an undefeated athlete on the Cohasset girls' gymnastic team. "No one has even come close to her. At this point, she's unbeatable," praised her coach, Ruth Ann Sargent.

She is not arrogant as she postures sternly, awaiting her turn in the competition. She is serious. Hartley now understands what it will take to win.

Before each competition she removes herself from the team. Bent over in undistracted concentration, she meditates on the moves she is about to make during her next routine.

"I think I'm smarter now," she says. "I know what my routines are. I practice them in my mind. When I was younger, I would get distracted and not concentrate on my routine. I guess I'm a little wiser now and that helps a lot."

That wisdom comes from years practicing her

Hearing on fees schedule

The planning board will hold a public hearing Wednesday, Feb. 15, at 7:30 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall to update its fee and deposit schedule.

Copies of the proposed fee and deposit schedule may be inspected at the town clerk's office.

Some of the proposed increases are:

- Subdivisions and clusters, engineering cost deposit, $1,500 to $3,000
- Site plan review, Engineering cost deposit, 1,000 to 5,000 sq. ft., $500 to $1,000, 5,000 to 20,000 sq. ft., $1,000 to $2,500, 20,000 sq. ft. or more, $2,000 to $5,000.
- Site plan review, legal cost deposit, 5,000 to 20,000 sq. ft., $750 to $1,000, 20,000 sq. ft. or more, $1,000 to $1,500.
- Common driveway, application fee, $150 to $200; per residence served fee, $25 to $50, engineering cost deposit, $500 to $1,500, legal cost deposit, $500 to $1,000.

Five town budgets okayed

Selectmen approved five town budgets Tuesday night, Jan. 17, several of which were substantially lower than last year.

A selectmen's budget of $72,299 was approved, $31,725 less than last year's $104,024.66.

Members voted 3 to 1 to delete $500 to cover the file cabinet area in the selectmen's office.

Selectmen Martha Gjesteby and James Gallagher said the area did not need to be covered.

Selectmen chairman Burt Pratt voted to move the budget, but said he would bring the proposal up again.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle voted against deleting the money.

"It's well worth $500 to dress the joint up," he said.

Executive secretary Greg Doyon said that one of the major changes in the budget is for repair and maintenance of equipment for the copy machine.

He also said that dues for organizations like the Massachusetts Municipal Association are up substantially, and stationery costs have doubled.

However, he said that collective bargaining has been greatly reduced.

A harbor department budget of $44,345 was approved, down from last year's $60,264.94.

Board members recommended transferring $2,185 from the advisory committee for a new engine.

Harbormaster Irving Gadow said that it would cost $1,380 to "overhaul, get going and guarantee for 30 days" the current engine.

"Repair to the engine is not economically feasible not knowing what parts may have to be replaced at a later date," he said.

The Zoning Board of Appeals budget of $2,790 was also down from last year's $3,349.

Board members approved it with little discussion.

Also approved was a wire department budget of $92,756.30, up slightly from last year's $91,758.04.

"Basically, it's about the same budget as last year," said Wire Inspector Steve Wigmore.

"It's very close to level funded," agreed Pratt.

Wigmore submitted a warrant article, approved by the board, for a new truck at $27,000. It would replace one which the department has had trouble with.

"Since day one, the truck has been a lemon," said Wigmore.

"The first day we bought it, a wheel fell off," he said.

Selectmen also approved a budget of $65,712 for the building inspector.

Some $650 for telephone service was deleted since all those budgets are being consolidated.

Building inspector Don Robbins said about 15 new homes a year are built in town.

"There will be more next year," he said. "There are a couple of projects coming."

The dog officer's budget, which had been continued from last week, was placed on hold.

Water monitoring notice

The Cohasset Water Department is monitoring its water supplies for 59 volatile organic compounds four times this year in accordance with state requirements.

For results or further information, please contact Benjamin F. Curley, Superintendent, at 383-0057.

Planning secretary resigns

Planning board secretary Nanci Cushing has tendered her resignation effective Feb. 17.

"I have been offered a position that does not require late night meetings on a regular basis, plus the obvious, a higher salary than the town of Cohasset is willing to pay," said Cushing in her January 17 letter to planning board chairman Robert Sturdy.

"I will still retain my position with the fire department," she said. Cushing has also been part time secretary for the fire chief.

"I have learned a great deal while employed by the planning board, but feel there is no chance for any advancement while working for the town as a secretary."

Financial meeting Jan. 26

Jane Goedecke, advisory committee chairman, said that the ad hoc planning group will meet Thursday, Jan. 26, at 8 p.m. in the Town Hall auditorium.

Purpose of the meeting is to discuss the implications of the 1990 budget and to prepare strategies for managing the process, she said.

Invited to attend the meeting are selectmen, executive secretary, town accountant, board of assessors, treasurer/collector, school committee, school superintendent and capital budget committee.

Curtis Estate update

The probate court hearing scheduled last week regarding the status of the Curtis Estate was postponed. Instead, Asst. Attorney General Gwen O'Sullivan and estate trustee James DeGiacomo met in a closed session with the judge to discuss scheduling issues regarding the hearing.

In the meantime, the Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) has awarded the town a $9,000 grant "to study the proposed development of special needs and family housing" on the Jerusalem Road site. The town, headed by the Curtis Estate citizens' action committee, has proposed that the former home of the late George E. Curtis be used to provide housing for homeless families, retarded residents, abused women and the handicapped.

Selectmen will award a $9,000 contract for engineering studies of the septic system, and to develop design site plans for the proposed development of the property.

From these windows gazed the captains of industry.

Crystal Woods eligible for financing

The Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency has informed the developer of Crystal Woods that the project is "generally eligible" and can be considered for Housing Opportunity Program (HOP) funding.

In a January 17 letter, MHFA executive director Marvin M. Siflinger said that additional information will be required as the funding decision-making process continues.

Jack Hurley of Crystal Development Corporation, Quincy, is proposing a 60-unit condominium project on 20 acres of land off Brewster and Ledgewood Rds. on the Cohasset-Scituate line.

Average price of the two-bedroom condominiums will be $145,000 to $175,000, according to Hurley.

But the 22 HOP units, with two and three bedrooms, would be priced at $75,000 and $95,000, respectively, he said.

If the MHFA application is approved, Hurley said he will apply to the Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals for a comprehensive permit.

The permit allows a developer to bypass some local zoning in exchange for providing affordable housing.

The ZBA recently granted a comprehensive permit to developers of Deck Point, a 128-unit proposal at 81-119 King St., Cohasset.

Deck Point developers have also applied for HOP funding.

Siflinger said that Crystal Woods must comply with the state's Wetland Protection Act, Executive Order 193, as administered by the state's Bureau of Land Management, and Massachusetts Title V for the proposed on-site septic system.

Siflinger also noted that:

- Approval for tie-in to the municipal water line must be obtained, or an adequate supply of water to service the site must be identified.
- The impact of the traffic that will be generated as a result of this development must be assessed, particularly as it relates to the ability of Ledgewood Drive and GannettPasture Lane to handle any projected increases.
- Given the location of this development in both Cohasset and Scituate, it will be particularly important to negotiate the parameters of this project with each community so that no undue delays occur. Evidence of such negotiations will be carefully scrutinized.

"This letter represents the position of the agency at this time concerning the Crystal Woods development," said Siflinger.

"It should not be considered an exhaustive list of issues, nor a commitment of financing, since other concerns may arise as funding applications are further reviewed.

"However, since this development has already been submitted, for financing under the second round of the HOP competition, it will be reviewed in light of the issues raised in this letter."

Siflinger added that if construction has not begun within two years of the date of his letter, or if the period is not extended by the agency, it will be considered expired.

He explained that as part of the process, the MHFA undertakes a detailed analysis of the preliminary information that is submitted focusing specifically on suitability of the site for development, appropriateness of design, preliminary development feasibility and consistency of the development to the guidelines of the HOP program.

"We have solicited comments from the Massachusetts Housing Partnership and the towns of Cohasset and Scituate regarding this development," he said.

Cohasset selectmen opposed the project 3 to 1 because of such things as proximity to other houses, inadequate drainage, poor soil for septic system, traffic on Route 3A.

Cohasset neighbors have also been opposed because of concerns about density, additional traffic, location of units, drainage and sewerage.

However, the project has been supported by Scituate selectmen and the housing partnership.

Last fall, Cohasset signed a housing agreement stating that it would "not impede" the development of low and middle income housing in the town.

However, Cohasset selectmen said they would prefer to pursue housing objectives under the five-point memorandum of agreement entered into with EOCD.

They feel the program need not include comprehensive permits.

Sgt. Barrows ponders a run for selectman

Town Counsel Richard Henderson explained that in 1983, a former board of selectmen legally adopted a set of police rules and regulations written by former police chief John DeBassio. Those rules prohibit an officer from campaigning for paid, political office, unless he takes a leave of absence from his job. On the day of the election, the officer may apply for reinstatement, even though he may have been elected to the board.

Atty. Henderson explained that according to town bylaw, five years ago the selectmen, as the town's police commissioners, adopted the rules which are now law. "Under Chapter 97, those rules are a matter of law and the regulations are in effect. I discussed this today with the attorney general's office and they do not disagree with my interpretation," he stated.

"You have the power to waive the rules, or not," he added.

The town counsel said selectmen have the authority to waive the regulation in this individual case, without prejudicing their position if the matter is later taken into collective bargaining by the police union.

Selectman James Gallagher, a candidate for re-election to the board, suggested the regulation be waived.

"Are you going to vote because you don't like the regulations?" Selectman Cliff Mitman questioned.

"Yes," Gallagher answered. "It's unfair to have a candidate take a leave of absence from the police department. I don't know why this rule came up. Was it a vendetta? I can't find a reason for this rule."

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt noted that by waiving the regulations for Sgt. Barrow "we may be setting a precedent and letting down the bars on all kinds of things." According to Pratt, the book of police regulations "has to do with all kinds of things, like (officers) growing beards."

"But Mr. Barrow has a perfect right to run," Gallagher said.

"Provided he take a leave of absence," Pratt replied.

Selectman Mitman said he had a problem with a police officer or firefighter "running to be his own boss." If elected, the officer would have to abstain from police department policy decisions, but Mitman was concerned there would be a conflict of interest between the two positions.

"Frankly, I don't see a good reason for doing it (rescinding the regulation)," he added.

Sgt. Barrow said he was told by the state ethics commission that the only thing he couldn't do if elected is collect two town salaries. But, he added, he would probably retire from the department in six months to a year.

"Well, I'd be more comfortable if you ran next year," Mitman stated, adding that he'd prefer a regulation stating an officer cannot serve in two public jobs.

"But you dropped out of the race," Sgt. Barrow replied, "and I'm more comfortable running now." Barrow noted he would have "no problem" not accepting the stipend, if elected to the board.

"Let's get rid of it," Selectman Gallagher suggested, referring to the police regulation. "In a small community, it's hard enough to get people to run for selectman. I think this is unfair and unjust."

The vote to rescind the regulation was split, 2-2. Selectman Martha Gjesteby voted to rescind the rule. Selectman Rocco Laugelle, whose son, Paul, is a Cohasset Police officer, did not participate in the discussion or the vote.

"I think the position of police officer is one of responsibility and I don't think he should be running for office. Let him run next year. Why does he have to run this year?" Selectman Mitman wondered.

Town counsel noted that Barrow could reduce his leave time from the department if he decided to submit his nomination papers on the last possible day. But under the Civil Service regulations, the police sergeant would have to go through the proper paperwork in order to be reinstated to the police department.

"I have no intention of taking a leave," Sgt. Barrow said as he departed Monday night's meeting. "This is discriminating against me. Discriminating against a person for putting on a badge is ridiculous."

Selectman Mitman noted that if the union was unhappy with the regulations, they can be placed into the collective bargaining process.

"The union says we have never accepted these rules," the sergeant answered.

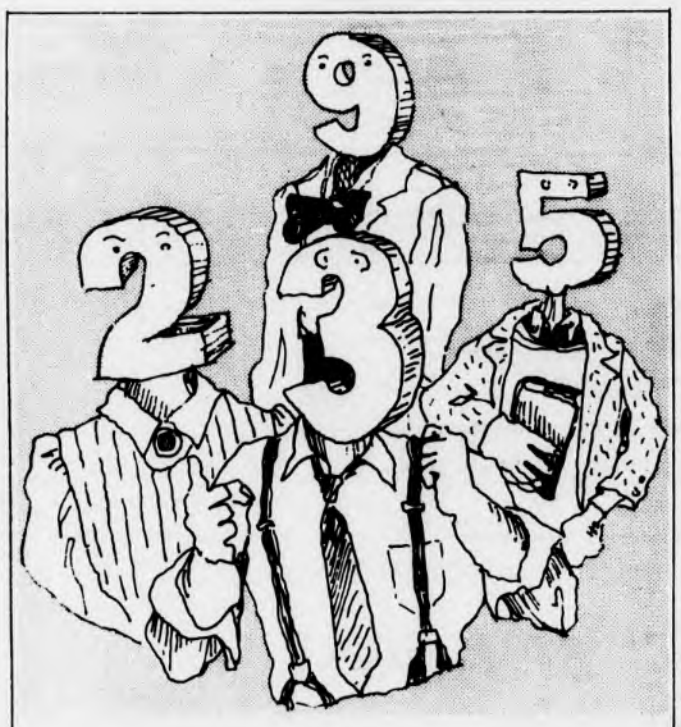
More possible Senate candidates

Two Marshfield officials are giving serious consideration to a run for the state Senate next year.

The seat, currently held by Weymouth Democrat William Golden, is likely to be vacant with Golden announcing two weeks ago that he will probably be a candidate for lieutenant governor.

School Committee Chairman John Creed and Selectman Richard Levin acknowledged this week that they are leaning toward a run for the Golden seat, though both are a long way from an official announcement.

Both would run in the Democratic Primary in 1990, and would likely face at least one and possibly two Democrats from Weymouth: Selectman Brian McDonald and veteran State Rep. Robert Ambler.



Besides Weymouth and Marshfield, the district includes Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Hull and Duxbury. It has been represented by Weymouth Democrats — Golden and Alan McKinnon — since it was created in the early 1970's.

Levin, an attorney, and a Marshfield Selectman since 1981, is presently registered as an Independent, saying he has never been a participant in partisan politics. He said he always votes in the Democratic Primary and would register as a Democrat should he choose to run for the Senate.

Creed, a former member of the Boston Celtics front office staff, is a lifelong Democrat and has served on the Marshfield School Committee since 1985.

The sole Republican to so far express an interest in the Senate race is Christy Mihos of Cohasset, the owner of Christy's Markets.

Commissioners to request sewer rate hike

At the April Annual Town Meeting, the sewer commission will be submitting an article for an increase that would more than double the rate charged its 200 customers.

A review of the department's rates and total revenue indicates that less than one-fifth of the operating budget is covered by sewer users. The remaining four-fifths is subsidized by all the tax payers.

For example: in FY 88 the total operating budget for the Sewer Commission was $136,377 and $23,493 was collected from the users. Thus, in FY 88 83 percent of the budget, ($112,884), was subsidized by the Cohasset property tax payers. Back in FY 76 the total operating budget was $40,368 and total revenue collected from the users was $18,530. In FY 76 nearly 1/2 of our operating cost was carried by the users.

Over the years the cost of the sewer system operation has increased substantially. With the fiscal restraint required by proposition 2 1/2, the cost of an 83 percent subsidy for the sewer plant operation is an unfair burden for our community and is inconsistent with sound fiscal policy in managing a utility for it places much less burden on the user of the service than the pubilc at large. Additionally, a rate increase should stimulate conservation and a possible reduction in our flows to the plant.

The department's new rate schedule would increase user rates to the point at which they would support approximately 1/2 of the sewer plant's operating cost.

The present rates are:

Residential: $1.05/1,000 gals ($.79/100 ft^3) ● 80% flow with a $10.50 minimum quarterly charge per user.

Under this system, the average household of 3 people with 180 gals/day water consumption pays $55.19 annually for sewage treatment.

Commercial: $1.40/1,000 gals ($1.05/100 ft^3) ● 100% flow with a $14.00 minimum quarterly charge per user.

Under this rate structure, a business with an average flow of 5,000 gals/day pays $2,555 annually for sewage treatment.

The proposed new rates are:

Residential: $2.50/100 ft. ● 100% flow with a $27.38 minimum quarterly charge per user.

Under this rate structure, the average household of 3 people with 180 gals/day water consumption would pay $219 annually for sewage treatment.

Commercial: Same as residential rate.

Under this rate structure, a business with an average flow of 5,000 gals/day would pay $6,083 annually for sewage treatment.

Studds to sponsor arts competition

As part of a nationwide contest, Rep. Gerry E. Studds announced the opening of an arts competition for Tenth Congressional District high school students.

"This national contest will honor the creative talent of young Americans," Studds said. The winning local entry will be chosen this spring by a panel of distinguished members of the local arts community and will be displayed in the United States Capitol.

Each contestant will be allowed one original entry, but there is no limit to the number of entries from each high school. To be eligible, artwork must be two-dimensional — including paintings, collages and prints. Entries may be no larger than 30 by 30 inches unframed, and no photographs will be accepted.

Formal entry forms will be available from high school art departments or from Rep. Studds' office. The deadline for the artwork itself is April 7.

Further details about the competition are available through the Congressman's offices in New Bedford (508-999-1251), Pembroke (617-826-3866) and Hyannis (508-771-0666).

Railroad seeks governor's continued support

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Concerned that the state's fiscal problems may prompt a reversal of the governor's support for the Old Colony Railroad rehabilitation project, members of the citizens advisory committee issued a resolution calling for a "renewed commitment" from Gov. Michael Dukakis.

At its meeting last week, Terry Fancher, chairman of the citizens advisory committee offered a resolution to the members. "It is my intent that we will complete the environmental review (of the proposed project) in a timely manner," Fancher told the committee. "It is up to the CAC to make its recommendation to the Secretary of Environmental Affairs and to the Urban Mass Transit Authority concerning the restoration of one or three lines."

"I don't want to see headlines saying, 'Governor derails the Old Colony Railroad.' That would be a marked difference from the comments the governor made (previously), that getting rid of commuter rail was the dumbest thing we ever did, " Fancher stated.

He offered a resolution which stated the committee "seeks a renewed commitment by Gov. Michael Dukakis that this project will move forward."

CAC member Richard Cook of Hingham was bothered by the original wording of the resolution, saying he was "incredulous" that members were being asked to voice an opinion on a statement they received only minutes before.

"We are just reaffirming that the process will go through. We have been seeing written reports that the Old Colony Railroad may not take place if the tax package does not take place. But they're not in the same ballpark. I don't want this project held up because of the tax package," Fancher replied. He referred to recent newspaper articles in which the governor implied there may be insufficient money for South Shore projects if this area does not support his tax package plan.

Cook requested that the resolution be made more specific, and that the word 'project' be defined within the statement. "If it means the continuation of the environmental review process, then I'm in favor of it. If it means the implementation of the Old Colony Railroad, then I'm not in favor of it," Cook said. He suggested an amendment that stated the governor should continue his "renewed commitment to the environmental review process now in progress."

The amended resolution was approved by the advisory committee. Fancher also suggested that individual CAC members could write letters to the governor, seeking his support for their efforts.

Project manager Stephen Polechronis told the committee that he has received no indication from the governor "to slow down" on their study of the railroad revitalization. "With respect to the state budget, this is a major investment to the state. But (transportation secretary Fred) Salvucci and Dukakis have a strong commitment to (the railroad project)," he said.

In other business, Polechronis explained that he recently submitted a first draft of the CAC's environmental impact statement to the federal Urban Mass Transit Authority. That agency responded by noting the report is "far too long," he reported. The next volume of the study will be trimmed from 1,200 pages to about 300, he predicted. The original document, Polechronis said, cannot be given to CAC members until they receive permission from UMTA. That should come in a couple of months, he said.

Once the CAC receives the environmental impact statement, they will have 30 days to review it. The report will be made available to the cities and towns affected by the proposed project, although Polechronis was not specific about where those reports would be available to the public.

Within 45 days, sometimes this spring, there will be a series of public hearings within the affected communities. All comments will be forwarded to UMTA and the state Environmental Protection Agency. Recommendations on the report will be made by those two agencies.

Polechronis said a final environmental report should be approved by the state and federal agencies the fall or winter of 1989, at which time the project will move forward with a design package. He predicted no construction could begin before 1990.

CAC member Cook was concerned that a 300-page report may not contain enough specific information about each of the three proposed railroad lines. Although Polechronis explained there would be lengthy appendices attached to the draft report, Cook questioned why they would not be made available to each affected city and town. He noted a Hingham Square traffic impact study conducted by the Old Colony project is still unavailable to the public.

Committee chairman Fancher asked that when that information is available, it is presented in depth to the CAC.

Regarding a study conducted in Quincy on the impact of the Old Colony railroad, the MBTA concluded it would not have a detrimental effect on the city.

The study examined the effect of noise and vibration, traffic, and air quality if the Old Colony was restored through Quincy. According to the study, there would be no vibration impact on residences, the air quality would improve because of the reduced use of automobiles through the city, and there would be a significant reduction of traffic through several major streets in Quincy.

The results were presented to the Quincy City Council, Polechronis said, who now agree with the "serious benefits" the Old Colony would provide.

CAC member Cook disagreed with some conclusions, saying that whatever traffic the Old Colony helps to reduce will be offset by new growth in the city. He also disagreed with the study's estimation of commuters from Hingham and Cohasset who travel through Quincy streets into Boston

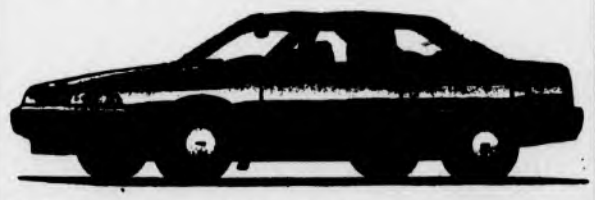
"This study, Polechronis explained, 'is a reflection of what would occur if service is not restored."

Weymouth resident Mary Kerr disagreed with the study's conclusion that noise from the trains will not affect adjacent residences. "How can you say it won't make a difference," she stated. "My backyard is quiet now . . . I just don't believe you."

Polechronis also reported on meetings held during the past several months to discuss concerns about the restoration project.

In October there was a joint meeting between the Holbrook and Randolph conservation commissions and the MBTA. According to Polechronis, the commissioners will cooperate on the environmental review with common areas of concern focused from Route 139 north to the Braintree line.

Holbrook commissioners suggested that culverts at station sites should be cleaned, and some should be replaced with larger ones.



At a November meeting with South Weymouth community groups, several residents favored the Route 18 station site over the original Alvin Hollis site in South Weymouth. They noted the change may better serve the residents of South Weymouth, but the possible impact on Route 18 remained a serious concern, Polechronis reported.

Several residents from East Weymouth expressed their opposition to the proposed restoration of the Greenbush and the Plymouth rail lines. They favored commuter boat service and more buses as an alternative. Fear about loss of control over growth, and the attractiveness of commuter rail were other concerns, he noted.

And at a November meeting with the Plymouth Conservation Commission, Polechronis said the feedback was "very positive" regarding the restoration project. Commissioners expressed concern about possible impact to wetlands on Hedge Road, and repair and replacement of existing culverts, but they "look forward" to working with the MBTA on these issues, Polechronis said.

The project manager also discussed the change in the North Scituate station site on the Greenbush school budgets."

Hart said that he would like to have all the items.

"But an overall curriculum coordinator for the elementary grades is a top priority," he said.

The coordinator, at $30,000 a year, would supervise elementary curriculum including reading.

At the meeting, Hart said the principals have given their time to supervise curriculum.

"But it hasn't been implemented as well as it might have been," he said.

"It's a big task."

School committee member Nancy Sandell said, "I want to make sure the writing process is being carried through in all classes."

School teachers at the meeting agreed that there is a need for such a coordinator.

Teachers also agreed that the bathrooms at the Osgood School need to be upgraded because of peeling paint and other problems.

The all district growth budget includes $18,000 for a survey of the school department's three buildings.

"I think it's something we should have," said Hart.

"I think we need that outside view."

The superintendent said that an architect would give a statement of the present condition of the buildings as well as future needs.

Other items in that growth budget are: all district teacher training, $10,000; bus coordinator, $10,000; two-way radios, $3,000; conference fund, $10,000, (additional $50 per staff member plus $45 for substitutes to attend conferences), and an all district maintenance assistant, $17,000.

The Osgood growth budget includes new language arts materials throughout the grades, $1,350; heating system renovation, $20,000; tile installation replacing classroom carpets, $2,000; replacement of the public address system, $3,000.

Osgood School principal John Creamer said the old communication system can't be repaired.

"None of these items is extravagant," said school committee chairman Diana Kornet.

"If any of you want to share some of your thoughts on the growth budgets, they would be welcome," Kornet told the teachers in the audience.

"We'd be very interested in that kind of feedback."

Committee member Christopher Ford said that the PSO might be able to back some of the items.

In addition to the growth budgets, Hart is recommending an overall budget of $5,576,783 for fiscal 1990, which represents a 9 percent increase over the budget appropriation for fiscal 1989 of $5,113,006.

The largest component of the budget is the salary account which he said represents some 80 percent of the total budget.

Hart said that another area that contributes to the overall budget increase is special needs programs, specifically, costs attributed to tuition for out of district programs and transportation of special needs students to their school placements.

During their two hours of deliberations, the school committee discussed the all district and Osgood School budgets.

The all district budget of $371,508 is up from last year's $253,334.

The Osgood School budget is $914,976, up $64,150 from last year's $850,826.

Advisory committee members Christine Bassett and William Lean sat in on the discussions.

In other action, the school committee:

- Approved expenditures of the Deer Hill Improvement Council including two VCRs, an 18-inch laminating machine, three National Geographic video programs and a computer monitoring system.
- Reviewed a four-page letter to citizens regarding the proposed school department budget to be mailed before the town meeting.
- Approved an early release day for Thursday, Feb. 2.

School budget meetings

The School Committee will be meeting Monday evenings through February 13 to discuss the 1989/1990 school budget.

Parental concerns will be heard by the committee at this time so if interested — please attend.

The meetings are scheduled to be held at 8 p.m. in the Home Ec. room, West Wing, CHS on January 30 and February 6 and 13.

line. After meeting with local business and community leaders there, Polechronis said the majority favored the station relocation.

The proposed site is now occupied by the Treasure Chest printing company. Tennis courts on Henry Turner Bailey Road will be replaced by a parking lot for 116 cars. There will be parking for about 497 cars at the printing company site, he said. There are also plans to add a third, smaller parking lot in a third North Scituate area.

Polechronis didn't think the MBTA would charge a fee for the parking, and noted that when ridership is down on Saturdays, the lots will be available to people shopping in North Scituate.

"Scituate needs to be concerned about a fee. They need to know about this as soon as possible." CAC member Cook noted. "If there is a fee, it will be an enducement to parking off-site (in the commercial parking lot). This would be a real concern to merchants in that area."

Two selectmen candidates so far

There are at least two candidates in the running for a three-year term on the board of selectmen.

Diana Kornet, a ten-year veteran of the school committee, has submitted nomination papers for the position.

The New Hampshire-certified teacher said she was running for the office to provide "a perspective that represents support for education."

The 13-year Cohasset resident said most communities now include a large elderly population "whose needs must be met." But, she added, "we must not let our children fall through the cracks. We have to be cognizant of how important thse young people are - people who will be guiding the world in the future."

The mother of four children, Kornet is a graduate of Connecticut College.

Selectman incumbent James Gallagher will also be running for a three-year seat on the board. A former recreation commissioner, Gallagher has been on the board of selectmen since 1986. He has emphasized his intention to complete many of the jobs he began three years ago as selectman.

A longtime resident of Cohasset, Gallagher is self-employed.

March courses at Community Center

Sign-ups are now being taken for a variety of courses beginning in March at the Cohasset Community Center.

Landscape Design and Planning will meet Mondays from 9 to 11 a.m. for eight weeks. Design your own property, including problem areas, with low maintenance plant materials.

Collecting English Pottery begins Wednesday, March 1 from 1 to 2:30 p.m. for five weeks. Those who collect and appreciate English pottery will become familiar with the different types of wares, their history and origin, authenticity and identifying marks, and how to weed out fakes and repros.

Finance for Women Only will meet Thursday, March 2 from 7 to 9 p.m. for four weeks. A certified financial planner offers a thorough overview of money management and financial planning including portfolio management, investment philosophies, tax strategies and estate planning.

A workshop in Cut-and-Pierce Lampshades will be held Saturday, March 11, from 9:30 to 3 p.m. Participants will bring home a finished product and the knowledge to pursue this craft independently.

Frustrating a candidate

Selectmen decided this week, by virtue of a split vote, not to rescind a police department regulation that would allow an officer to campaign for paid political office without taking a leave of absence from his job.

Although two selectmen argued that Cohasset Police Sgt. Richard Barrow should be allowed to campaign for public office, two others disagreed. Selectman Rocco Laugelle abstained from the vote because his son is a Cohasset police officer.

We understand Selectman Cliff Mitman's argument that a police officer or a firefighter should not be elected to a political office in which he would serve as the department head. In this town, for instance, Sgt. Barrow, if elected to the board of selectmen, would be his own boss in his responsibilities as police commissioner.

"I have trouble with that," Mitman said this week. He suggested that Sgt. Barrow, who is nearing retirement after many years in the department, seek paid public office after his retirement.

The courts must disagree with our selectmen, however, since the state supreme court ruled there is no conflict of interest when a police officer is elected to public office in that town. In fact, the Cohasset Police Department's rules and regulations, which were adopted by the Cohasset Board of selectmen in 1983, also state that an officer may serve.

What those regulations prohibit is a police officer campaigning for paid public office, unless he takes a leave of absence from his job. He may return to the department the day of the election. And if elected, he may serve both positions - although he must forfeit one of the salaries.

Suffice it to say this isn't one of the more intelligent regulations written in the English language. The current board of selectmen was probably unaware of the rule, and the police department is arguing that the rulebook was never adopted by the union.

Selectman James Gallagher, who by virtue of running for re-election will be campaigning against Barrow and any other selectman candidate, welcomed the police sergeant to the race. He commented that no one should be discouraged from running for office, considering the low number of candidates who usually enter a local race.

And that, we believe, is the bottom line of this entire situation. No one should be discouraged from running for public office. If this is a democracy, we should all be encouraged to participate in our government. Where do we draw the line? Should all people without a college education be denied the right to seek elected office? Should women who have not worked outside the home be prohibited from campaigning and serving in elected office?

Then why should a police officer be discouraged from voicing his opinion about the town he has pledged to serve and protect? Like another member of the current board who must abstain from all police department policy decisions, Sgt. Barrow would be obliged to do the same.

The voters in this town will decide who they want on that board of selectmen.

Make no mistake. No one has said Sgt. Barrow can not run for public office. But it makes it somewhat difficult, and more than a little prejudiced, when one candidate is told he has to give up his income for six weeks.

Some say the police sergeant has gained all the front page headlines he needs to wage a successful campaign. We reply, good for him.

Assn. supports safety belt bill

Letters

To the Editor:

The Massachusetts Head Injury Association (MHIA) applauds Senator Albano's and Representative Gray's sponsoring of a safety belt use bill in the Commonwealth. This courageous and necessary step promises not only to curtail injuries and fatalities on our roadways, but also to reduce the cost of health care and rehabilitation services to the state's taxpayers.

Since 1985, thirty-one states and the District of Columbia have passed safety belt laws. Massachusetts, too, had a safety belt law in 1986. It lasted for eleven months and resulted in an increase in belt usage and a drop in highway injuries from 78,564 to 61,592. After the law's repeal, usage dipped and injuries rose, correspondingly, to 68,072 in 1987.

Over half of all traumatic brain injuries are motor vehicle related, and in most cases the injured fail to buckle up. As long as people fail to prevent preventable injuries by traveling without safety belts, the public will continue to be burdened with the high costs of caring for those who sustain these devastating injuries — lifetime costs which can exceed 4.5 million dollars for a single person.

Most people lack the personal wealth to afford such care, so the financial responsibility eventually falls to the taxpayer when insurance runs out. Opponents may argue, "Let those who ride decide." We say, "Let those who pay have the final say!"

Every person reading this letter knows a family in which a member has been severely injured in a motor vehicle accident. Our state loses 700 people a year to such accidents — the equivalent of the downing of two major airlines at Logan Airport.

Eliminating needless suffering and the waste of human potential by enabling people to walk away whole from accidents is a worthy goal of any legislation directed towards public safety. Senator Albano and Representative Gray have boldly stood to be counted for favoring the saving of lives and reduction of injuries.

Helen Nienhaus Barba
Executive Director
Massachusetts Head Injury Association

Rep. Murray says Duke has used us

To the Editor:

Constituents have been calling me to express their outrage at the Governor's fee increase. Many more have called me regarding the tax increase proposals.

My response has been that I feel that the Governor has used my people and the people of the Commonwealth. I feel his actions are obscene. As usual, he is hurting the middle class and lower income people with his plans!

We had a surplus which he used in a spending frenzy. I voted against his proposals which used up the surplus monies. It is time that all the legislators who supported his legislation to enhance his candidacy for President agree with House Ways and Means Chairman, Richard Voke. Representative Voke has taken a strong stand to see cuts in the Massachusetts budgets. I congratulate Chairman Voke for his position.

I have filed "Sunset" legislation and the abolishment of the "03" accounts for construction over the past few years. Now is the time to examine our huge bureaucracies in state government and get rid of overlapping and needless government activities. I shall vote No on the fee increases and No to any tax increases! Tightening our belts is something state government must learn to do as our towns have under Proposition 2½.

Thee are too many highly paid administrators and managers throughout state government that we can eliminate. The Governor said on radio the other day that he has rehired people who left the executive branch to work for his presidential campaign. The office apparently functioned without these people, so why rehire them at salaries far higher than our much lower paid state employees.

Massachusetts government certainly is no example on the way to run a business!

Runaway government has to be stopped by the legislature!

Mary Jeannette Murray
State Representative

Selectmen took away resident's rights

To the Editor:

Monday evening Selectmen took a no action vote (2-2) with regard to the waivering of police rules and regulations.

A waiver of the rules would have permitted Police Sergeant Richard Barrow to take out nomination papers and have his name printed on the town elections ballot.

Sergeant Barrow, who has served the town for many years as a police sergeant, chairman of the recreation commission, and a regular and vocal member of town meeting, was denied his right to bring his candidacy before the people in the American way, by the very five man board of selectmen he was instrumental in creating in 1983.

Selectman Clifford Mitman said he was not in favor of policemen running in order to become head of their department. But Sergeant Barrow is in the twilight of his career. Legally, he must retire in 1990. He has been quoted as saying if elected to the board of selectmen, he trade. Hartley entered her first gymnastics class at nine.

Tiny gymnast the toast of SSL League

"My parents were told by my doctor to get me into gymnastics. I was really hyper," she laughs. Her dark eyes glisten at the remembrance. "I was very active, and my parents didn't know what to do with me. The doctor thought I could release some of that energy in gymnastics."

It was love at first sight when Hartley entered the Corrigan gym in Hanover.

"I started to do well," she recalls with obvious modesty, for in her first year she made the C team, and travelled up to the A team within two years.

It was at that time that a new coach joined the gym. Having no place to stay, Hartley's parents offered their home to Michael Harris.

The young student was now 12 years old, and practicing five hours a day, five days a week in Hanover. "I'd leave school an hour early. Practice for five hours, go home, have my dinner and do homework," she recalls. "I was a lot more into then."

The pressure was great for the young girl. Her coach worked her hard, but the rewards were flowing. At age 13, Hartley won the "all-around" in the state competition, and then repeated her performance at the regionals, a performance against gymnasts from New England, New York and Pennsylvania.

"My coach had to leave for Texas and asked me to go with him," she says. ""But I was so scared. I couldn't go."

The invitation was to train the Cohasset athlete for national, international and ultimately, Olympic competition.

"I guess I regret it a lot," she says now, still smiling as she remembers the honor of her selection. "But I didn't want to give up everything I had here at home. I loved soccer and track. And I had my friends. In Texas, it would be strictly schools and gymnastics."

Without her favorite coach, Hartley switched gyms and began to train in Waltham. The pressure mounted as she travelled to the gym every afternoon, and returned home by midnight to begin her homework.

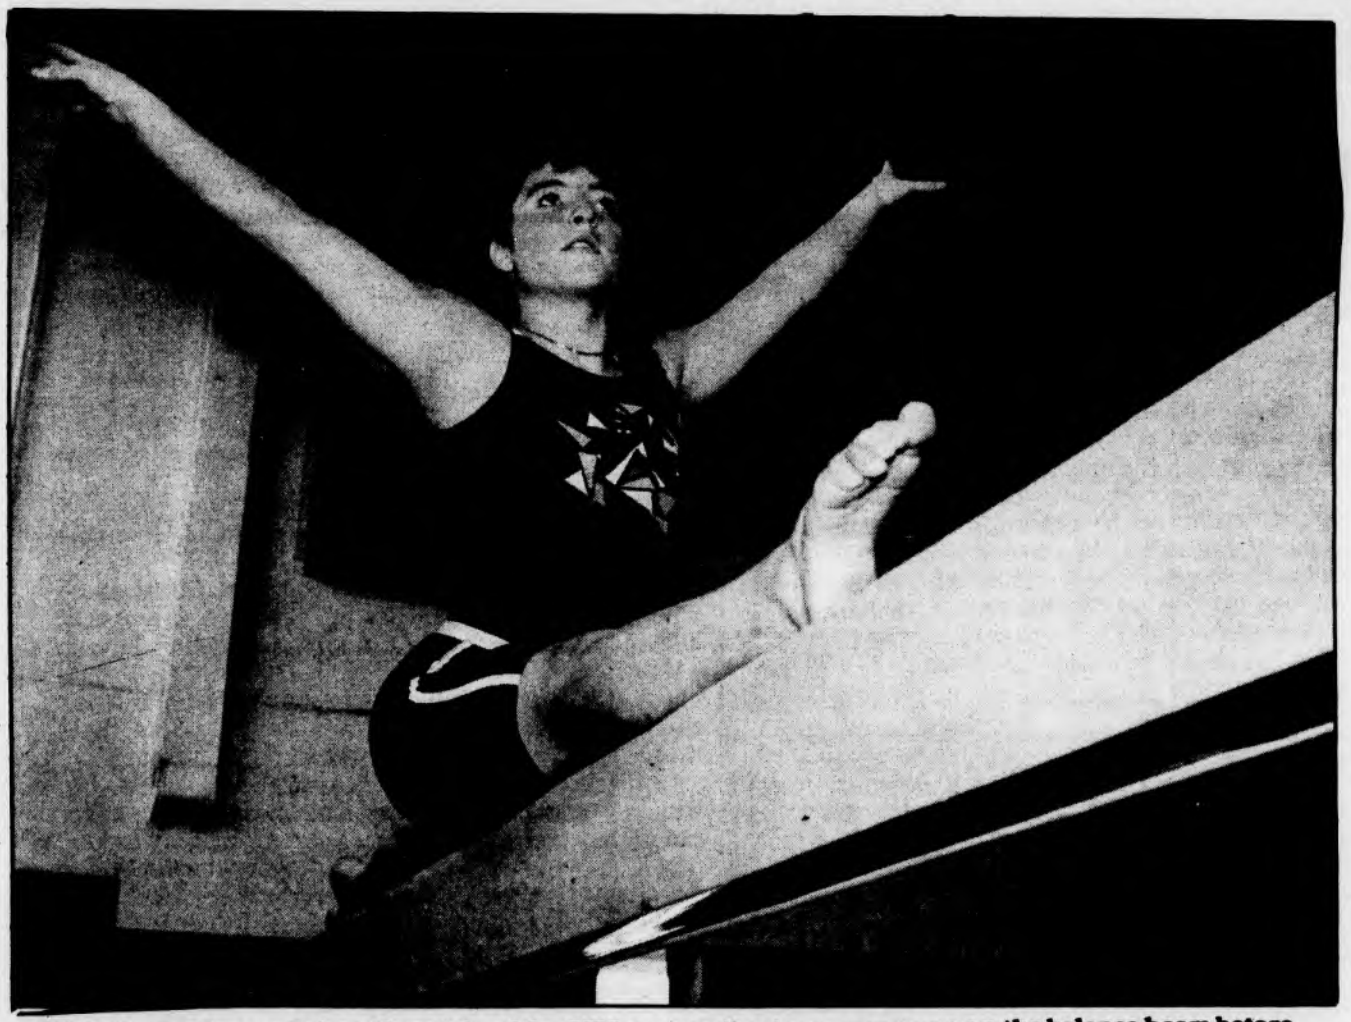
"I ended up getting hurt a lot," she says. She developed tendonitis in her ankles. And in the eighth grade, the young teenager literally "died" when the iron in her blood dropped to dangerously low levels. She fainted periodically, was rushed to the hospital after one episode, and didn't return home for a month.

"I quit gymnastics. It wasn't fun anymore. The pressure was too much."

After six months, glorious memories of her performances pulled her back into the gym. But this time, a little bit wiser and somewhat more cautious, Hartley opted for a "fun" gym in Braintree.

And that is where she has stayed - at the Ellis gym, run by George Lee and Ginger and Dave Ellis.

"They helped me get back," she says. "I never thought I'd love this sport so much. I really love it now. There's still the pressure to perform well. But they made me love it. They make you feel proud of what you accomplish, and I guess that's the difference. They're proud of me."



It hasn't all be easy, though. In 1987, Hartley suffered torn cartilage in her knee during a state meet. She had surgery, and wasn't back on the mats until September. Then she fractured an ankle and was out for another month. In February and March, she started up again and this summer, she resumed her five day- a- week practice schedule.

"Mentally, the pressure isn't there so much," a confident Hartley states. "I relax now. I used to think I could do everything naturally. Now I realize I have to use my mind, as well as my body. I guess as I got older, I got a little bit wiser.

"I love it so much, I couldn't live without gymnastics now," she adds.

Another goal for the CHS junior is to be accepted to Chapel Hill, a North Carolina university with high academic standards and an exceptional gymnastics program.

Michelle Hartley, undefeated captain of the CHS gymnastics team, warms up on the balance beam before her competition. (Staff photo by Buzz Wadsworth)

"I'm trying hard," Hartley says. "I'm taking six courses this year, including two advanced placements."

Her high school coach is also her cheerleader. "She's got what it takes," according to Sargent.

"Michelle has the enthusiasm, the drive, the stamina and the endurance that it takes to be a competitive gymnast."

In addition to her unbeatable scores, Hartley helps her coach by developing routines for the younger athletes. "She's my little assistant," Sargent explains.

"Michelle has a great attitude. She deserves to be the best. She works hard here, during the summer and at the Ellis gym. She deserves the recognition."

The spotlight is on the tiny athlete who is undefeated in South Shore League competition, and according to Sargent, is the best All-Around in the league.

"Out of the 14 league athletes who have to compete against her in that category, no one comes close," Sargent says. "She's going to be an outstanding college gymnast."

Her coach says the obvious difference is talent. But attitude also makes Hartley superior to her competitors.

"She has that polished look - that grace and charisma that all great athletes have. It makes her a standout."

Hartley admits she's "too old" to consider a shot at the Olympics. "I had that opportunity, and I didn't take it. I regret it a little, but that's okay," she says.

"I like what I'm doing now."

Resident says selectmen took away rights

would proceed with plans for retirement within six months. And after his retirement from the police department, Sergeant Barrow would be quite free to vote, without any conflict, on any issue coming before the town.

I am saddened that two selectmen, Chairman Burt Pratt and Clifford Mitman, acted politically against Sergeant Barrow. Running a sticker campaign, if Sergeant Barrow opts to do so, is difficult, almost impossible to win, and an undue hardship to foster on a dedicated citizen who happens to be a police officer.

Citizens of Cohasset are quite capable of deciding between candidates. As of this week, there would have been three people on the ballot: Selectman James Gallagher, School Committee Chairman Diana Kornet and Sergeant Richard Barrow. Now, there will be only two, barring other candidates.

Is it reasonable to ask any candidate for local public office to take an unpaid leave of absence from their employment, from the livelihood, that pays their bills, while they campaign to serve their town? Our great governor of Massachusetts did not take an unpaid leave of absence to campaign for president.

Through their vote to deny Sergeant Barrow the right to the ballot, Selectmen Pratt and Mitman have now raised other issues. Is Sergeant Barrow free to express his views in the various media available to him as a sticker candidate, if he chooses to be one? Or was their urgency only to keep Sergeant Barrow off the ballot. . .to free us from the decision of Sergeant Barrow?

I listened to President Ronald Reagan's exit speech, about democracy, about the end of dictatorships, a move for a world democracy. And after the selectmen's meeting Monday I thought. . .democracy must first be safe for Cohasset before it can be safe for the world.

Letters

In a speech to the United Nations (1958,"The Great Question") Eleanor Roosevelt said:

"Where, after all, do universal human rights begin? In small places, close to home — so close and so small that they cannot be seen on any maps of the world. Yet they are the world of the individual persons; the neighborhood he lives in; the school or college he attends; the factory, farm or office where he works. Such are the places where every man, woman and child seeks equal justice, equal opportunity, equal dignity without discrimination. Unless these rights have meaning there, they have little meaning anywhere. Without concerned citizen action to uphold them close to home, we shall look in vain for progress in the larger world."

I would like to acknowledge Town Counsel's excellent presentation of the matter, Monday night. And I would like to thank Selectman James Gallagher and Selectman Martha Gjesteby for their efforts, which I am sure are reported in great detail elsewhere in this newspaper.

Annual sixth grade writing contest winners

The following essays are award-winners in the 1989 sixth grade writing contest:

GRAMP

My grandfather is in his early eighties and is almost completely bald. He enjoys gardening, going to flea markets and nature. If you ever need help with something, he will always be there for you. When I was in fourth grade and I needed help on a poster, he jumped up with great excitement and helped me. He tries to help everyone. For instance, one day when he was going to the hospital to have his pacemaker checkup, someone needed a parking spot in a hurry and he gave them the one he had just driven into.

When I was a little girl, we loved to go for long walks together around Quincy. When I was three and four years old he used to take me to Faxon Park and other playgrounds in Quincy. He would push me high on the swings and be there to catch me when I came down the slide. When he would come to my house, he and Gram would take me to the playground at Osgood School.

My Gramp has a wonderful sense of humor. He always finds the best in everything. I can never remember ever seeing or hearing my Gramp get cross. I am really lucky to have him for a grandfather.

When he was eleven years old, my Gramp almost choked to death on a piece of timothy grass that got caught in his throat. After trying and trying, his mother was able to pull it out. When Gramp was sixty-seven he had a heart attack and almost died. A pacemaker was put in to keep his heart beating. He goes to the hospital to get a new pacemaker every two or three years. I love Gramp.

THE BLUE EYED WONDER

There is a man in my life that is important to me and I am going to write about him in this paper. He has affected my life in many ways.

This man is tall and has a large frame. He has blonde hair and is balding on top, so that the top of his head is always shiny. And his eyes are a bright clear blue, with a twinkle in them.

Every week day you will find him dressed in a very dark dignified business suit. Sometimes he wears a red tie to make his outfit brighter. On the weekends he prefers to wear casual comfortable clothing, especially jeans.

There are many characteristics that describe this man. He is a very good business man. He possesses good strong morals and ideals and is always helpful and supportive of everyone. Laughter is a basic way of his life. He is so good natured that people are always happy and laughing when they are with him. He has very strong religious beliefs. The thing that I like most about him is that he is gentile, kind and so easy to talk to.

There is almost nothing that he doesn't like. But, there are many things that he likes a lot. Most importantly he likes people and animals. He really likes kids a lot! And the children enjoy being with him also. Reading is a passion with him, it is more than something he likes. He reads all the time. He reads a book faster than anyone I know. Business is work, but it is also an enjoyment for him. He likes the challenges that it provides. Being by the ocean is special for him. He finds it fascinating and pleasurable at the same time. That is why he liked moving here to Cohasset. And last of all, he has a fondness for sports of all types. He especially likes football, basketball, and hockey. He played football and hockey in high school. And was the goalie for Northeastern University for a few years. He used his fondness for sports to help others too. He coached little leaguye hockey for several years.

As for his dislikes, they are few. But, what he really hates is dishonesty and cruelty, war, poverty, pollution, drugs and alcohol abuse, and using people in any way. These are things that I feel are wrong also. So, I guess being with him has been good for me all these years.

After reading my paper I am sure you can see why this man is very important to me. And why I am glad that he is part of my life.

GRAMPA MISCHIEVOUS

My grandfather is an interesting character. He is bald and chubby. He is about 5'8" tall and very strong. He is extremely mischievous. He is almost 80 but acts 17. He is very generous when he brings spring water from New Hampshire and gives it to other people.

When my grandfather was younger he was a professional race car driver. He did lots of crazy things like getting off the Paragon Park roller coaster when it was at its highest point. He also went up in an airplane, climbed out on the wing and waved to one of his neighbors. She fainted! Now he likes to fix cars and go to his vacation house in New Hampshire. I like to go there with him. We have a lot of fun together.

THE CARD STEALER

I used to know a very special elderly person, my grandmother. My grandmother had soft smooth skin full of wrinkles, short white hair that went down to her shoulders, a smile that warmed you up, and light brown eyes that shone every time you looked at them.

My grandmother lived in France. We usually visited her every year. When we went to my grandmother's house we usually would play cards because it was the only game we could play without the use of speech. My grandmother only spoke French and we only spoke English. If I were playing cards with my sister and if I or my sister were losing, my grandmother would steal some good cards from the deck and give it to the losing person. Once in a while my mom would try to teach me to speak French. It was difficult and I became more and more discouraged but my grandmother helped me and made me stick to it.

If I or my sister ever needed something or if we were in trouble, my grandmother would have helped. My grandmother died, I loved her and will always remember her kindness, generosity and love for me.

THE CAT THAT WALKED BY HIMSELF

My grandfather had soft, brown eyes . . . not like a cow's eyes. No, they did have a feeling of strength. On the very top of his tall body, cloud-like hair fully covered his head. I can clearly see my reflection in his glasses. As a bony face lights a pipe, the smell of tobacco fills the air. Grandpa could usually be found relaxing in his favorite chair, reading The Wall Street Journal or Barrons. He was a lawyer.

When I look back at my father's family, I imagine people behind desks. Although Grandpa Joe was lawyer, he wasn't very business-like at home. He had a great sense of humor. Grandpa Joe was overall very kind. He loved animals and had two cats, Sooty and Toot. He also loved traveling and golf, which he was very good at. He liked to think of himself as The Cat that Walked by Himself.

Grandpa Joe was an only child. When he had three daughters and a son, Grandpa Joe still traveled. In those days, parents didn't spend much time with their children. They were brought up like their father; not expressing love. When he realized his mistake it was too late. When my family came to live with him it was like a second chance. He seized the opportunity and learned how to show his love.

MY UNCLE, MY FRIEND

On August 2, 1986, I lost my uncle. Not only did I love him, look up to him and idolize him, but he was also a good friend.

My uncle grew up on Freeland Street in Mattapan. He went to high school at Catholic Memorial (C.M.) from 1960-1964. He played football and basball, but baseball was his specialty. He won the All-Scholastic First Baseman's award in 1964.

From there he went to Harvard University and continued to play football and baseball. In his sophomore year at Harvard, he was drafted by the Detroit Tigers after becoming an All-American athlete. Then he stopped playing college football and decided to focus his athletic energies in baseball.

He wouldn't leave Harvard until he earned his degree in American Government. This type of contractual agreement was highly unusual.

My uncle earned his degree from Harvard and went on to persue his childhood dream of playing professional baseball. Even though he only played for Detroit for two years, all those days of swinging that bat until his hands bled, had finally paid off.

Throughout his career, my uncle and I found a place to escape by fishing in the waters around Martha's Vineyard. One day he was out on a deep sea fishing trip twenty-five miles off shore when he suffered a massive heart attack. The Coast Guard was summoned and my uncle was air lifted to Falmouth Hospital. There he was pronounced dead at 5:25 p.m.

That sad day the world lost a tremendous athlete and I lost my uncle and my friend.

MY GRANDMOTHER

My grandma is a very enjoyable and lively person. She has a full head of white, curly hair and a pleasant smile. She's only 5 ft. 2 inches. So, I tease her about it a lot.

I would call her an outdoor person. She loves to be outside doing things. A few things that she really enjoys are swimming, golfing and hiking.

I love it when she tells me and my sister stories about when her children were young. She makes a special effort to make the stories humorous and entertaining.

She has traveled to many places and loves telling us about the countries she has been to. Once in a while, though, she starts to ramble on and on about these things until it gets uninteresting.

I enjoy going to visit her because she always has fun things planned for us. I love her because she's very unique and very special.

MY SISTER JEN

My sister, Jen is caring and fun-loving. She used to work at a hospital for very sick children. She worked with many children every day and she loved each one of them in different ways. Many of the children died and others had tragic diseases, but Jen still had hope that some of the illnesses would be cured in the future.

Now Jen just started being a teacher and I think she's a great one. She gives her students the confidence that they can do their best and to always set a goal.

Jen is fun to have around. Most of my family members don't have time to play games, but Jen always says, "sure," even with her hectic schedule.

One of Jen's favorite sports is skiing. And I ask her, "How did you get so good at skiing?" She says, "You have to practice something before you get good at it, like basketball."

When I first started skiing, I was trembling with fear. But Jen said, "You can do it!" So I started skiing down the mountain. I couldn't believe my eyes, I was skiing, actually falling. Jen made me feel real good about myself.

Of course we fight many times when Jen pours water all over me or throws salt in my hair, but that's just fun and that's what matters.

Jen can be forgetful at times, as when she locks her keys in her car three times in one day, forgets to bring her money when she goes shopping, and wears two different colored shoes.

I have never really realized how great it is to have a big sister like Jen sharing and caring until now that I'm older.

PERSONAL EVALUATION

My father is thirty-nine years old. He married my mother sixteen and a half years ago. I am the middle of three children.

After elementary school my father attended Kingston Technical High School. When he finished high school, he continued his study of mechanical engineering at the College of Art, Science and Technology.

He is a very busy man. He likes to have something to do all of the time. In most of his spare time he bicycles. He has ridden to Hartford, Connecticut twice, Cape Cod once and West Massachusetts once, each of these trips were one-hundred miles. He enjoys riding a lot. He says he does it for physical fitness, fun and mental relaxation.

My father also likes to cook gourmet dishes. My whole family loves his cooking as far as I know. He is especially good with meatloaf. Lately, he has made some fantastically delicious meatloaf.

Other than cooking gourmet food, my father is skilled in almost any kind of mechanical work. He's an expert with cars, he knows all the names for all the parts in a car's engine.

I look up to my father in many ways. I like him because he is a thoughtful and responsible man. He and my mother take care of my sister, brother and I.

He also is a team leader in the audio visual ministry at my church. There he records regular or special church services on video and audio cassettes for people that are not able to come and for the record.

JESSIE

I have a good friend named Jessie. She is one year younger than me. She has short blond hair, blue eyes, kind of short, but pretty. She has a cute smile and her eyes get twinkly when she laughs. She wears trendy clothes. She has two brothers and one sister. They have one brown dog.

Jessie has always been mischievous. Once, when she was three, she walked downtown by herself and crossed a busy street. When her mother told her not to follow her dog downtown, she replied, I didn't, the dog followed me. She is also a good hider. She can hide as well as a mouse.

Jessie has always been fun to be with. We often played games like King of the Hill, soccer, Ships, and baseball. During the summer, most of the kids on our lane would get together for a big baseball game at night. Jessie and I would be on the same team.

I was her neighbor for six years. She is usually perky and kind. Her funny sense of humor has always kept me laughing. Thinking of Jessie makes me smile.

MY GREAT GRAMPA

My great-grandfather, Blump, was living with my grandparents. We went to Connecticut to see him frequently. When we came or left, he would always sit in his wheelchair next to the window and wave to us. It seemed like he was always playing checkers. Sometimes my Dad would play him in a game of checkers, but it was a total joke. He never ever lost to Dad. In fact, I don't think he has ever lost a game of checkers against anyone. I was only five years old, and I did not know how to play checkers at all.

One day I decided to ask Blump how to play. I thought he might say no and that he didn't have time for a kid. He didn't though. He was really glad I asked. He taught me how to play, and after about four weeks of practice, I was finally good.

One day I asked him if I could play him. We played for a while and then finally I won. When I was older he told me that he had let me win. Later he told me stories about little good and evil men called Brownies. I never really understood where he got the name Brownies, but they were great stories anyway. When he was younger, he would take my Dad fishing or frogging. But as he got old, they didn't go fishing or frogging anymore.

We still always had a very good time together. One day he went to the hospital. He was there for about a week and a half when he died. I will never ever forget him though.

MY MOM

My mother is kind and loving. She seems to understand when I do something wrong. She doesn't get really angry at me, but tries to help me out.

My Mom has long grey and blonde hair and bright blue eyes. She does a lot of cleaning when company comes. She works nights at Talbots. She came from a family with little money, and she moved from place to place.

My Mom gives me the nicest gifts on my birthday and on Christmas. My Mom tries to sooth my Dad when he yells at me. My Mom likes to play games when I'm sick. She plays cards and board games with me.

My Mom likes to cook. When she cooks, she cooks up a storm. When my Mom is home she helps me with my homework.

My Mom doesn't get mad a lot. If I'm unhappy, she tries to find out what the problem is and if something is wrong.

My Mom likes to do things with me. She took me to see the stage play, "Cats." She took me to places like Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, the Circus and the Ice Capades. Recently my Mom took me to the Boston Gardens to shoot pucks on the Garden ice.

My mother is "team Mom" for my hockey team and she goes to most of my games.

My Mom also takes me to Church most Sundays.

My Mom says the day I was born was one of the happiest days of her life. She nicknamed me the "Peefer," and she's called me the "Peef" since I was born.

I love my cat, my Dad, and sometimes my brother, but mostly I love my Mom.

CHS principal honored by students

Cohasset High School principal Meg Gallagher went to school Tuesday expecting it to be just a normal day.

But it was far from that for Gallagher was guest of honor at the first annual "Principal's Day."

"I walked in and saw the sign, 'Today is Principal's Day, Greet Ms. Gallagher with a smile and a hello," said Gallagher, principal for the last three years.

And the day took off from there.

She was treated to two bouquets of blue and white balloons from Grade 7, a gift certificate to the Red Lion Inn from Grades 8 and 11, a plant from Grade 9, coffee and donuts from Grade 10, and a dozen red roses from Grade 12.

Student council officers also treated her to a special lunch, and the entire council gave her a congratulatory card and certificate.

The Massachusetts Association of Student Councils had dedicated Jan. 24 as principal's day for Massachusetts.

The M.A.S.C., the state-wide association of student councils in Massachusetts, decided to recognize principals in high schools for their efforts to promote student leadership and student government in their schools.

Gov. Michael Dukakis issued a proclamation at the State House in honor of the high school principals.

"I think it's a wonderful idea," said Gallagher, who had been assistant principal at Hingham High School for six years.

"I'm enjoying myself thoroughly. Students and teachers have been stopping by and chatting.

"I didn't know a thing about this.

"I just can't get over the thoughtfulness of the kids, not just today," she said.

"I absolutely love it here. It's just a wonderful school."

CHS principal honored by students

Cohasset High School principal Meg Gallagher went to school Tuesday expecting it to be just a normal day.

But it was far from that for Gallagher was guest of honor at the first annual "Principal's Day."

"I walked in and saw the sign, 'Today is Principal's Day. Greet Ms. Gallagher with a smile and a hello," said Gallagher, principal for the last three years.

And the day took off from there.

She was treated to two bouquets of blue and white balloons from Grade 7, a gift certificate to the Red Lion Inn from Grades 8 and 11, a plant from Grade 9, coffee and donuts from Grade 10, and a dozen red roses from Grade 12.

Student council officers also treated her to a special lunch, and the entire council gave her a congratulatory card and certificate.

The Massachusetts Association of Student Councils had dedicated Jan. 24 as principal's day for Massachusetts.

The M.A.S.C., the state-wide association of student councils in Massachusetts, decided to recognize principals in high schools for their efforts to promote student leadership and student government in their schools.

Gov. Michael Dukakis issued a proclamation at the State House in honor of the high school principals.

"I think it's a wonderful idea," said Gallagher, who had been assistant principal at Hingham High School for six years.

"I'm enjoying myself thoroughly. Students and teachers have been stopping by and chatting.

"I didn't know a thing about this.

"I just can't get over the thoughtfulness of the kids, not just today," she said.

"I absolutely love it here. It's just a wonderful school."

Learning the alphabet by hosting a Big Bear Bash

Staff photos by J. Paul MacDonald

Andre Skonvea 'B'lows some major 'B'ubbles as part of the Kindergarten class Big Bear Bash — an annual event in Marie Price's classroom.

The littlest bear invited to last week's kindergarten party was Mrs. Wendy Price and her pretty baby, Jennifer Marie.

Taylor Strecker wipes some chocolate from her teddy 'B'ear, while Brian Krupczak tends to his. The 'B'ears were allowed into the classroom for this special day at Kindergarten.

Evan Burgess attempts to create a large 'B'ubble during the alphabet party at the Osgood School.

Marie Price and her students play a game that begins with the letter 'B.' What else . . . Bingo!

'Chanticleer' at art center

The South Shore Art Center in Cohasset will sponsor a performance of "Chanticleer", a play based on a true story of Cohasset residents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Preston Clark.

The play, for children and adults, will be performed by the Freelance Players Sunday, Feb. 5 at 2 p.m.

Call the Center for ticket information.

At the turn of the century, Mr. and Mrs. B. Preston Clark of "Cuba Dam" Cohasset stopped in Sion, Switzerland on a European tour. There they persuaded the caretaker of the Castle of Tourbillon to remove the handsome medieval sculpture of the rooster that stood above the castle gate and sell it to them for twenty francs ($2).

The displaced rooster came to reside at the Clark house, by the "run" on Atlantic Avenue where he continued to haunt the family with the story of the separation from his home in Sion. He took on new mystical qualities and his story so captured the imagination of the Clark's son, Allen, that years later he and his wife Doris returned the figurehead to his rightful place in Switzerland.

This true story inspired the new musical "Chanticleer" written by Cohasset resident Priscilla Dewey, niece of Mrs. Clark.

Members of the Freelance Players rehearse for their Cohasset performance of "Chanticleer" to be performed February 5 at the South Shore Art Center.

The music has been composed by Katrina Cameron of Dedham. "Chanticleer" is directed by Mrs. Clark's great-niece, Kippy Dewey, and her great great nephew Zachary Stuart plays the role of the Rev. Allen W. Clark.

Senior center news . . .

Massachusetts Blue Cross and Blue Shield will hold an open enrollment period for Medex in February and March, 1989.

Coverage for persons enrolling in the annual open enrollment period will take effect June 1, 1989.

Medex is a supplement to Medicare, the Federal Government hospital and medical insurance program.

Quarterly rates for three Medex policies are: Medex 2 $95.19; Medex Standard $116.49; Medex 3 $156.96.

Nearly 400,000 persons age 65 and over in Massachusetts have Medex coverage, including a number of persons under age 65, who became entitled to Medicare in the 25th month of receiving Social Security disability benefits.

The open enrollment period is for the benefit of persons who declined Medex coverage when they first became entitled to it, or dropped it.

Application forms may be obtained by writing to Medex, P.O. Box 840, Blue Cross/Blue Sheild of Massachusetts, Boston, MA 02103 after Jan. 1, 1989 or submitting a coupon which will appear in several newspapers.

Medex 2 and 3, among other benefits, cover the Medicare hospital deductible that beneficiaries have to pay; also the inpatient doctor bill and coinsurance under Part B of Medicare. Medex 3 provides for prescription drug coverage, subject to a quarterly deductible; also limited inpatient private duty nursing, subject to a deductible.

Medex Standard — does not cover the Medicare hospital deductible, or inpatient doctor bill deductible; but beyond that offers all the benefits provided under Medex 3, the most popular of the three plans.

Medex upgrading

Medex subscribers are being given the opportunity to upgrade their coverage to Medex Standard or Medex 3.

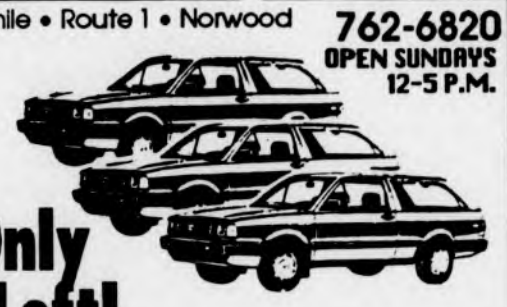
Through a mailing, they have been informed that if their first quarter 1989 bill has a due date of Jan. 1, 1989, their application MUST be received by Feb. 1, 1989 and coverage will begin April 1, 1989.

Those with a first quarter Medex bill due date of Feb. 1 MUST have their application received by March 1, 1989 and their coverage will begin May 1, 1989.

Those with a March 1, 1989 due date MUST have their application received by April 1, 1989 and their coverage will begin June 1, 1989.

Quarterly rates are: Medex 2 $95.19; Medex Standard $116.49; Medex 3 $156.96.

Medex 2 covers the Medicare inpatient hospital calendar year deductible — $560 in 1989; also the $75 calendar year deductible for INPATIENT physicians and other providers; charges; an additional 20 percent of medicare allowed charges for physicians and other providers' INPATIENT services. It does not cover prescription drugs or inpatient private duty nursing services, both of which are covered by Medex Standard and Medex 3.



Medex Standard does not cover the Medicare hospital calendar year deductible, or the $75 deductible for INPATIENT services of physicians and other providers. It will pay the 20 percent of Medicare allowed charged — after the deductible — for inpatient services.

Medex 3 covers the Medicare hospital and inpatient doctor bill deductible and inpatient physician coinsurance amount.

It also covers part B inpatient services of other providers, prescription drugs and inpatient private duty nursing services.

Images (Formerly the Bridge Program)

The South Shore Images Program is a program coordinated by the South Shore Elder Services Inc. in association with the Massachusetts Commission for the Blind.

The program is a socialization program for people age 55 and older who have vision impairment and who have been registered with the Massachusetts Commission for the Blind.

The Image Connection exists to bridge the gap between social isolation and socialization. Vision loss is a common occurrence in the elderly. In Quincy, Weymouth and Braintree alone, there are approximately 650 blind elderly, many of whom maybe socially-isolated. The Image Connection serves as their link to the community.

"Legally Blind" is a specifically defined condition applying to a person who has debilitating loss of vision when wearing the best possible prescription glasses or contact lenses.

In Cohasset we have a discussion group that meets and discusses concerns and needs of people with vision problems. We meet at the First Parish Church, 23 North Main Street, in Cohasset on the second Tuesday, February 14th at 10:00 a.m.

For more details on Programs or to volunteer please contact:

COHASSET'S BEST LUMBER YARD ISN'T IN COHASSET!!!
IT'S IN MARSHFIELD!!!
TAYLOR LUMBER CO.!!!

Just as there are different kinds of automobiles, or steaks ... so, too are there different kinds of lumber. Green lumber, (not dried) has it's place. It's usually cheaper, but its high moisture content can create problems that show up down the road. Kiln-dried lumber is lighter, stronger, and easier to handle ... and you don't have as many problems with twisting and warping later.

Look ... your time is valuable! If you're investing time in a project, start it right with quality kiln dried framing lumber from TAYLOR LUMBER.

Parts of it are here already: two temporarily-placed speakers, which will be installed permanently up on the side walls, just beyond the front set of windows. The amplifier is to be housed in a locked cabinet in the choir office. Forthcoming will be a small, unobtrusive pulpit microphone and recording equipment. The current cost estimate is $3,800. Future possibilities (if needed) include a wireless microphone for the minister and a wireless, personal listening device system for the hearing impaired. Gary, along with the Board of Trustees welcome your comments at any time. The installation is being done by Suburban TV and Appliance.

Amnesty program

January 29, representatives from Amnesty International will speak at the Sunday Service at First Parish in Cohasset.

Amnesty International is a worldwide movement of people acting on the conviction that governments must not deny individuals their basic human rights. The organization was awarded the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize for its efforts to promote global observance of the United Nations' Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Amnesty International works specifically for the release of prisoners of conscience, fair and prompt trials for all political prisoners and an end to torture in all cases. Amnesty International's effectiveness depends on its impartial application of a single standard of human rights to every country in the world. It seeks the most effective means of helping individuals whose rights have been violated.

Since it was founded in 1961, it has worked on behalf of more than 25,000 prisoners around the world.

The service begins at 10:30 a.m. After the service, the members of Amnesty International will be showing some films about their work and will be available to answer any questions.

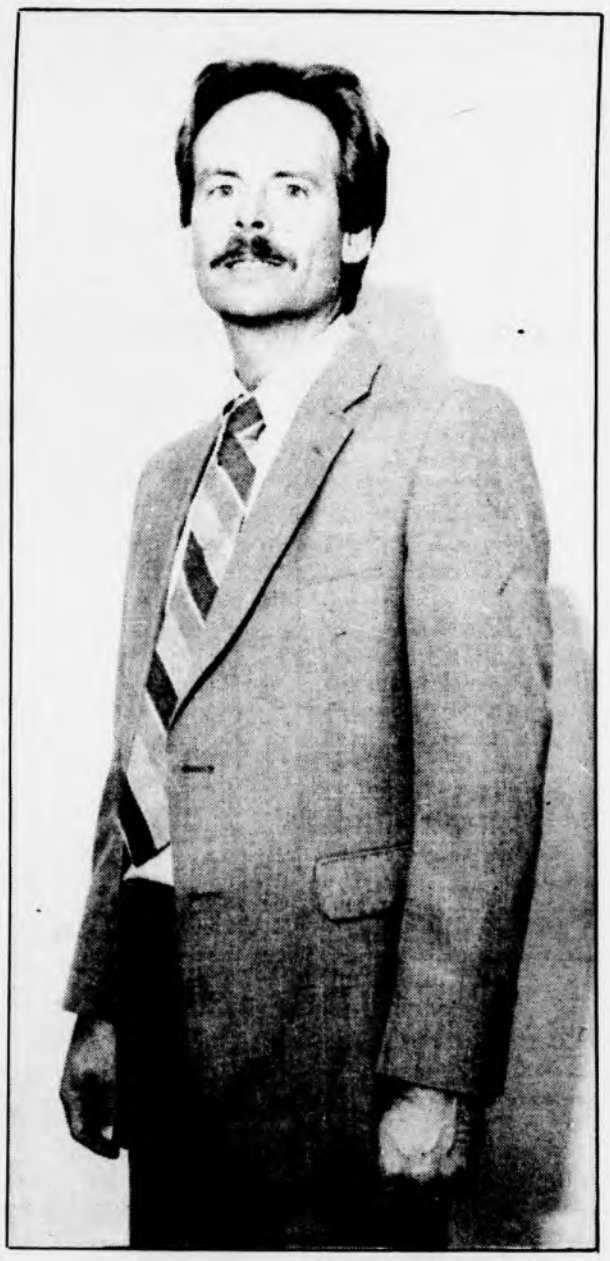
" Why Should I Advertise in the Mariner?"

Ask Russ Steele, Owner Steele Chrysler • Volkswagen • Mazda Pembroke

Located in Pembroke on Route 139 where 139 and 53 diverge, Steele Chrysler Plymouth-Volkswagen-Mazda has been a family-owned car dealership since 1966.

"I've been advertising in the Mariner papers consistently since 1985, and I get good results", says Russ Steele, President of Steele Chrysler Plymouth-Volkswagen-Mazda.

Why advertise in the Mariner when there are other ways for a car dealer to advertise? "People who get the Mariner paper read it", says Mr. Steele. "It has real articles about real, local people--it's not a paper full of ads with articles only as filler".



But what about reader response from his ads in the Mariner? Russ Steele says, "I run seasonal service coupons, for such things as fall maintenance, spring tuneup, and so on. In 1986, I remember that virtually the only coupons returned were from Mariner newspapers".

"My ads are always crisp and well-produced. There have been many times when I've handed my Mariner advertising rep a bunch of scribbles and doodles, and she miraculously makes it into a great ad!"

He observes," An amazing number of women read the paper, and when over 50% of new car purchase decisions are made by women, it only makes sense to advertise in the Mariner".

Finally, Russ Steele says "My advertisements in the Mariner pay for themselves. I get a return on my investment". He adds, "In this area, there are many choices for advertising. I can't run ads everywhere, so I have to run in the media source where I get results. I've found that the Mariner is the source that does it for us".

So why advertise in the Mariner? For the same reason that Steele Chrysler Plymouth-Volkswagen-Mazda does: it works.

Head coach Torin Sweeney figured wtih the experience we had coming back, the Cohasset High School wrestling team would be very competitive throughout the 1989 season.

At the moment, Sweeney looks like a genius as his club is producing big numbers—a 6-2-1 overall record and a 4-1 mark in the South Shore League, tied for second place with Rockland.

"I entered the season with an open-minded attitude. So far, everything has worked out perfectly, particularly the fewer injuries," said Sweeney, whose club posted a 7-9 record last year. Two years ago, Cohasset enjoyed an 11-win campaign.

"Our goal is to win more than 11 games this year," added Sweeney.

The experience has come from tri-captains John Rhodes and Paul and Chris Froio. Currently, Paul is the only Cohasset wrestler who remains undefeated (8-0-1) at the 160-pound weight division.

Meanwhile, twin brother, Chris, had his unbeaten record (at the 171-pound class) snapped when he suffered two losses last week.

After missing several matches due to an injury, Rhodes (119) returned to the Skipper lineup with consecutive victories over Hingham and Foxboro last Saturday. Another wrestler who has come back to provide a supporting role is Jim Donohue (152), compiling a 2-2 record in four starts.

Sweeney acknowledges the contribution of first-year varsity performer Pat Conroy (187).

"Pat has been doing a fine job for us, considering he wrestles against a lot of tough opponents," he said.

Other Cohasset wrestlers include Tim Pierotti (125), Dennis Mulligan (135), Adam Hill (145), Nathan Fiore (119) and Billy Baird (112).

In a recent Division Two Boston Globe poll, Cohasset was ranked fourth out of 19 schools.

Cohasset will be tested this week when they host first-place leader Whitman-Hanson (12-2).

HOCKEY

It was certainly a week to remember for Jim Gallagher. The senior forward accounted for 14 out of Cohasset's 17 points in two games.

Last Saturday evening, Gallagher scored seven goals and assisted on five more to guide Cohasset to a 13-5 romp over Dennis-Yarmouth. Gallagher's teammate, Brian Pompeo, added five goals to fuel the attack as well.

Three nights earlier, Gallagher broke a 2-2 tie with 8:19 remaining and scored into an empty net with one second left, giving Cohasset (5-5-1 overall) a 4-2 victory over Randolph.

Pompeo, meanwhile, collected three assists and a goal in the South Shore League win.

SKIING

Two Cohasset skiers captured the individual meet, but Waltham High School provided the depth as they clinched the overall team total.

Cohasset's Mike Suhrbier covered the Prospect Hill course in 14.33 seconds to win the first Mass. Bay Ski League meet of the season January 17.

Jeff Fergus of Waltham was second (14.84) in the individual race. Waltham finished the overall team standings with 190.5 points, while Cohasset placed second with 118.

On the girls' side, Katie Lord of Cohasset led the downhillers, winning in 13.17 seconds but Waltham grabbed team honors again.

TEAM RESULTS:

Boys: 1. Waltham 190.5; 2. Cohasset 118; 3. Oliver Ames 105.5; 4. Dover-Sherborn 99; 5. Westwood 94; 6. Xaverian 66; 7. Brookline 61.5; 8. Newton South 55; 9. Wellesley 28; 10. Milton 20.5.

BOYS' BASKETBALL

Guard Jim Quatromoni scored 25 points—12 on three-pointers—helping Hull break into the win column with a 63-60 South Shore League victory over Cohasset January 17. Moreover, it was Hull's first victory over Cohasset in eight seasons.

Joe Lamberti added 14 points and John Gould scored nine for Hull, which battled back from a one-point deficit early in the fourth quarter, hitting eight of 10 free throws in the closing minutes.

For Cohasset (2-9 overall), junior forward Jim Reidy chipped in with 15 points, while Jeff Bryant had 14 points and 15 rebounds and Lincoln Marsac added 11 points.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

Senior foward Sara Bishop scored eight of her game-high 16 points in the third quarter to trigger a 10-2 run which powered host Cohasset (6-6) to a 49-31 decision over Abington January 20.

Amanda Church added eight points and hauled down 10 rebounds for the winners.

GYMNASTICS

Cohasset's Michelle Hartley won three events and took all-around honors but Duxbury's depth gave the Green Dragons the South Shore League meet victory, 113-109.1, January 19.

Senior captain Heather Tenney set a personal best in the floor exercise (8.0) for Duxbury.

Town officials warning: brace now for override

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The only way to keep town services intact and avoid budget cuts in those departments is to ask voters to again override Proposition 2 1/2, town officials agreed last week.

At a meeting called last week by the advisory committee, members of seveal town departments talked about the need for an override, and whether townspeople would support such a measure.

Although the town's operating expenses in all departments are the same or less than last year's level, contract salaries and fixed costs within those budgets have escalated the town's financial problems.

Advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke explained that health insurance will increase by $259,000 next year. The pension fund will increase by 31 percent, and the new fire department contract includes a 25 percent increase because of the retroactive raise hikes. The school department budget has been presented with a nine percent increase, Goedecke stated, creating an inflation figure of $1.44 million over last year's budget in those four areas alone.

"That figure," she said, "represents 13 percent of last year's total budget. And those are just the increases we know about.

"I had a definite feeling that we'd be facing an override this year - passing the fire department contract (at the fall special town meeting) would put us in this setting."

"How this fire department budget blew through with such incredible increases without any contact with town boards trying to plan for the future is beyond me," advisory committee member Ray Kasperowicz said. "We have to have more communication with the personnel board - we have to know what contracts are coming up.

"It's our responsibility to do our homework," he said.

"I think we're facing an override," Town

Barrow to pursue court injunction

The Cohasset Police Union Local 641 voted Wednesday afternoon to pursue an injunction against the Town of Cohasset to waive the police department's rules and regulations.

The injunction, if granted, will suspend the department's regulation prohibiting an officer from campaigning for paid, political office. That action would allow Richard Barrows, a Cohasset Police sergeant, to enter the race for selectman without having to take a leave of absence from the department.

Police Officer Paul Laugelle, who was president of the local union in 1983-84 when the department rules were created, will obtain affadavits from officers and will contact the International Brotherhood of Police Officers to further pursue the injunction.

Sgt. Barrows intends to have a response to this legal action by early next week.

In a 2-2 vote last week, selectmen took no action

Computer melodies

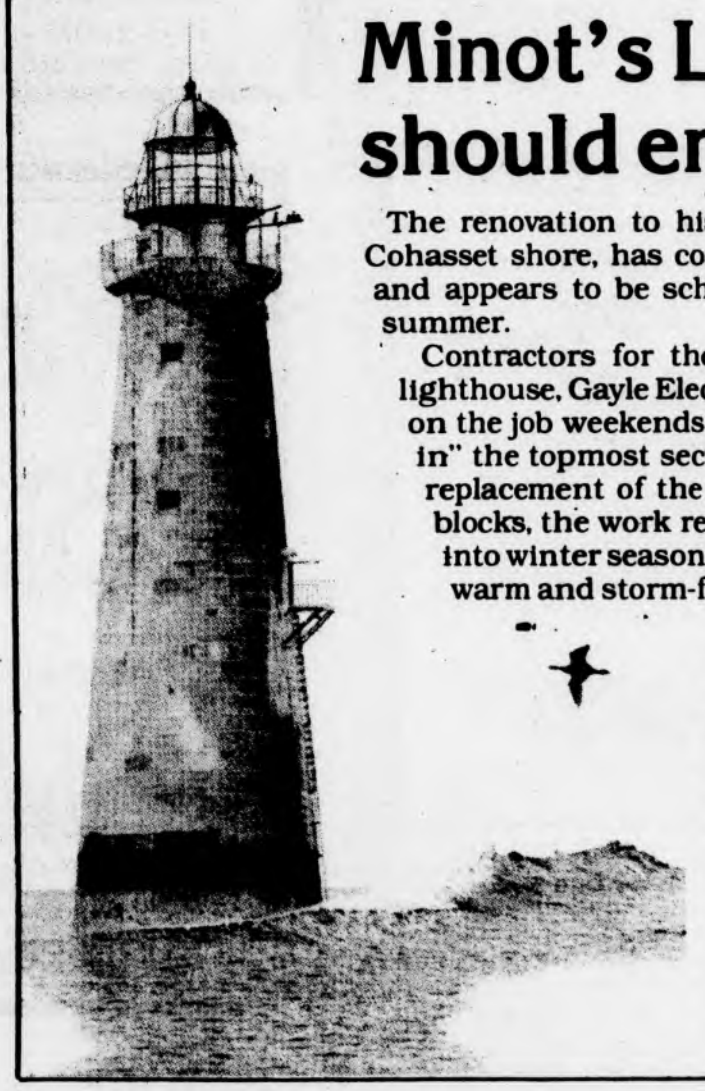
Cohasset students are making beautiful music with the help of a computer.



The MacIntosh Plus is part of the new MIDI (Musical Instrument Digital Interface) Studio at Cohasset Jr-Sr High School which allows students to create musical compositions.

With the help of a Macface Interface, the computer is hooked up to a Roland D-10 Multi Timaral Linear Synthesizer which can produce sounds from drums to strings to brass to woodwinds.

"All the instruments of the orchestra are in there," said Collen Foley, director of bands for instrumental music.

"There are 128 sounds in the machine."

Minot's Light renovation should end by summer

The renovation to historic Minot's Ledge Lighthouse, off the Cohasset shore, has continued through fall and winter months, and appears to be scheduled for completion early this coming summer.

Contractors for the renovation of the 129-year-old granite lighthouse, Gayle Electric Company of Whippany, N.J., have been on the job weekends through December and January to "close in" the topmost section of the light. Following last summer's replacement of the damaged Watch Room with new granite blocks, the work reassembling the top of the light continued into winter season. Workers have been aided by the unusually warm and storm-free weather experienced in recent months.

Above the new Watch Room, or topmost room of the stone structure, Minot's Lantern House has been reassembled using original materials carefully saved when the light was disassembled. Deck plates, window frames (called "mullions") and railings have been put in place, and Minot's unique copper domed roof now has been reinstalled, as has the finely crafted globe of the copper originally made in the mid-1800's by E.B. Badger, Boston coppersmith.

Among the remaining tasks for the lighthouse workers is the replication of the Watch Room's inner brick wall, originally formed of specially constructed curved bricks. Work at the lighthouse now has been suspended until warmer weather returns in spring.

No trash-picking at landfill

The Board of Health adopted a regulation June 16, prohibiting scavenging or "trash-picking" of whiteware on the face of the landfill.

Scavenging is prohibited for a variety of reasons, one of which is the litter problem caused by sorting through the trash. This regulation will be strictly enforced.

The board again reminds citizens that all trash must be tightly secured in large trash bags. (Bio-degradable bags are recommended.) A serious litter problem exists at the Cedar Street landfill. Homeowners should avoid using the landfill on extremely windy days.

Citizens will be kept posted on the upcoming ground-breaking for the transfer station and on a gala recycling promotional weekend.

Appliance dumping fee

Beginning February 15, there will be a $10 fee for each appliance disposed at the Cedar Street Municipal Landfill.

Residents are instructed to obtain the permission of the landfill supervisor for any appliance they wish to place in the whiteware pile. He will collect the fee (checks are preferred, made payable to the Town of Cohasset) and then direct the person to the area of disposal.

The Board of Health has found this fee necessary because the contractor who services the whiteware will be charging the town for removal and disposal. No appliances such as refrigerators, washing machines, dryers, stoves etc. will be accepted without payment.

Coleman and Lamp on cable

The guests on "Cohasset Talks: Person to Person," Thursday, Feb. 2, 8 to 9 p.m. on Channels 3, 53 are Ken Coleman, Voice of the Red Sox Radio and Dennis Lamp, Red Sox pitcher.

King Award dinner

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will present its fourth annual Forrest E. King Award at a dinner Feb. 15 at Kimball's-By-The-Sea.

The award, named for the late Forrest E. King, longtime proprietor of King Jewelers in Cushing Plaza, is presented annually to the chamber member who has demonstrated during the year the highest standards of business ethics, management, employee and public relations and civic responsibility consistent with the goals of the Chamber of Commerce.

It goes to the member whose actions have reflected favorably upon the membership and to the credit of the member, their business organization and the Cohasset community.

Nominees are Joanne Winters, Leo Fiore and Robert Davenport.

Liquor license hearing

Selectmen will hold a hearing February 6 to determine whether a liquor license currently held by the Central Market will be revoked.

The Main Street store was scheduled to be leased to Kevin McManus of Scituate. The store, which has been vacant for several months, is currently owned by North Scituate Corp. That corporation now plans to sell the entire business block. The decision to sell the building, which includes the Central Market, Dependable Cleaners and Kit 'n Kaboodle, "in no way reflects upon the integrity and acumen of Kevin McManus," Donald Bates, president of the corporation, stated in a letter to selectmen.

According to Executive Secretary Gergory Doyon, the state allows one retail liquor license per 5,000 population. Cohasset currently has four licenses.

Selectman Cliff Mitman suggested this would be an opportune time to eliminate one of those licenses. "This is the chance to do something so someone will not buy something thinking they have a liquor license," he said. "As far as I'm concerned we have plenty (of licenses)."

Mitman said if selectmen are given valid reasons to grandfather the Central Market liquor license, he would go along. "But if there is no reason, I certainly wouldn't continue it," he noted.

Under state statute, once a liquor license is revoked, a new applicant cannot request it and the board may not grant it again.

Station design contract

Selectmen voted Monday night to award a $7,000 contract to architects Strekalovsky and Holt of Hingham to design schematic plans for the police and fire station renovation project.

The plans will be presented to the April 1 town meeting. The complete project will probably cost the town between $700,000 and $800,000, according to study committee chairman Barbara Moore, although a final cost will not be known until the preliminary plans are completed. Town meeting will vote whether to appropriate the money for the project.

According to Moore, the renovation project will bring the police and fire station up to state code. Facilities for female officers will be provided, along with handicapped-accessible facilities. There will be additional space provided for filing and police evidence, Moore said. The only renovations to the building will be to update the heating system and to bring the entire structure up to building code standards.

Last spring, town meeting defeated an article calling for a $1.1 million station renovation project.

Selectmen awarded the design contract to the Hingham architects, contigent upon the approval of town counsel. The board thanked the police and fire station study committee for their work on the project.

Injunction pursued

on a request by Sgt. Barrows to rescind the regulation which prohibits an officer from campaigning for paid, political office. The police sergeant, who is planning to retire sometime this year, refused to take a leave of absence from the department until the April 8 election.

Furniture refinishing

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a furniture refinishing course to be taught by Kenneth Sargent, beginning during early February.

Classes will meet from 9 to 11 a.m. Thursday mornings. The fee for the four-week, eight-hour program will be $35 per participant. Classes will be limited in size; each person will receive as much individual attention as necessary.

Participants should bring a piece of furniture (ideally a chair or small table), that they wish to refinish.

Participants will be required to bring some supplies, others will be provided.

More candidates in local election

The field is getting crowded as more candidates filed nomination papers this week in preparation for the April 8 election.

There are two, three-year terms available on the board of selectmen.

The candidacy of Richard Barrow has been put on hold. Mary Deveney, Barrow's campaign manager, said the committee discussed plans but no decisions have been reached. "We're looking at alternatives to a sticker campaign," she explained. Although Barrow has not taken out nomination papers from the town clerk's office, Deveney said "there will be a campaign."

Barrow, who is a Cohasset police sergeant, will have to take a leave of absence from the department if he decides to enter the selectman's race. Selectmen refused last week to rescind the department rule which stipulates that an officer must take a leave from the department while running for paid, political office. Once the election is over, even if the officer is elected, he can be reinstated to the department.

Edwin "Ned" Tebbetts of Jerusalem Road took out nomination papers for a three-year term on the board of selectmen.

Tebbetts has been chairman of the capital outlay committee for the past four years. He has been a member of that committee for the past eight years.

A former principal actuary for pension plans at New England Mutual Life Insurance, he is currently retired from the company and is self-employed as an investment counselor. Tebbetts holds a mechanical engineering degree from MIT, a master's degree in mathematics from the University of Michigan, and last spring he received a master's degree in political science from the J.F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard.

"Part of the problem today," Tebbetts said, when asked why he was running for selectman, "is that some of our influential leaders have difficulty grasping the financial implications of what's going on."

Tebbetts explained that the town's financial crisis, like that of many other towns in this state, was created through a depletion of the federal revenue-sharing sources along with the declining percentage of state revenues. While the revenues have been decreasing annually, local income from new building is also declining, he said.

"But we still need to maintain services," he said, noting that if the override is defeated this spring, "a lot of people may not realize what serious cuts, what tragic cuts will occur in our town services."

Diana Kornet, a nine-year member of the school committee, is a candidate for a three-year term on the board of selectmen. Kornet said her emphasis as a selectman will be to focus on the continuing need to financially support the public school system. "Our students are the future of this community," she said. "And I'm concerned they are not being heard."

Incumbent Selectman James Gallagher is running for re-election. The self-employed painter said there are several municipal projects he would like to finish in a second term on the board.

There are currently three candidates for two, three-year terms on the school committee.

Incumbent C. Christopher Ford will be seeking re-election to the committee. There are two other candidates, H. Edward Brennock Jr. and Ralph D. Kidder.

Currently, there are two candidates for one five-year term on the Cohasset Housing Authority. Incumbent Joanne Young Nawn, who is seeking re-election to the authority, is being challenged by Anthony J. Finegan, who took out nomination papers for the office.

Library trustee Barbara M. Power will be running for another three-year term on the board. Currently, there are no opponents in that race.

Health board incumbent Sharon L. Becker has filed nomination papers for re-election. There are no other candidates at this time.

Henry A. Rattenbury has filed nomination papers for a three-year seat on the board of sewer commissioners. Incumbent commissioner F. Charles DeSantis Jr. has not taken out nomination papers for the position.

All nomination papers must be taken out by February 23 at 5 p.m. The papers must be returned with 50 signatures by Monday, Feb. 25 at 5 p.m.

Pre-School puppet show

Once a month at the Cohasset Community Center, puppeteer Pat Boylan delights pre-schoolers and their moms with her colorful, creative puppet shows.

This month's show, "The Tortoise and the Hare," will be held at the Center Friday, Feb. 3 at 10:30 a.m. Admission is $2 at he door.

Boylan performs her shows with a breezy informality that encourages children to become involved in the stories, almost as though they were the characters themselves! She invites her young audiences to come "backstage" and meet the puppets, and chats with them informally about how they too can become puppeteers.

Future puppet shows include "The Princess and the Dragon" (March 3), "The Grasshopper and the Ants" (April 7) as well as shows on May 5 and June 2 (TBA). All shows are held on Friday mornings at 10:30 a.m.

Officials warn that override is necessary

Accountant Matthews stated, although she declined to state a specific total. Matthews said this year's override would be "similar to" the $600,000 general override supported by the town last spring.

But Selectman James Gallagher brought a different perspective to the meeting. In conversations he's had with residents, Gallagher said many people are finding it difficult to cope with rising taxes. "To them, $200 or $300 is a lot of money (in property tax increases). It's getting hard for me to say we're going for another override. Maybe we could take a breather this year and go for it next year.

"They see the services their getting from the town, but they don't see increases in those services. We need to explain why."

"I hear the same thing around town," advisory member Jill O'Donnell said. "The problem I see - is it going to pass. I am hearing very negative things but I do not see any way not to do it."

But Matthews warned that without the override this spring, town budgets would have to be slashed by "at least" 20 percent.

"Maybe we have to make it clear what would happen if we didn't get an override," Goedecke noted. "They would have to see what would happen if we get less."

And townspeople should be warned this is not the end to the town's fiscal woes. Advisory committee member Christine Bassett predicted the town "will be in the same situation in 1991.

"So, rather than saying we have to have an override, lay it out to the people of Cohasset - these are the contract obligations we have and they're not going to go away after this year. Some of these are longterm contracts - it's just a situation the town is going to have to face."

Assessor James Lagrotteria agreed with the gloomy fiscal outlook. Homes are selling for less there year and the new growth figure will be less than the previous year with $10 million in new construction. "Last year it was twice that number," he noted. The only hope for assessors, he stated, was higher revenues from the property revaluation.

The assessor also noted that the town is being hit with property tax abatements from people who were vacationing in Florida last year when the 1988 overide was approved. "We just met with 14 homeowners who didn't understand (their tax bills). They had no idea that the increase was related to the override," he said.

"We shouldn't scare people" about the prospects of defeating an override, Lagrotteria said, "like telling people if they don't fund the budget, "police will not come to my door.' Let's be positive about this."

Advisor O'Donnell suggested that if town officials talked about the results of an override defeat and 20 percent budget cuts, "maybe word will filter out what would happen."

The advisory committee will recommend to selectmen that the town election, including the override question, be scheduled April 8 following the April 1 town meeting. Selectmen must decide on the date and the form of the override question.

"Last year's (override ballot) form was very successul," Selectman Burt Pratt noted. "We shouldn't fool around with success - we should have as few questions as possible."

Several town officials in attendance suggested ways in which town departments could withstand budget cuts without reducing personnel. Kasperowicz suggested that department heads should be asked what is absolutely needed, what would maintain the status quo, and what would be a desirable, but not necessary item within their budget.

Goedecke suggested that user fees, such as the harbor mooring fees and the landfill sticker fees, be increased this year. "The cost would be borne more by the user and less by the town as a whole," she stated. "Our landfill costs have to be addressed. I recommended the board of health look at the sticker fees and use that as a way for users to take advantage of the transfer station."

A increase in the mooring fee, she noted, would require a bylaw change.

"the way we present an override is as important as the fact that there is an override," advisor Bassett added. "And this is not a one-shot deal. It's important we reveal what we had for resources, what our operating budgets were, where we stood last year and where we stand now and get a sense of what they want us to do."

School Supt. Stephen Hart noted that "people tend to accuse you (school officials) of being emotional. But if we're looking at a $1 million cut, it's only obvious that we're going to have to cut teachers."

Advisory chairman Goedecke said the committee will continue its review of the proposed FY'90 budgets, while they continue to discuss the override process. It will be up to selectmen to decide whether an override will actually take place, and what that form will be, she explained.

School budget review continues with request for new teacher

The school committee will probably wind up its budget deliberations Monday night, Feb. 6, according to School Supt. Stephen Hart.

"Then a public hearing will be held and the whole budget reviewed," said Hart.

A school committee vote could come at the public hearing or at another meeting, he said.

The school committee held its second night of budget deliberations Jan. 30. Budgets of the Deerhill School and five departments at Cohasset High School were covered.

Last week, the Osgood and All District budgets were discussed, as were growth budgets, or "wish lists," for both.

The Deerhill budget includes $28,000 for a new sixth grade teacher because of an increase in enrollment.

Hart said that there are currently 64 children in the sixth grade, and next year 92 are projected.

"That will bring it up to four teachers at each grade," he said.

There is also a substantial increase, of $495 to $1,120, for an additional number of reading text books for the fourth grade, said Hart.

The growth budget for the school includes $5,000 for new language arts materials to help introduce a Writing as a Process program, and $2,000 for a summer curriculum workshop for teachers investigating what is available for adoption.

The items were submitted by Hart for consideration if funds are available.

A capital budget item of $150,000 for new windows at the front of the building will probably be submitted as a separate item next year, according to Hart.

The regular budget for the Deer Hill School also includes $2,500 for automating the library, and $2,100 for replacing draperies in classrooms, added Hart.

Computers for use in the classroom were among the items discussed in the high school budget, Hart said.

The foreign language department is requesting $2,200 for one computer, English Department, $2,900 for two additional computers, and math department $4,200 for four computer programmers.

"A good amount of time was spent discussing computers," said Hart.

"School committee members were interested in what their uses would be.

"They are a real necessity for students as they go on and become computer literate.

"Members seemed satisfied with the explanation of their use."

The high school budget also includes $3,700 for new math textbooks.

"There is also a large increase in social studies textbooks for the eleventh grade," said Hart.

"Modern World History textbooks are $26 each," he said.

"It came up in discussion how expensive books are.

"An algebra and trigonometry book is $28 each." The science department budget was discussed as well.

Also during the nearly three-hour meeting, Mrs. Karen Hettstrom and Mrs. Maureen Santoro were appointed as part time kindergarten instructional aides.

Questions about state aid

While town officials huddle in closed session preparing court strategy, others wonder whether there will be any state money available to renovate the former estate of the late George E. Curtis.

John Muncey, chairman of the Cohasset Housing Authority, said the authority "doesn't want to go out on a limb" and apply for state financing for the property. The authority voted in November to apply for Chapter 689 state money to renovate a home on the estate for retarded residents.

They have not made that application, Muncey said this week, "because we're waiting to see what the state is doing about this project. Right now, everything is on hold."

Also on hold, according to Muncey, is the authority's plans to renovate the former Trettis property on Elm Street into a residence for retarded adults. Last year, the state approved the plan and awarded the authority $300,000 in Chapter 689 funds for the project.

Muncey said while that money sits in a bank, the state has yet to approve the purchase and sales agreement for the former single-family residence located next to the fire station. "They said they are re-evaluating the situation," Muncey said, noting the authority planned to begin renovations this spring. "We have an architect all lined up and ready to go and we have the money, but the state told us a month ago they want to re-evaluate it. They won't sign the purchase and sales agreement, so we can't move on anything yet."

As far as the Curtis Estate project is concerned, Muncey said, "we're just waiting to see what the state wants us to do."

At a probate court hearing held earlier this month, the housing authority's attorney was not allowed into a closed door meeting with Judge James Lawton, Asst. Attorney General Gwen O'Sullivan and Curtis trustee James DeGiacomo.

"At this point," Muncey said, "I'm not sure what's going on, and I really don't see the point in applying for funds the state doesn't have."

At a November, 1988 meeting between selectmen and other interested parties in the Curtis Estate project, a state official agreed there may be no money available to implement the town's proposal for the Curtis Estate.

At that meeting, Suzanne Barclay, regional manager of the Executive Office of Cities and Development, explained that some types of funding, particularly for special needs housing, may not be available now because of the state budget problems. Although the state still encourages applications, Barclay said the availability of money will depend on whether a bonding issue is passed by the state legislature.

In addition, the shortage of state money may have affected the grant recently awarded to study the feasibility of the town's Curtis Estate project.

The state Executive Office of Communities and Development recently awarded the town a $9,000 grant to study the feasibility of the Curtis Estate project. About a week ago, however, the state requested the money be withheld until the scope of the project is re-evaluated.

According to Doyon, "everything is up in the air right now" regarding the feasibility study.

The grant, he explained, was to be used to "conduct a conceptual study of the proposed use of the property." That study would include soil tests, an analysis of the existing buildings - an "overall evaluation" of the property, Doyon said.

"About a week and a-half ago, we had a phone call saying that the money was being held up so the scope of the study could be revised. Right now we're waiting for that revised scope," he said.

Although EOCD did not specify the reason for the revision, Doyon speculated it could be an effort to "hold costs down."

The executive secretary admitted he was "getting a little impatient. I will request the state follow up quickly on the status of this."

For the past two weeks, selectmen have scheduled closed executive sessions with town counsel to talk about the probate court litigation involving the Curtis Estate project. The estate trustees have petitioned the court to break the terms of the Curtis will, so they can sell the 53-acre property to a private developer. The town has interceded in the case, asking the attorney general to recommend that the housing authority be awarded the property and $2 million in assets to provide housing for the homeless, the mentally retarded, the abused and low income families.

The MIDI System is nothing short of revolutionary, according to Foley.

"It changes the way people think of music and work with it," she said.

"The kids are loving it, and I'm loving it."

The system allows the computer to drive the synthesizer, acording to Foley. It uses concertware software disks.

"There are lots of great things you can do," she said.

"You can print out notated music."

The $1,100 synthesizer was acquired last year, said Foley, and the $1,800 MacIntosh Plus came two weeks ago.

"We used the amplifier we already had," she said. A printer was also available.

The studio is available to students in grades seven to 12.

"They are lining up to use it," said Foley, a teacher at the junior-senior high school for two years.

"They are thinking about sound and creating in a very different way."

All of the junior and senior band students are using the system for their mid-term, added Foley.

"We're asking them to take a theme, for instance from Beethoven, and have them turn it inside out, to roll up their sleeves and play with changes," she said.

Foley said the system eliminates hours of tedious work.

"You used to have to sit at a piano and write out pieces by hand," she said.

Instead, students can type in the notes on the computer, or play them on the synthesizer. The computer will record them and play them back out loud.

"They can hear the results of the sound immediately," said Foley.

She said that about half of the students already know how to use a computer.

"A lot of them instantly pick it up because it is like word processing," she said.

"A few haven't had any experience and are afraid of it, but with a little coaxing they are ok.

"I knew it would go over well," said Foley.

"It has met and surpassed my wildest dreams.

"Every day we learn something about it.

"It challenges them and me.

"Faculty members are using it, too."

These CHS students are composing music with some help from a computer. The musicians include: (l to r) Corrina Minnan, Erin Lennon and Amanda Van Vleck.

The system can also be used for such things as inventory, printing out tests and "a lot of administrative things," according to Foley.

Students are also writing soundtracks for videos for audio visual studies, according to Foley.

"Dr. Jack Packard, who is in charge of audio visual and also teaches English, would like to have a similar set-up," she said.

"He has made the editing studio available for music videos."

Career-wise, that can help students interested in film scoring, advertising or recording technology, according to Foley.

Foley said that the MIDI line has been around for about five years.

"It seems to be exploding now," she said. "It's really taken off

"The prices are more affordable.

"Professionals used the system before in composing, arranging and performing."

All junior high school students have to take some kind of music class, according to Foley, but high school students don't have such a requirement.

"A lot of kids are in band though," she said.

"The kids in chorus will eventually use it, (MIDI) too.

"Anyone who uses this will benefit. Faculty members as well.

"It's a tremendous thing to have here, and a wave of the future in education."

Foley said she can foresee the need for another MIDI studio.

"It's used so much now," she said.

"It's one of the most important pieces of equipment we have."

Chiropractic for Health

A WOMAN'S CONCERN
Much as they do to relieve backaches and headaches, women often reach for a pill when trying to combat menstrual cramps. However, there is another option open to women. Doctors of chiropractic use manipulation not pills to loosen up muscles in an attempt to overcome menstrual cramps. During the procedure, the doctor stretches and manipulates the patient's spine, both vertebrae and muscles. To loosen up the muscles before manipulating them, ultrasound sensors may be placed on the afflicted area. The manipulation frees the nerve pathways between the vertebrae in the spine. This allows the impulses from the brain to properly control hormones and other regulatory chemicals of the body. In the end, reduced muscle tension and the release of endorphins may help to relieve pain from cramps.
The science of chiropractic effectively deals with many discomforts that we all experience. Chiropractic utilizes a natural, knifeless and drugless approach to return a state of total well being and comfort. Minot's Light could be finished by summer

Renovation workers have encountered the same hazzards faced by the light's original construction crews more than a century ago; calm seas are needed to go from small boat to the light's only means of access; its high exterior ladder. During fall months workers sometimes remained at the lighthouse for several days at a time, "camping out" in the tower, with modern conveniences not available to their 19th century predecessors, including propane heaters, generator, telephone and television. Upon one occasion the Gayle crew "rode out" an early season storm that sent waves breaking against the tower to the 90 foot high parapet upon which the men stood. A spokesman for the workers commented "each wave caused the entire tower to give a shudder; it has been doing that for the last 130 years." Minot's unique engineering permits some flexibility in the stone structure, much as modern skyscrapers are designed to sway slightly when buffeted by high winds. The experience of riding out a storm on the famous offshore light was a first for the workmen; upon which they had previously worked on lighthouses located on high ledges or on points of land, protected from the full onslaught of stormy seas. This summer, following completion of the reconstruction, the U.S. Coast Guard will reinstall Minot's solar-powered lantern, with the same characteristic 1-4-3 signal so famous to seafarers and watchers on the shore.

This years marks the 200th anniversary of the first lighthouse built in America, and the year has been officially designated as "American Lighthouse Bicentennial Year." Observances of the bicentennial will be held nationwide, this summer.

Minot's Ledge Lighthouse should be back in service for the Bicentennial observances next August.

We've been warned

We can't say we haven't been warned this year. Last year's picture of financial doom and gloom was painted rather quickly, after the new town accountant discovered the town budget was short by about $600,000.

The warning that another Proposition 2 1/2 override would be necessary in 1989 was first raised during the 1988 override discussions. Since that time, town officials repeated the warning, saying that the new fire department retroactive contract would help trip the override mechanism.

And last week, at a meeting called by the advisory committee, town officials agreed that another override would be needed this spring. The "fixed costs" of certain budget items, including group insurance, contract obligations and pension plans, have risen dramatically. Despite the efforts of town department heads who have managed with level-funded budgets for many years, the cost of operating town government increases more than 2 1/2 percent each year.

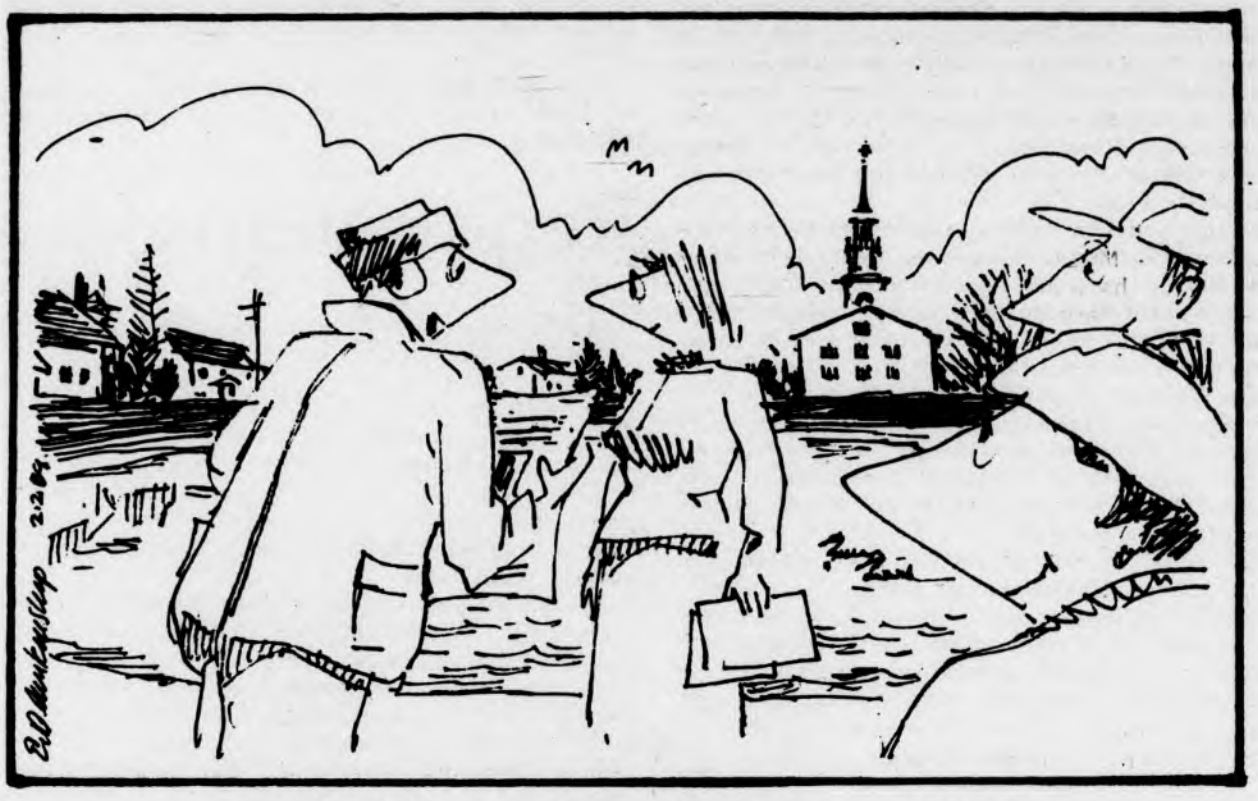
Negotiated contracts calling for six percent pay increases do not fall within the 2 1/2 percent category when state aid is level-funded and new construction is not overwhelming the tax collector's office.

So let us agree, we have been warned.

Most likely, we will be facing an override question on our local election ballot April 8. And before that election, there will be plenty of time to debate the pros and cons of another override.

As we were told last year, the override is a portion of the Proposition 2 1/2 legislation adopted in 1980 by a majority of Massachusetts voters. It is not an illegal maneuver for cities and towns to spend more money than they are allowed. It is a mechanism so that cities and towns can survive, with an allowable rise in the tax base.

Town officials learned last week that many residents were vacationing during last year's budget crisis, and were unaware of the override until they received their new tax bills. That's difficult for some to swallow - some residents have tried desperately to keep up with the news of their town government, and they were well prepared to cast their vote at the town meeting last spring.



There are always going to be some who remain oblivious to the functions of their local, state and national government. And there are actually others who have the good fortune not to be extremely concerned with rising tax bills.

But most of us must watch over our pocketbooks and our taxes. It is up to each one of us to know where our money is being spent, and what will happen if that money is not spent.

During the next few weeks we will hear how services will be cut if a budget override is not approved. It is up to each one of us to decide if we are listening to fable or fact. And if we disagree, then it is also up to us to decide how this town could better survive.

But it behooves us all to listen. Take the time to be informed, and then it will be up to each individual to intelligently decide the best course for the financial future of our town.

NEWS ITEM — Cohasset: Request denied: Barrows would still like to run for selectman office. Split vote by selectmen decided not to rescind a police department regulation which prohibits police officers from campaigning for paid public office. Barrows would like the opportunity to run for the office. 'The people have a right to decide'

"...Too bad he's not a governor...that way he could take off a whole year to campaign for election with full pay..."

Chamber to talk about common lights

Letters

To the Editor:

(This letter was sent to the Cohasset Board of Selectmen. Ed.)

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce feels that it has made a commitment to the community to light the Common for the Holiday Season. We have been receiving correspondence and phone calls from local residents expressing their displeasure over the fact that the Common was not lighted this year. We are asking that you help us with this commitment by installing underground wiring around the Duck Pond at this time.

We would like to take this opportunity to respectfully request that you put us on your agenda at your earliest convenience for the purpose of discussing the feasibility of this project.

Thank you so much for the cooperation you have always shown us. We will expect to hear from you shortly with the date of this meeting.

Janet Mahoney,
Secretary for the Board of Directors
Cohasset Chamber of Commerce

A squirrel

Whenever Alexine comes to visit—she scampers into our kitchen, drags the rickety piné chair behind her like a tail, climbs up on the counter—dangling her pale pink Weeboks.

Today she scurried—perched, then pressed her nose against the window—peering out at the feeder, and screaming with delight: "Look!
He's upside-down! Get out, you!"

The creature stared at her with piercing eyes, but didn't budge. Once more, she shrieked: "Get out! That's for the birds!"
She pouted, shook her tiny fist and banged the glass. No use!

A Blue Jay squawking on a distant limb swooped down; the animal flipped—bounced like a ball. Alexine chirped, and flew into my arms—burying her head,
a golden nut—and nibbling on my neck.

The January meeting of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset was highlighted by a program presented by Shreve Crump & Low on the influence of nature in jewelry design over the ages.

Over 150 members and guests were dazzled by the beauty of many pieces modeled by Anne MacDonald, Alicia Spenlinhauer, Jutta Weigel, Anna Dole and Patsy Dean.

Janet Lamp, DeeDee Nicynski and their committee presented the refreshments.

Nicole Haefne worked the uneven bars during this week's gymnastics competition against Scituate High.

AFS student feels he's known family 'all my life'

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner Staff

When the family of Jim and Lizzie Kuhn welcomed their AFS exchange student Paolo Baca Manrique to Cohasset in August, he spoke no English.

The Peru native spoke only Spanish.

So it came as quite a shock when the Kuhns played their old 1950's tapes and Baca Manrique sang along.

"He sand every word to songs like 'Rock Around the Clock' and 'Tears on my Pillow'," said Mrs. Kuhn.

"I love rock and roll," said Baca Manrique, 17, who is from Chiclayo, a city of about 800,000 people in Peru.

"I sang the songs in Peru, but I never knew what they meant," he said. "Music is a universal language."

After five months in this country, Baca Manrique not only understands the words to the music he sings, but a lot more about the United States.

"I don't want to go home yet," Said Baca Manrique, who will be here until July.

He decided to spend a year in another country through the AFS program because he wants to travel to different parts of the world.

Whe he was told he would be living in Cohasset, he had visions on long New England winters and lots of snow.

"I wanted to go to see the snow," said Baca Manrique, who is used to only 50-degree temperatures in the winters of Peru.

"I was in Hanover the first time I ever saw snow," he said.

"It was beautiful.

"But I'm not disappointed there hasn't been more snow."

"He was freezing in September when it was 50 degrees," explained Mrs. Kuhn.

Though he was already graduated from high school in Peru, Baca Manrique is attending Cohasset High School as a senior.

"The first days in school were difficult," he said.

"Also to make friends in school was a little bit difficult, but now it is ok."

His AFS "sister," Christa Kuhn, is also a Cohasset High School senior and has helped show him the ropes. Another "sister," Tufts student LauraKuhn, helped him with English.

"Sometimes I get mixed up," said Baca Manrique.

"It's confusing at school.

"At home, we stay in the same room all day. School is 7:30 to 12 so you go home for lunch. You have breakfast, lunch and dinner at home.

"Here it is different. You change rooms for different classes and eat lunch at school.

"I have two or three lunches at school," laughed Baca Manrique, a growing teenager with a healthy appetite who has grown several inches taller during his visit.

"The food is fine," he said.

Among his extra-curricular activities are chorus.

"He's got a beautiful voice," said Mrs. Kuhn.

"At home, I sing romantic music and play the guitar," he said.

Chorus activities have included giving holiday at nursing homes and at Lord & Taylor at the South Shore Plaza, Braintree.

In April, the high school chorus will travel to Washington, D.C. for "America Sings," an activity in which a lot of groups from across the country will participate.

"I think it will be nice," said Baca Manrique.

"I like the music."

He also plays point and wings for the high school's backetball team.

"I played in Peru," he said. "It's really fun."

Baca Manrique's face also lights up at the mention of shopping.

The Kuhn family now includes their AFS son, Paolo Baca (second from right), along with (l to r) Jim, Krista and Lizzie. (Staff photo/Kym Marcella)

"I love to go shopping," he said.

"I like Copley Place, the South Shore Plaza.

"I like to shop in Peru, too.

Baca Manrique said one of the big differences between the United States and his country is the government.

"We have a democratic country in Peru," he said. "But there is more of a miliary presence in Peru."

Mrs. Kuhn told of taking Baca Manrique to Cohasset Town Hall when she went to vote in a recent election.

But he hesitated to go with her.

"He thought there would be military inside asking him why he was there," she said.

Baca Manrique has enjoyed seeing the different architecture in the places he has visited.

"I would like to be an architect or an electronic engineer," he said.

"In my life, I want to do both.

"But I don't like to see trees cut down," he said, referring to a local shopping center which is clearing the way for another plaza.

"I like architecture, but not when it destroys what is natural."

Baca Manrique has been homesick during his stay.

"The first month or two were tough," he said.

"But now, I'm in my fifth month and my family here feels like I've known them all my life.

"I think I find an excellent family," he said.

"It's like he belongs here," agreed Mrs. Kuhn.

"It's the feeling that we've not been here without him."

Baca Manrique said he worries about his father who was ill when he left Peru.

"It was tough to decide whether or not to come," he said.

"But now he's much better.

"They tell me everything is fine."

He said there is also 2,000 percent inflation in Peru.

"I worry about problems with the government," he said.

His Christmas on Cohasset was sad and happy, according to Baca Manrique.

"At home, we have a big dinner on Christmas Eve at midnight," he said.

"This is the first Christmas that somebody (in his family) was not at the house.

"The day for me was tough. But I had my own family here.

"They made me happy."

Though he received gifts ranging from clothes to tapes to a Walkman, it's feelings that really matter to him.

"It's very important to me, the affection in the family here. The feelings with the family are important.

Baca Manrique was also included in a special Kuhn family traditin.

Each year the family gets a living Christmas tree. Then after the holidays, it is planted outdoors and named for someone.

"He and his 'dad' picked out the tree and it was named for him," said Mrs. Kuhn.

Before Baca Manrique goes home, he hopes to go to a Celtic's game and eat at McDonalds or Burger King.

During trips to Colorado and Philadelphia, he bought some souvenirs for his family.

In Philadelphia, he touched the Liberty Bell.

"To touch the Liberty Bell is to touch freedom," he said.

But the most important thing he will bring back is his experiences, he said.

"I will miss most when I go back my experiences here in Cohasset with my family," he said.

"It's been a perfect relationship, especially with my mom."

"She always teases me."

Sixth grade essay contest winners

The following essays were winners in last week's sixth grade writing contest.

The Special Stone

Once warm but windy day in July two four year old children were just awakening from a dreadful night of dreams. The were brother and sister, twins I might add. You see the day before they went to a special doctor. This doctor found that the dreams they have could help them make the right decisions in thc future.

That night the little girl dreamt that God was speaking to her and saying that if something very special gets thrown away to quickly try tc find it. The little boy dreamt that he was fishing on a deserted island with no water and fish swimming all over the place. All of a sudden a fish swam up to him and said, "Yo! What's up?" Then he caught the fish. It said, "Put me down, stupid." The little boy dropped him. Then the two kids' alarms went off. They had forgotten all about that night.

That day they went fishing! Their mother and father had brought lunch. The two fun-loving, playful twins went looking for rocks to huck across the lake. The little girl found a very odd rock. It was purple with black dots all over it. They didn't think it was anything special. The two children walked over and sat down on the dock. Each of them gathered about five stones, including the odd purple polka dotted one. After they were almost out of stones, they gathered more. But the little boy had two rocks left. Actually three because he stole the especially odd one from his sister. The first one glided along the gleaming lake. Then he skipped the second one. He had one left, the very special one. he raised it and stared at it but didn't care much about it. He raised and was about to throw it. Then the girl glanced over at him to ask him if he'd seen her special stone. Then she saw it in his hand and remembered her dream. She screamed, "No"! He didn't listen. The threw with all his might but the third stone came skipping back! They were so amazed. The girl gaught it in her hand when it came back. She held it up to her chest and said, "I knew my dream was true."

A Strange Day in August

It was Jenny Newton's eighth birthday. She had run away early that morning with her seven year old sister, Lucy. Jenny should have been excited about her birthday party but instead she was depressed about her mother's illness. It was way to late to call off her party because it was fifteen minutes away. The way Jenny saw it was there was no hope that her mother would get better.

Jenny lugged herself over to the pond near by where her sister, Lucy was. Jenny sat there for a while watching her sister skip rocks. After a while, Jenny started skipping rocks also. Time was passing very quickly. Finally Lucy said, "It's getting late Jenny. I wanna go home and have lunch with Daddy." "O.K. O.K. I give up, we'll go home once I skip two more rocks," Jenny said. The first rock Jenny skipped went out to the big rock which was one-half mile away. And then, the second rock Jenny skipped did the same, but only this time it came skipping back. Jenny and Lucy stood there in awe for a few minutes. Then out of the clear blue Lucy yelled in a terrified voice, "I am getting out of here now." And she ran off leaving Jenny alone.

Jenny walked around for a while thinking about what had just happened. Finally she came to a stop. "I've got it," Jenny yelled excitedly and dashed off into the woods. When she came back she was carrying wood. Jenny quickly started a fire. Hoping her plan would work, she ran into the woods. Then a young child about Lucy's age got out of the water. He started saying something but Jenny couldn't understand it. She quietly tiptoed over to him. They started talking and finally he confessed he had skipped the rock back and forth. Then they silently went their own ways.

A Day At The Beach

It was a dark and misty day and I, Frederick Mulcher had just come home from a hard day at school. I had five tests and studied for only one. To try to relax from the intense day, but before I left, I wrote my Mom a note telling her where I was going. At the beach I dipped my feet into the foaming water to see if it was cold. As I walked along the shore, I picked up a smooth rock and skipped it across the misty ocean. I counted one, two, three, darn! It dribbled down into the dark green water. I picked up another rock, the same thing happened. I picked up a third rock but this rock was different from the others. It had a golden color and blue spots scattered around it. It seemed to feel and look very unusual. I threw it with all of my might but the third stone came skipping back. I looked at the golden stone sitting on the hot steamy sand with amazement. I grabbed the rock and threw it to see if the same thing would happen, but amazingly it didn't. Trying to get the rock I dove in after it. In the water I saw all around me dolphins, sharks, and schools of fish of all colors. None of them seemed to notice me. The thing that surprised me was that I could breath under weater. I saw big, colored fish and all sorts of small fish. I saw everything from pointy fish to flat fish. It was a sight which was full of wonder. It amazed me how everything could live together so peacefully. Then while walking on the ocean floor, I slipped and fell. I seemed to fall deeper and deeper into something that seemed to be a bottomless hole. The deeper I fell the more I struggled to gain my breath and the more I tried to breath the more I struggled. I shook my head in fear, wondering what was happening. Water seemed to clog my nostrils as I shook my head. The next think I knew I found myself laying in the shallow water on the beach. As I stood up I noticed the golden, blue spotted stone just next to me.

Silver Lake

It was a sunny May afternoon in the town of Lakeview. Tim and Jenny were at Silver Lake. They had been going there for several days in a row now. Tim was eight with brown hair and green eyes. Jenny was seven, had blond hair and blue eyes. There was something about the lake that they both liked; something special, yet peculiar. They didn't know what it was, but they know it was something. The would play there from morning to night, stopping for lunch and then going back to play. They would play hide and seek, make castles in the sand and a number of different things, but they never knew what was special about the lake. Then one strange day in July when the two were skipping rocks in the water, suddenly Jenny grabbed Tim's arm. She was staring in amazement at the water; her stone had just come skipping back to her! They were both amazed! Jim picked up three stones. The first one he threw skipped twice then sank into the water. He threw a little harder for the second stone. It skipped three times and then sank to the bottom of the lake. Then he threw with all his might and the third stone came skipping back. They both ran home to tell their parents but Tim stopped Jenny.

"We should keep this secret.. If we tell they'll think we're crazy."

"O.K." Jenny replied.

The did tell their friends though, and every day Tim Jenny and all their friends would go to Silver Lake to skip stones, but they never knew why the stones skipped back.

Night Time Wonders

Sometimes at night after I go to bed I think about what it would be like to be a character from a book I have read. If I was someone like Ramona who had an older sister, or like Meg whose sister got sick and died, what would I do? Or if I was either Julie or Sam who ran away to live in the wilderness, would I survive like they did?

Other times I think about what it would be like to own a pet store. There would be all kinds of animals like cats, dogs, rodents, snakes, lizards, turtles, amphibians, and more. In the evenings after it was closed I would clean out cages and spend time with each and every animal. It would be a dream come true!

I think about other things too though. Sometimes I think about if I had to give up my dog. I would hate that! I would also hate to move again. I think about that often because my family has moved a lot during the past few years. I still think about things like robbers and murderers though. Sometimes I just lie in bed for hours thinking about these things without falling asleep.

Thoughts to Sleep By

When the day is over and it is time to hit the sack, I start to think about what I did during the day, and what I wanted to accomplish but didn't have enough time to do. What I am afraid of, and what I am going to be when I grow up are also thoughts that go through my mind before sleeping.

When my thoughts are rambling in the darkness and quiet of my room I sometimes wonder what it would be like to be famous and what people think of me. I think what tomorrow or next year will bring us. And often I imagine what the world would be like if there was peace.

But, the one thing I think about the most is if I could go back in time or into the future. I dream that I walk into a telephone booth and dial the year I want to visit. When I hang up, I automatically am transported to that year. I always think about it because it would be fun and a very exciting adventure.

It constantly amazes me that no matter how tired my body is when I go to bed, my mind is still racing from one thought to another. But, once my mind slows down, sleep comes so fast. I don't even realize it is happening.

Zzzzzzz!

The Dream

It's Thursday night and all's well. Well, maybe except for the five page essay of peas that's due tomorrow.

"Yawn! Boy, it must be getting late. 12:31! Well, I'll do that in the morning". Click!

"What a day, full of tests! Math class was so boring."

As my mind drifts off like the low tide, I try to think of more pleasurable things, like sports. For example, the Super Bowl . . . I'm Ickey Woods with the ball and we're down by 5 with 10 seconds left. One more play is all we have. It's a handoff to me. I fake left. I fake right. Bounding over players, getting closer to a win, I reach to the one yard line untouched. Then, as I reach the goal line, I trip on my untied shoe lace!

"Oh, no!" A Super Bowl win destroyed! . . . Just then I find myself on the bedroom floor. "Oooooh!" My head's spinning like a ferris wheel. Maybe my fall wasn't a dream. "Ouch!"

Nightime Thinking

At night when I am lying in my bed in that dark, I think about lots of different things. I get bored just laying there. So sometimes I think about some good books I have read lately or books that I was reading when my father came in and turned out the light.

Sometimes when I'm not very tired and I can't remember anything else about books. I think about school in my head. I go over my homework due the next day and make sure I remembered it all. On Wednesday nights I try to think up a good excuse to tell Mrs. McLean about by enrichment homework. (But don't tell her that.)

When I have been lying in my bed for a long time and I get tremendously bored, I think about the next day. If the next day is a school day, I try to remember, in order, the subjects I will have. But if the next day is a holiday or part of a weekend, I try to think of what my mom told me we were going to do. When I am in my bed at night, I think of things from books to school.

Before I Drift Off to Sleep

As I lay in my bed before I drift off to sleep, my mind begins to wander. I start to wonder what people all over the world are doing now. From the people in South Africa to the stars in Hollywood. I wonder if my friends are asleep yet or it they're still doing their homework? I wonder what my teacher is doing now? Is she feeding her loveable horses, reading, or grading papers? If she is grading my paper, I hope I get an A+.

I think about the day that will soon end. What has happened, what were the headlines that made my father laugh or frown. I wonder how my great grandmother is? How my uncle is or what my grandmother painted today? I think about tomorrow. Will I pass my Social Studies test and did I do my English homework correctly? Do I have gym or art tomorrow?

I also think about my future. Will my career be the same one that I want now or will it be the total opposite? What college should I go to? Should I travel for a year then go to college? My mom said I plan ahead too much about the future and not enough about now! I guess she's right I had better pick out my outfit for tomorrow and turn on my radio. She can't call that advanced planning! Ooops . . . I forgot to set my alarm.

Mind Scrambler

When I go to bed and I can't sleep it's because so many things are going on in my mind. A couple of things worry me the most, like what's going to happen in the future. What will it be like going to the High School What will it be like up there.

I think these thoughts worry me the most because you will have to adjust to certain things, like switching from class to class and having older kids around you in the same classroom.

When all these things to on in your mind, it's kind of like a ride you would go on at a fair called the Mind Scrambler. It's kind of like this ride because just so many thoughts come to your mind while on this ride.

That is what goes on in my mind at night when I can't get to sleep.

Some of the Things I Think About at Night

When I go to bed at night, shut the door and stare at the glow-in-the-dark stars on my ceiling, I reflect upon the day that just went by:

"Did I do my best in school?"

"Did I give my best effort in basketball, homework or trumpet practice?"

Then my mind starts to wander. I think about more universal question for example:

"Is there life in outer space?"

"Could one of the super powers drop THE BOMB?"

"How will my life come to an end and at what age?"

Rather than wrestle with rhetorical questions I try to let my mind drift off to more pleasant thoughts.

I reflect on my best day of fishing, my longest basketball shot, but most of all . . . . . girls!

By Nick Welz

The Future

At night I think about the future. I think about what the world will be like, if it will be like the Flinstones or more like the Jetsons, or if it will be here at all. Will we be living on other planets or just exploring them? When will the world explode, and what will we do when it does? Are animals going to become extinct because of us, our pollution, and cutting down forests? These are some of the things I think about at night.

Sometimes I imagine what it will be like. I imagine the good way; no pollution, a lot of animals, very modern and everyone will be happy. Then I picture the bad way; everything polluted, a huge hole in the ozone layer, and everyone at war. It scares me sometimes, but I guess we'll have to wait until the future to find out how the world will turn out.

My Grandmother

My Grandmother, Mimi has a load of gray hair on her head that is put up in an old-fashion way. She's got wrinkles all over her face, but that doesn't matter because she's got a great big smile. Mimi was born in 1904, and she has two sons. One of which is my father.

She love's to talk, especially about the olden days. Half the time she's talking about people we've never even heard of. She gets a little forgetful now and then because of her age.

At least three times a year she goes on a long trip. This year, she went to Switzerland, Florida and St. Louis.

One of her favorite things to do is write letters. She's got about a 3-foot pile of stationary. Now that's a lot of stationary. She probably writes about 365 letters a year, one each day.

My Cousin Brian

If I was to describe my cousin Brian it would be like this. He has the kind of smile that makes you want to laugh, he likes to talk to people. He has sandy brown hair, and he's tall and skinny. He is the kind of kid who could be a comedian because he has a lively sense of humor and is always cheerful. He has a wide toothy grin that makes me smile.

He lives in Florida. He used to live in Maine. He likes sports very much, he likes to play soccer. He plays the drums. He plays instruments in church. He collects things like models and cars. He likes trading things, too.

In spite of this Brian is responsible for one of the most embarrassing moments of my life. We visited him and his family three years ago. Before leaving Brian's house he gave me a toy gun which I put in my suitcase. At the airport, the security guard found it and I either had to show the captain of the plane or throw it away. My parents and I carried it through the airport to dispose of it. It was very embarrassing.

First grade students write about their food

Ms. Litzinger's First Grade Class recently worked on a project involving drawings and written material about food. The following stories were written by children to go with their artistry.

Kelsey Henderson: Jennifer is a brownie and Kelsey is an apple and Joseph is a blueberry and we are all friends. Darius is the wind. Jessica was about to eat me, but I didn't let her. She cried because I didn't let her but she was lucky because she got to go to the toy store.

Ashley Koed: All these people are gathering up to watch the movie. Their names are Apple Anna, Beansprout, Bananaskin, Grapey and Orange Carrot. They are watching "Dirty Dancing." They are dirty dancing too.

Eileen Ridge: I would like to be all the fruit and vegetables because they're healthy. And they're good for playing sports. We like to eat them. We like bananas a lot.

Peter Minnar: The fruit roll-up's name is Redskin. The fun fruit's name is B. There was a Mexican jumping bean called Gool-la-boomba. There was a popcorn man called Cool-a-bunga. There was a pickle called Amigo. They were all waiting for the Christmas parade. It was cold. The parade was very noisy.

Adam Leahy: I would like to be a pie because I could stay in the frige most of the time. When people take me out I get hot. Then I could put ice cubes on my head. I could see all my friends in the freezer. I could break ice and make water.

Liam O'Donnell: This is about an orange that is a farmer. He's stretching in the morning. He's going to go feed the chickens. After he will feed the horse. He will take a nap after his chores. His name is O.J. orange. He is happy.

Jennifer Meehan: The person was chasing the donut. The donut was going to bump into the tree. That is why the donut has that "ahhhh" look.

Jessica Niessink: The grape is a person. The banana snatched a grape and he thinks it is delicious but the grape does not like it. The apple queen is coming to make sure that everyone is in the group but one grape is missing. The queen found everyone but one because he has been eaten. The fruit roll-up can't get out from behind the carrot because he walked in front of him. The grape that the banana took ran away very far. The piece of popcorn is wearing a top hat.

Lex Mincolla: This is a muscle man. He is lifting weights to get in shape. When he gets in great shape he is going to wrestle candy bars. After that he will race a doughnut. He will also race Twix. Most of the time Muscleman wins. The Apple Muscleman could beat Carot Muscleman.

Caitlin Stansell: I would like to be an apple. I like apples because they are good. I would like to be a broccoli because it is good for you. I would like to be a banana because they are good too. I want to be a doughnut but I don't know why. I want to be a carrot because they are good for you. I don't know why I would like to be an orange.

Emily Libby: I would like to be a grapefruit because they have lots of vitamins and the vitamins inside of me will make me big and strong. But most of all that I don't like is when people eat me.

Andrew Sorrentino: C.T. is a muscle carrot. He is very strong. He likes to lift weights. He eats healthy foods.

Carolyn Cameron: The pumpkin is good. The strawberry is good. The carrot is good.

Joseph Carbone: This is a carrot that kills bad guys. One time a bad guy punched him in the face so he zapped him. Then there was a storm and he got electrocuted but it back-fired and electrocuted the sun. Whenever he gets zapped by lightening he gets more teeth.

Kevin DeVito: The candy bar can't lift weights because he eats too much candy. The carrot is very strong. He can lift a lot. He heats a lot of vegetables.

Stefan Vanderwell: Terminator the carrot likes to blow up people. He sues people too. He jumps out of trash cans.

Darius Amiri: This is a carrot muscleman. He likes to weight lift. The candy can't lift them. This is him boxing a pack of M&M's and a candy bar. He wins. Yea!!! He is sword fighting a lemon drop. He is selfish because he didn't win.

Eric Hanian: This is a pear. He is very strong because he lifts weights.

Naomi Ansberg: The grape bunches are acrobats. He's a rock and roll banana and he is a muscle carrot.

Geography Bee winner

Christa Ansbergs, a 7th grade student at Cohasset Junior High School, won the school's geography Bee on January 13 and a chance at a $25,000 college scholarship.

The school-level Bee, where students answered oral questions on geography, was the first round in the new National Geography Bee that is being sponsored by National Geographic World, the Society's magazine for children.

The Bee was kicked off the week of January 9 in thousands of schools around the United States and in four territories. Ninety-one students who are members of the Grade 7 team participated. The school winners, including Christa, will now take a written test; up to 100 of the top scorers in each state will be eligible to compete in their state Bee on April 7.

The following 7th grade students qualified for the Preliminary Round: Christa Ansbergs, Douglas Damron, Brian Duffy, Hope Gaston, Anne Lindgren, Gerhard Lubitz, Ann Senechal, Tyler Studds, Nicholas Terry, David Zadel.

Contest Winner: Christa Ansbergs. Runner-up: Brian Duffy.

Teacher Leaders: Ms. Beatson, Mr. Cisneros, Ms. Gallagher, Principal, Mr. Kelly, Mr. Leach, Mrs. Schleiff, Mrs. Staunton and Mrs. Wondolowski.

The National Geographic Society will fly all first-place winners from the state Bees, along with their teacher escorts, to Washington, D.C., to participate in the National Geography Bee finals on May 18 and 19. The first-place national winner will receive a $25,000 scholarship; the second-place winner, a $15,000 scholarship; and the third-place winner, a $10,000 scholarship.

Cecelia Candia

Student of the month

Cecilia Candia, a ninth grader at Cohasset Jr-Sr High School, was selected as student of the month for December.

Candia spent many hours completing a mural located on one of the walls in the foreign language laboratory.

Her inspiration came from the cave dwellings at Altamira, Spain, which date back to prehistoric times.

"Her mural gives to CHS the chance to appreciate the power and primitive beauty of elemental, prehistoric human art," according to her award.

"Cecilia's unique sensitiviy, talent and dedication to the detailed work necessary for this masterwork deserves the school wide recognition as Student of the Month."

Candia completed the mural on her own time. She spent two and a half months after school nearly every day until 4:30 p.m.

She was nominated by the foreign language department and art teacher Colleen Lucas.

Students may be nominated for academic excellence, extra-curricular activities, community service, school service, unusual accomplishments or a combination of these things.

The selected student's picture and reason for selection are displayed in the new display case across the attendance office for the rest of the year.

Any of the school's 540 students in grades 7-12 can be nominated.

A student of the year will be selected from among the students of the month.

Osgood Readathon

The Osgood Read-a-Thon which started February 1 and continues through February 11 is off to a great start. The read-a-thon allows children to raise funds through reading in this "Year of the Young Reader" for Project Playground. The community is happy to see the children working for their playground and has demonstrated this by their generous pledge. Pledges include Kathy Hicky, the children's librarian at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library who has pledged one cent for every book read by the children at the Osgood School.

Project Playground sincerely appreciates everyone's enthusiastic support.

Reminder

Remember the school budget meetings are being held Monday evenings through February 13 at 8 p.m. in the Home Economic Room, West Wing, CHS.

Art Exhibit at Deer Hill

Students in the Art II class at CHS have completed a series of murals at the Deer Hill School.

Alix Ash, Cris Hood, Alyson James and Rachel Snow have created a huge green dragon spouting mathematical equasions. A wonderful collection of sporting equipment was painted by Val Giu, Gregg Nourie and Carrie Ripley. Jake Powell and J. Gaston created an "art" mural for Mrs. O'Mally. Corey DeSantis painted a musical rainbow. Sara Corbett, Jack Beddows and Claudia Candia have created a lighthearted, happy feeling in the cafeteria. Abbie Barrett painted a mural of dancing brooms and mops for the custodians.

Art Meachum and Jon Macieh have created a marvelous fantasy scene near the library. Cecilia Candia worked on directional murals.

These students have worked for well over a month to complete these works of art.

Stop by Deer Hill to see them!

THE IDEAL

When kitchen planners talk of the "ideal" layout, the U-shaped kitchen is usually the first floor plan to be brought up. By providing three-full walls of storage and working area, the U-shaped kitchen epitomizes the ultimate in planned efficiency. The connecting wall in the U-shaped design not only provides added countertop and cabinet space, but it serves as a deadend to traffic that might otherwise tramp through the area. By locating either the range, refrigerator or sink on each wall of the U-shaped kitchen, the three major work centers describe a triangle of activity. As long as the sides of this work triangle total between 12 and 22 feet, food preparation will be a relatively easy task.

You can only achieve the "ideal" layout if your room is shaped to accommodate it. When you have an unusual shape, that is when you need the expertise of kitchen design associates. We can work with any size or shape room and give you the set-up that will enhance the way you work in your kitchen. We use quality products and craftsmanship that will result in a kitchen you will be proud of for years. You'll know all the pertinent facts before we start any job. Talk to us at 962 Washington St., Rt. 53, Hanover. Telephone 617-326-4121.

HINT: The U-shaped kitchen offers the longest run of continuous countertop to be found in any kitchen design.

Selectmen allow two more articles in warrant

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Selectmen voted this week to include two articles into the April 1 town meeting warrant, although the deadline for submission is past.

By a 4-to-1 vote Monday night, selectmen reversed themselves for a second time and voted to accept a citizens' petition which would reduce the board of selectmen from five members to three. The article, which was proposed by Sohier Street resident Robert Davenport, was accepted into the warrant several weeks ago. It was later rejected by the board because it lacked the required ten citizens' signatures.

Davenport argued this week that he was away on vacation and did not know selectmen had rejected the article because of the signatures. "Is the only reason you rejected it is because of the (lack of) ten signatures?" he asked the board members. "Because in the past you have accepted articles without the signatures."

Davenport recalled that two years ago selectmen accepted a warrant article from Fair Oaks Lane residents calling for a bylaw amendment limiting the operating hours of any local commercial business.

"But the consensus is that this article would have a direct effect on the board. It's ridiculous for us to sponsor an article to change the configuration of our own board," Selectman Cliff Mitman explained.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt said since Davenport was away from town when they rejected the article, they should give him the courtesy of accepting it now with the required signatures. Davenport said he gathered 20 signatures in a half-hour.

Selectmen also decided to accept a warrant article calling for a reduction of the motel room occupancy tax approved last spring by town meeting. The new article, which was submitted by Daniel Leahy, general manager of Kimball's By The Sea, was late because his attorney and town counsel argued about the proper language to be included in the article. Town Counsel Richard Henderson said the article was submitted into his office for review before the January 23 warrant closing date.

Atty. Henderson contended that the article should request the repeal of the four percent occupancy tax approved by town meeting last year. But Leahy's attorney, Charles Humphreys, disagreed saying the state statute establishing the tax cannot be repealed, but it can be reduced from four to zero percent.

Leahy said the attorneys have since agreed that the article will be amended at town meeting to request the repeal of the occupancy tax.

Leahy noted that the tax proposal was approved last year by a 21-vote margin. "A lot of people were swayed by misinformation," he stated.

The board voted to accept the article into the warrant. Selectman Martha Gjesteby voted against the action, saying the procedure would be precedent setting.

The board stood by a decision it made last week not to accept a warrant article from Richard Barrow of King Street which would eliminate a salary for each member of the board of selectmen.

Board members said because the article was not submitted in written form, as were the previous two late articles, they would not consider it for submission.

Barrow suggested the proposal last week after selectmen refused to repeal the police department regulation which prohibits an officer from campaigning for paid political office unless he takes a leave of absence. Barrow, a sergeant in the Cohasset Police Department, intended to run for a three-year term on the board of selectmen, but he does not intend to take a leave of absence during the campaign.

Planners discuss bylaw changes

Selectmen listened to a list of planning board articles proposed for the town meeting warrant, including repeats from past years such as the formation of a municipal housing authority and a bylaw amendment to increase the density requirement for qualified housing.

The planning board will also proposed five amendments to the zoning bylaw.

Selectmen agreed with the planning board that the town's zoning bylaw needs some comprehensive updating, and suggested that town counsel could advise the board as it reviews that bylaw.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said he could provide assistance in the process, saying the current laws "are permissive. It's not a good legal product - they never were."

Planning board chairman Robert Sturdy said the zoning bylaw is constructed "in lawman's terms which any good lawyer can turn around 180 degrees." He suggested that an attorney assist the board, or a consultant could be hired for about $25,000 to $50,000. Selectmen did not support adding a consultant's fee to the budget, and agreed that town counsel, who is already familiar with the bylaw, could assist the board in its review.

Atty. Henderson said the current bylaw allows 50-foot frontage and a porkchop-style of constructing a subdivision, "and then everybody complains about our subdivisions- but it's all allowed under their bylaw."

Beechwood Street resident Wayne Sawchuk had been on a 1983 committee which was formed to study the town bylaw. Although nothing was ever done with the committee's extensive review and recommendations, Sawchuk said the information they compiled could be used in the current bylaw study.

Selectman Cliff Mitman expressed the concern that the bylaw not be amended on a piecemeal basis. "The issues have not been brought to the fore in an even-handed way - just when the planning board thinks it's an issue," he said. "I'd like to know where the weaknesses are. I feel we've been nickel and dime-ing this."

Sturdy said the board's attempt this year is to update the bylaw, with the prospect of more changes to be made next year. "We're putting the

Boy's basketball team is 'starting from scratch'

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

When you lose a popular coach such as Eddie Minelli in the sixth game of the season, it is expected that an air of uncertainty would permeate throughout the whole ballclub for the remaining of the year. However, according to interim coach Arnie Reppucci, the Cohasset High boys basketball team is handling the adversity extremely well and subsequently hope to conclude the campaign on a positive note.

"We are almost starting from scratch," said Reppucci, who was hired into the Cohasset program this year after five successful seasons in Medway. "We are setting goals for ourselves so that it won't be a total loss for the kids this year. We want to position ourselves better by putting together a winning streak in the second half. Secondly, we want to become competitive again. I definitely see a big improvement from the kids."

Repucci has installed a new system of his own during his tenure, but admits 20% of it belongs to Minelli.

"The kids are adjusting to it very well. I have simply added a more structured style, offensively and defensively," he said.

Cohasset is currently experiencing its worst record (3-9 overall, 0-7 in the South Shore Small Schools Division) in five years. Reppucci explains there are a number of factors that have contributed to the disheartening season.

"First of all, our first-year starters either have none or limited varsity experience. We are the youngest team in the league. Also, the league is very competitive. Finally, I truly believe that opposing clubs are paying us back after all the losses they endured against Cohasset. We went five years without losing a game in the South Shore League Smalls Division, and now teams can't wait to play us. When we play these league opponents again in the second half, I want the kids to take that confidence away."

Leading the team in scoring is sophomore Lincoln Marsac, who is averaging 13 points a game. The six-foot, two-inch guard has been a consistent performer for Cohasset that he will probably be selected to the SSL all-star game at the end of the month.

"He is our jack-of-all-trades," Repucci said. "He is the outlet man on the fast break, the key man on defense and the go-to person on offense. He had the potential to be one of the better players here at Cohasset High. He could score more points if he wasn't such an unselfish player."

Senior co-captain Jeff Bryant has added muscle underneath the basket with 10 rebounds a game. In addition to the intense banging against the top centers in the league three times a week, he is second on the club in scoring with 12 points.

The two pleasant surprises for Reppucci have been junior Jim Reidy and senior Scott Flaherty. Reidy, who struggled at the beginning of the season (absorbing the minor aches he suffered during a stellar soccer season), was moved recently to the guard position and responded with nine points a game. Flaherty, a 5'9" point guard, did not survive the final cut during pre-season camp. In fact, he got the axe last year as a junior. He was reinstated back to the squad before the season opener.

"He is not a bad player, but Scott hasn't played organized ball in two years," Reppucci said.

Junior forward Mike Ellinger rounds out the starting lineup. As a defensive specialist, Ellinger anchors the front press break.

Reppucci is anticipating more help from his other underclassmen next year, especially from the 6'4" sophomore twins.

"We have an outstanding group of sophomore and eighth graders. We are definitely going to make some noise next year. I think we can be competitive again. At the end of the season, I will sit down and discuss with Clark Chatterton (Cohasset's A.D.) what my plans are at Cohasset. I would like a full season under my belt."

Reppucci closed out the interview by praising the fan support.

"The support from the fans has been very appreciative. I just can't say enough on how they have helped the players get their spirits up when they see a good turnout. It is nice to know that there are no fair-weather fans."

Hockey

Rockland High School hockey team overwhelmed Cohasset, 7-2, in an interdivisional South Shore League contest at Pilgrim Arena (Hingham) January 28.

Rockland (9-4, 7-4 league), locked in a three-way battle for second place in the SSL Large School Division with Whitman-Hanson and Randolph, raced to a 4-0 first-period lead and never looked back. That lead blossomed to 6-0 in the second period before a bouncing shot by Cohasset's Paul Marks trickled past goalie Jim Casagrande with 7:40 left. Ned Chase and Brian Curran assisted on the skipper goal.

Casagrande's replacement, Ken Begley, was also beaten on a fluke, a shot with 2:19 left in the second by Joel Whitman (Curran added the assist) that hit the boards and ricocheted into the net off a defenseman's skate.

Tim Ewell netted four goals, scoring twice in the first period, only 16 seconds into the second and just 1:38 into the third.

The brightest spot for Cohasset (5-6-1, 3-6-1 in the Small Schools) came 44 seconds into the third period, when goalie Joel Reidy (42 saves) strayed from the crease under heavy pressure by Rockland and threw his stick at the net to stop a potential goal. On the subsequent penalty shot, he smothered Ewell's attempt.

Skiing

Lack of snow isn't preventing the Cohasset High skiers from climbing toward first place in the Mass. Bay Ski League East.

A case in point occurred January 23 at Prospect Hill in Waltham when Katie Lord, the defending league champ, won her second straight girls' downhill. Teammate Mike Suhrbier, second in the league last year, took third in the boys' race.

Ten schools (Waltham, Westwood, Dover-Sherborn, Xaverian, Milton, Brookline, Oliver Ames, Newton South, Wellesley, and Cohasset) compete in the league, which races every Monday in January and early February at Prospect Hill.

Each school enters eight skiers per meet with the top 40 times earning points — 40 points for first, 39 for second and so on.

On the boys' side, Waltham and Dover-Sherborn have emerged as the clubs to beat, but Cohasset, with Suhrbier, Jason Cameron and Bart Weisenfluh leading the way, has become increasingly competitive.

Lord, who has been racing at Waterville Valley since she was five years old, was a runaway winner at the Jan. 23 meet, winning by more than a second in 16.25 over sophomore Liz Hazel of Waltham. Lord's teammate Colby Lawrence finished 17th (25.06), however, Waltham won its second straight meet.

Cohasset, under volunteer coach Jack Dane, practices once a week, as do most of the 10 teams (except for Waltham, whose club practices every day due to the fact that the ski course is in their town), either at Prospect Hill or Blue Hills in Canton.

While skiing is a varsity sport in Cohasset, the 30-student team had to raise all its own funds. A raffle raised most of the $1,200 necessary for fees and bus fare. Prior to the season, the Skippers conducted three weeks of dry-land captains' practices. Training consisted of running, jumping, and indoor soccer.

The top 10 skiers, based on accumulated points, and two top schools from the Mass. Bay Ski League East will qualify to compete at the state championships, March 1, at Berkshire East.

Girls Basketball

Senior forward Kristin Ellinger scored 12 points and picked off 10 rebounds to host Cohasset to a 32-23 league victory over Hanover January 27.

Guard Sara Bishop added 11 points and six steals for the Skippers (7-6.)

Hanover (5-8) was led by center Ann Monti, who scored all of her game-high 13 points in the first half.

Wrestling

The Cohasset High School wrestling team swept the tri-meet competition at Duxbury with victories over Silver Lake, 43-23, and Marshfield, 29-26, January 28.

Tri-captain Paul Froio led the Skippers (8-3-1) with a decisive pin in the 160-pound weight division versus Silver Lake.

Meanwhile, Pat Conroy, who is a first-year varsity performer, clinched the non-league victory over Marshfield with a pin in the 189-pound category.

Gymnastics

Despite junior Michelle Hartley taking all-around honors, Cohasset lost a tough SSL meet to Hanover, 117.6-109.6, January 23.

Junior Darcie MacDonald of Hanover set a personal best in the vault, and teammate Kristen Korszeniewski won the vault and captured three seconds.

Planning bylaw changes . . .

amendments into better shape," he said.

Building Inspector Donald Robbins agreed the current bylaw is archaic. "In a lot of areas it's just plain old," he told selectmen.

The planning board and selectmen agreed an on-going review of the bylaw should be implemented with the guidance of town counsel.

The planning board is also sponsoring a town meeting article calling for a fee schedule for the deposit payments to be made by developers during a subdivision site plan review. The guaranteed payment fees were accepted by town meeting last year, but the specific fee schedule was not included.

Town counsel noted that the problem of payment collection from developers is not a matter that should be discussed by selectmen. He suggested the matter be closed.

Selectman allayed some concerns of the planning board that sufficient time was not spent enforcing the town's zoning regulations. In an attempt to allow the building inspector/zoning enforcement officer more time to survey and cite zoning violations, selectmen allotted $5,000 in this year's building department budget for an assistant to the building inspector.

The new assistant, they explained to the planning board, can be used to help with building permit inspections or on zoning enforcement procedures.

Planning board chairman Sturdy complained Monday night that flagrant violations of the town's zoning regulations were not being cited by the building inspector who also serves as the zoning enforcement officer. Citing only a few problems and allowing other violations to remain in effect will place the town in a legally-precarious position, he noted.

"Our building inspector needs help," Sturdy said. "The zoning issues are sort of skipping along." The planning board chairman also noted there is no job description for an assistant building inspector in the town's bylaw.

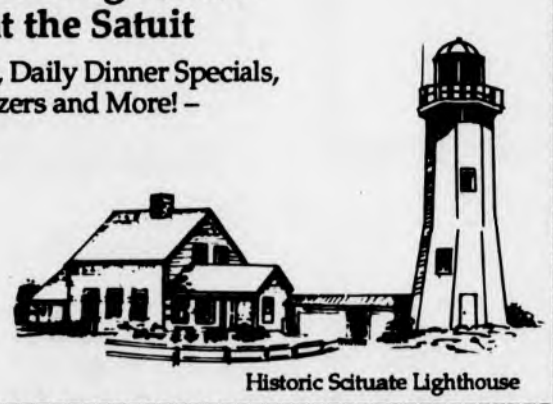
High school wildlife workshop

The New England Wildlife Center will offer a new workshop for high school students this spring.

The class will cover topics related to local wildlife and the environment and will feature behind-the-scenes tours of the Center's medical and education facilities, close-up encounters with live animals, and audio-visual presentations.

"Wildlife and Our Environment: A Workshop" is designed for motivated students, grades 9-12, with an interest in the biological and/or environmental sciences. The class will be held at the New England Wildlife Center complex on Fort Hill Street, Hingham on four Sunday mornings, March 5, 12, April 2, and 9 from 9 a.m. to noon. Cost for the entire workshop is $45 ($35 for members).



Students who complete this twelve hour class will be eligible to participate in the Center's summer volunteer and internship programs.

"Wildlife and Our Environment: A Workshop" will be led by Melissa Hopmeier, NEWC naturalist.

Advanced workshop registration is required and enrollment will be limited.

AN OFFICIAL WELCOME TO OUR NEW CHRISTIAN EDUCATION DIRECTOR:

As many, but perhaps not all, of you realize from references in the Village Beacon and Sunday bulletins, we have welcomed Rebecca "Becky" McArthur as our new Christian Education Director, succeeding Gail Whitehouse, who, by the way, continues very much involved, as a teacher and a resource for the Christian Education Committee. Once again, we have found "acres of diamonds" right at home: a member of our church and a teacher in the Sunday School who has also earned a degree in education from Bridgewater State, where she was very much involved in the campus ministry. Her major youth involvement in recent years has been the Girl Scouts where she is carrying on the family tradition of her mother, Dorothy Bates. Altogether, we can say with joy, the Sunday School is in good hands!

The state scolds, then praises town officials

Town officials received conflicting messages from the Executive Office of Communities and Development regarding their efforts to provide affordable housing in Cohasset.

In a Jan. 27 letter from EOCD assistant secretary Joseph L. Flatley, the state agency expressed concern about the selectmen's commitment to affordable housing.

Their recent vote against the proposed Crystal Woods project, which would include affordable housing, was noted.

But in a Jan. 30 letter from EOCD secretary Amy S. Anthony, a site selection planning grant to the Cohasset Housing Authority was extended to a full award in the amount of $1,250,000 to develop 13 units of Chapter 705 housing for families.

"The conscientious efforts of your authority in securing a site has enabled us to award this grant for these much needed affordable housing units," wrote Anthony.

Flatley said that during the past few months, Cohasset has taken several positive steps toward meeting its goal of providing affordable housing.

"But despite these steps, EOCD is concerned about the town's overall commitment to the availability of affordable housing," said Flatley.

He noted selectmen's opposition to the proposed Crystal Woods development on the Cohasset-Scituate line.

"This action by the selectmen raises very serious questions regarding the town's promotion of affordable housing," he said.

"We are also concerned about the apparent opposition by some board members to support any affordable housing developments in Cohasset which seek comprehensive permits, since the town has never previously supported such development and has no provisions for doing so through its existing zoning."

"We are absolutely, totally committed to affordable housing," said selectman chairman Burt Pratt.

"I disagree with Mr. Flatley's comments," said Pratt. "I don't feel it is a fair assessment.

"The official stand of the board of selectmen with regard to Crystal Woods is negative. It was a negative vote, for reasons concerning the loss of local control on

Nominees await Chamber honor

The three nominees for the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce's fourth annual Forrest E. King Award are pleased about their possible selection for the award, named after one of the founders of the Chamber.

"I feel so honored," said Leo Fiori, who has operated the Exxon Station on Route 3 for 25 years.

"We were pretty good friends," said Fiori of the late Mr. King who owned and operated King Jewelers at Cushing Plaza.

"I was a mailman when he was doing business," said Fiori.

"He was a great gentleman."

"I was shocked (to be nominated)," said Joanne Winters, who recently retired from Hugo's Restaurant after 23 years.

She has been a member of the chamber's board of directors for the past year.

"I've been in town a long, long time," she said.

"And a lot of the people in the chamber are heavy-duty

CHLtd. offers cheaper alternative

By Jane Lane

The owner of Cohasset Heights Ltd. once again offered the town an opportunity to use his landfill on Crocker Lane as an alternative to transporting the town's refuse to the Rochester SEMASS facility.

Paul Barry said he would be willing "to go to the table" with town officials to work out a deal between his business and the town.

After discussing the matter Monday night, selectmen took the offer under advisement.

Two years ago, selectmen signed a contract with SEMASS which will begin as soon as the plant's second phase is completed. Town officials believe that will be sometime in 1991. The health board has been negotiating an interim contract with SEMASS so the town can use the main facility while the second portion is being completed. That contract is in the final stages of negotiation, according to Health Agent Joseph Godzik.

The owner of Cohasset Heights Ltd. renewed his offer after recent hydrological tests at the landfill indicated the commercial landfill is not polluting the town's main water supply source, Lily Pond. Last spring at the annual town meeting, Barry made an offer to town voters - free use of

The state scolds, then praises town officials

Town officials received conflicting messages from the Executive Office of Communities and Development regarding their efforts to provide affordable housing in Cohasset.

In a Jan. 27 letter from EOCD assistant secretary Joseph L. Flatley, the state agency expressed concern about the selectmen's commitment to affordable housing.

Their recent vote against the proposed Crystal Woods project, which would include affordable housing, was noted.

But in a Jan. 30 letter from EOCD secretary Amy S. Anthony, a site selection planning grant to the Cohasset Housing Authority was extended to a full award in the amount of $1,250,000 to develop 13 units of Chapter 705 housing for families.

"The conscientious efforts of your authority in securing a site has enabled us to award this grant for these much needed affordable housing units," wrote Anthony.

Flatley said that during the past few months, Cohasset has taken several positive steps toward meeting its goal of providing affordable housing.

"But despite these steps, EOCD is concerned about the town's overall commitment to the availability of affordable housing," said Flatley.

He noted selectmen's opposition to the proposed Crystal Woods development on the Cohasset-Scituate line.

"This action by the selectmen raises very serious questions regarding the town's promotion of affordable housing," he said.

"We are also concerned about the apparent opposition by some board members to support any affordable housing developments in Cohasset which seek comprehensive permits, since the town has never previously supported such development and has no provisions for doing so through its existing zoning."

"We are absolutely, totally committed to affordable housing," said selectman chairman Burt Pratt.

"I disagree with Mr. Flatley's comments," said Pratt. "I don't feel it is a fair assessment.

"The official stand of the board of selectmen with regard to Crystal Woods is negative. It was a negative vote, for reasons concerning the loss of local control on

Nominees await Chamber honor

The three nominees for the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce's fourth annual Forrest E. King Award are pleased about their possible selection for the award, named after one of the founders of the Chamber.

"I feel so honored," said Leo Fiori, who has operated the Exxon Station on Route 3 for 25 years.

"We were pretty good friends," said Fiori of the late Mr. King who owned and operated King Jewelers at Cushing Plaza.

"I was a mailman when he was doing business," said Fiori.

"He was a great gentleman."

"I was shocked (to be nominated)," said Joanne Winters, who recently retired from Hugo's Restaurant after 23 years.

She has been a member of the chamber's board of directors for the past year.

"I've been in town a long, long time," she said.

"And a lot of the people in the chamber are heavy-duty

CHLtd. offers cheaper alternative

By Jane Lane

The owner of Cohasset Heights Ltd. once again offered the town an opportunity to use his landfill on Crocker Lane as an alternative to transporting the town's refuse to the Rochester SEMASS facility.

Paul Barry said he would be willing "to go to the table" with town officials to work out a deal between his business and the town.

After discussing the matter Monday night, selectmen took the offer under advisement.

Two years ago, selectmen signed a contract with SEMASS which will begin as soon as the plant's second phase is completed. Town officials believe that will be sometime in 1991. The health board has been negotiating an interim contract with SEMASS so the town can use the main facility while the second portion is being completed. That contract is in the final stages of negotiation, according to Health Agent Joseph Godzik.

The owner of Cohasset Heights Ltd. renewed his offer after recent hydrological tests at the landfill indicated the commercial landfill is not polluting the town's main water supply source, Lily Pond. Last spring at the annual town meeting, Barry made an offer to town voters - free use of

Police officer praised

A local woman has written to selectmen to praise a Cohasset police officer, Sgt. Brian Noonan.

"All we ever hear about when it comes to police officers are the bad things, and a lot of people just don't get to see the good things they do for us," said Shirley Kehoe.

She explained in her letter about a family problem which Sgt. Noonan has helped with for many months.

"I can't begin to thank Sgt. Brian Noonan for all his help and kindness that he has shown to my family and especially to me," she said.

"It is a great feeling knowing that we have such a dedicated human being on the Cohasset Police Department," said Kehoe.

"I would never hesitate to get in touch with him about any problems because I believe he can always help you, no matter what.

"I hope to someday see him moving up in the ranks because he is one great person who truly deserves it.

"I get so annoyed when I hear people putting police officers down that I thought you would like to know of one of our great, caring members of the Cohasset Police Department and my family owes him a lot of thanks."

No Deck Point appeal

Deck Point Inc. plans to go ahead with plans to construct a 108-unit condominium project on Cohasset Hill.

The zoning board of appeals granted Deck Point a comprehensive permit January 10, but tempered that approval with 34 conditions. At that time, Atty. Robert Devin, representing Deck Point Inc., said they would consider appealing the board's decision.

Tony Dugenik, a consultant for the development company, said engineers were hired to review the plan and the permit conditions.

Based on their report, Atty. Devin said Deck Point decided to go ahead with the project.

Plans call for the construction of 108 condominium units, with no fewer than 37 of those units designated as affordable housing, according to the zoning board decision.

The development company could have appealed the comprehensive permit decision to the state Housing Appeals Committee, but the engineers concluded the conditions "were something we could live with," Atty. Devin said this week.

The 16 acres proposed for development by Deck Point Inc. are located on King Street at Cohasset Hill, near Webb-Norfolk Conveyor, Whitney Technology Center and the DPW storage site on Crocker Lane.

Deck Point Inc. has applied for a subsidy through the state Homeownership Opportunity Program (HOP) for the units which will be sold to moderate income families for about $75,000 to $85,000 per unit. Low income units will be rented either through the Cohasset Housing Authority or Deck Point Inc. The remaining market-rate units will sell for about $200,000.

Atty. Devin said a decision on Deck Point's application for the HOP subsidies could come as early as next month.

"There'd be no reason why we couldn't start construction right after we hear from the state," he noted.

Race for sewer commission

The race for a three-year term on the sewer commission is shaping up to be a most interesting competition.

Incumbent commissioner F. Charles DeSantis Jr. has indicated he will not seek re-election to the board.

Last week, local Postal Service employee Henry A. Rattenbury filed his nomination papers for the sewer commission vacancy. A resident of Briarwood Lane, Rattenbury was a member of the study committee formed several years ago to study the alternative sewer project proposed by the sewer commission.

He will be challenged by the former supervisor of the Cohasset sewer treatment plant, Manuel Salvador. The Elm Court resident was employed for 16 years as supervisor of the plant, until he was fired two years ago by the sewer commission. His lawsuit against the commission, charging the members with unlawful dismissal, is still pending in the courts. Town counsel has stated there is no legal complication which would prevent Salvador from running for the commission.

"The reason I'm running," Salvador said this week, "is to cut costs for this town. The private operation of the sewer treatment plant was supposed to make our costs lower, but it hasn't. We're also at a standstill as far as getting sewers into this town. We need it desperately, and I'll work for that."

School board action

The Cohasset School Committee took the following action at its meeting Monday, Feb. 6:

• Approved an out of state AFS trip to Florida for seven students Feb. 20-25.

It looks like it will be an exciting trip," said George Fortin, AFS faculty advisor.

He said the group would travel by Amtrak and would visit EPCOT Center.

• Heard member Christopher Ford read a report on Cohasset High School by Thayer Academy student Davis Rosser Walp who visited the school Dec. 5.

"Laid back is the best word to describe the life I saw at Cohasset High School; laid back, yet in a way that was positively conducive to learning," said Walp in his report.

"This is a unique opportunity to get another student's perspective," said committee chairman Diana Kornet.

Override election set

Selectmen voted to set April 8 as the date for the town's override election.

Selectmen agreed with the assessment previously made by the advisory committee that a Proposition 2 1/2 override will be necessary this year. Although they have not decided how much that override will be or what form it will be, selectmen decided it will be held the same day as the town's annual election.

Decision delayed on liquor license

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Selectmen postponed the fate of a much-desired liquor license currently held by Cohasset Central Market.

Selectmen have the option of revoking the license which has not been used by the Main Street market since June. Or, they may suspend the license or transfer the license to another retail location in town.

At Monday night's meeting, selectmen were informed that James Hoban, owner of Cohasset Meat and Produce at Cushing Plaza, has applied for a liquor license for that store. Donald Staszko has applied for a license for the proposed Cohasset Plaza location, in addition to a third application from Robert Davenport of Sohier Street.

Selectmen were informed last week by their Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon, that the town has more retail liquor licenses than is allowed by the state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission. According to Doyon, the state allows one license for every 5,000 residents. Cohasset currently has four licenses.

If the board votes to revoke the license, it will be gone forever until the town's population climbs to 10,000, Doyon explained.

Although selectmen were pondering last week whether to revoke the license, they had second thoughts this week. An attorney representing Hoban explained that the board may vote to transfer the same license to another applicant, or they may suspend any action on the license.

The hold-up began last June when Central Market owner James Finucane of Marshfield said the store would be closed for a few days for renovations. When several weeks passed, Selectman Rocco Laugelle suggested a hearing be held to revoke the liquor license. At that time, it was announced that Kevin McManus would be leasing the store from Cohasset Savings Bank's North Scituate Corp. In October, selectmen transferred the license to McManus, but the lease arrangement was never completed and the store has never opened.

Selectman Burt Pratt received a telephone call Monday from Al Weisenfluh of Cohasset Savings Bank, requesting the board postpone revocation of the license. "He said the bank is negotiating with a potential buyer later this week and that it may or may not include a market in the plans," Pratt stated.

Phil Nectow, a former partner in the Central Market business with Finucane, stated in a letter from his attorney that he is interesting in resuming the market business. Pratt noted the bank official did not indicate to him if Nectow was the principal in its current negotiations.

Atty. Michael Georges, representing Hoban, noted that his client has requested a hearing on his license application at next week's selectmen's meeting. He had a petition signed by 500 people requesting that Cohasset Meat and Produce be issued the license. After conferring with a counsel for the ABCC, Georges noted the board could vote to suspend any action on the liquor license. It could be reissued by the board to another location at any time, as long as the license did not expire.

Dan Leahy, a member of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, chided selectmen about the remarks they made last week. "You said it was time to get rid of this license, like it was causing a disease in this town. I know of no problems associated with this license," he said. "It's a valuable entity - it's what makes the value of this property. It would be an asset to wherever selectmen decide to place it."

Leahy also questioned the validity of the ABCC ruling that for every 5,000 residents, there may be one liquor license in that community. "I could understand if there was a pub on every corner. But what is the basis for this?" he asked.

Selectmen agreed to suspend any action on the license until negotiations are completed by Cohasset Savings Bank. Selectman Cliff Mitman noted he would not be opposed to keeping the license if it's a necessary element of the sale of the Main Street commercial block, but he opposed moving that license to another location in town.

Arts lottery grants available

The Cohasset Arts Lottery Council announces that the deadline for the next distribution cycle is Friday, March 31.

Applications for grants are available at the Selectmen's office at Town Hall. New application forms have been issued, so prior applicants should not use the old forms.

Completed applications should be returned to the selectmens office, or to Karin Bartow, Chairman, Cohasset Arts Lottery Council, 48 Sohier Street.

Arts Lottery funds support individuals or organizations dedicated to the arts and humanities. However, funds may be awarded to non-profit, tax-exempt organizations or public agencies whose purpose does not include the arts if they embark on an arts activity. Applications from public agencies, such as a public school, library or municipality, must demonstrate a new need, be a one-time expenditure, and be matched by other funds one-to-one. Projects must demonstrate benefit to the local community.

Funding will also be distributed under the PASS (Performing Arts Student Series) program. The purpose of this program is to fund tickets to performing arts events for public school children at the regular ticket price, or $5, whichever is less.

Schools may buy tickets from participating arts organizations and then apply to the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council for reimbursement. A PASS roster will be made available in each of the three Cohasset public schools.

For further information or questions, call Karin Bartow at 383-0572.

CHL owner offers landfill to town . . .

the commercial landfill and in exchange, an end to four years of litigation against his business. The proposal was not endorsed by town meeting.

According to Barry, a January 1989 report commissioned by the health board assessed the landfill's effect on Lily Pond as negligible. That study, conducted by Camp, Dresser and McKee, stated, "Water exiting the lower wetlands at Boulder Road poses no pollution potential to the Lily Pond at this time. While no detailed risk analysis has been done, a future risk is not foreseen if proper controls and monitoring are carried out in connection with the current status and potential future, two plus acres, expansion of the landfill."

That study followed an August, 1988 report conducted by HMM Associates for the town. That review stated, "The wetlands between Cohasset Heights Landfill and Lily Pond appear for the most part to be healthy and productive. There are areas immediately adjacent to the landfill that show signs of stress and erosion siltation and the possible introduction of contaminants." The study recommended increased sampling of the monitoring wells to protect against the contamination.

The study also noted that elevated chloride and sodium counts are the result of the salt storage piles on the Massachusetts DPW site, and not the commercial landfill. "The quality of the surface water in the vicinity of the landfill is also impacted by a source other than the landfill," the study stated.

"We've read about the possibility of a Proposition 2 1/2 override and projects the town is getting away from," Barry told selectmen. "The town hasn't signed a dumping contract, and I feel with these types of reports and all past reports, the selectmen should look deeper into Cohasset Heights Ltd. We'd save ourselves a lot of money - there's a possibility the town could recover the astronomical amount it paid to get these reports."

"What if we realize all of a sudden that the dump is polluting Lily Pond?" Selectman Rocco Laugelle asked Barry. "We'd have to stop short."

Barry noted that any disposal facility the town chooses to use will probably have some problems in the future. "SEMASS has had problems. I heard rumors their plant isn't operating the way they thought it would," he added.

The landfill owner recently signed a four-year contract with the Hull treatment plant for the disposal of the landfill's sludge. There is also a new charcoal leachate treatment system currently in operation, he added.

Barry also noted that his application to expand the landfill was discussed at a November hearing before the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering. An environmental impact study of the proposed expansion plans should be completed in a month, he told selectmen. Barry hopes to receive permission to use 25 acres of the landfill adjacent to the two acres he is currently using.

"If the board if interested," Barry said, "we'll go to the table."

Selectmen made no decision, but took the matter under advisement while they review the environmental reports.

comprehensive permits and certain specific problems of the development brought up by neighbors and different boards," he said.

"We would rather do it on a case by case basis rather than through comprehensive permits."

Such permits allow developers to bypass some local zoning in exchange for providing affordable housing.

Pratt said the board would take Flatley up on his suggeston to meet with a member of his staff to discuss the situation.

"It is at the top of the agenda to set up a meeting to convince Mr. Flatley of the town's commitment to affordable housing," said Pratt.

"We just don't want to lose local controls."

The town and EOCD negotiated a Memorandum of Agreement Concerning Housing Development in September, 1988.

In the agreement, the town agreed to undertake some specific action steps in order to address the afordable housing shortage.

Specifically, the town agreed by developing a housing policy to "establish specific goals for the town in definingand meeting the housing needs of its citizens" including the "actual development of housing specifically available to low and moderate income families, through both public and private channels."

The town also submitted an application to the Massachusetts Housing Partnership (MHP) for designation as an MHP community, he said.

Flatley said the application is being recommended by the MHP staff for designation and "represents a commitment by the town to coordinate housing planning and review efforts."

Despite the EOCD's concerns, it is extending the site selection planning grant made to the Cohasset Housing Authority to develop 13 units of Chapter 705 housing for families.

"Your authority will immediately receive planning funds in the amount of $17,500 to cover initial expenses," said Anthony.

"Both the governor and I wish to extend our congratulations to you, your board and staff," said Anthony.

"We look forward to working together in the months ahead to produce high quality affordable housing for the citizens of our commonwealth."

New license system proposed

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Selectmen agreed to insert an article in the town meeting warrant, requesting permission to withdraw from the Norfolk County animal control fund.

The Cohasset members of the Hingham, Hull and Cohasset Animal Shelter Committee will review the proposal and return to selectmen with a recommendation.

The purpose of the request, according to shelter committee member Paul Murphy, is to allow Cohasset to enter into a tri-town animal shelter program. Withdrawing from the county system, Murphy explained to selectmen Monday night, will also allow Cohasset to raise dog licensing fees.

Currently, Cohasset must pass the license fees into the county fund. For every license, the town receives 75 cents, Murphy explained. With the new tri-town system, Cohasset will receive the entire revenue collected from licenses. Most towns have increased their license fees to $15 for unneutered, unspayed dog, and $8 for a spayed dog.

Any new license fees would not take effect until January 1, 1990.

Murphy estimated that even if Cohasset increases its annual dog control budget to $15,000, there will be enough in the license and late license registration revenue to offset the budget increase.

If Cohasset joins the Hingham animal shelter program, it will cost the town about $9,500 each year. That is a per capital assessment, he noted, and covers all Cohasset costs for operating the shelter and housing stray dogs and cats found in Cohasset by the animal control officer.

The plans currently call for the construction of an animal shelter off Ward Street in Hingham. No money will be appropriated by the three towns this year, although Hingham will request a ten-year bond for the construction at next year's Hingham town meeting. "Once the building is paid for, there is a real possibility the annual assessment will be reduced to the towns," Murphy stated.

The committee will be requesting a transfer of the land at the Hingham annual town meeting. If that is accomplished, they expect to request a 10-year bond issue at the April, 1990 meeting. In the meantime, the committee will undertake a massive fund-raising effort to offset construction costs. The shelter will cost at least $500,000 to construct, he noted.

The Hingham animal control officer noted there are 576 Cohasset households that own dogs. That means that more than 75 percent of the town is bothered by a small number of homes that have dogs.

"But the majority of people in this town said they did not want a leash law," Selectman Rocco Laugelle argued.

"That was 12 years ago," Murphy answered. "I guarantee you if they voted again, it would pass. Murphy noted that a function of the local animal shelter committee could be to propose a tighter leash law for Cohasset.

Harbor committee opposes articles

The harbor committee has strongly recommended the defeat of three harbor-related articles on the April 1 town meeting warrant.

At its February 2 meeting, the harbor committee unanimously decided to oppose the three articles.

Two articles request a 30-day grace period for the payment of annual mooring fees, and the same deadline extension for persons reaffirming their position on the 200-person harbor mooring list.

A third article requests that mooring location permits and waiting list positions be restored to those boaters who failed to pay their fees by the due date in 1988.

The current harbor bylaws contain no grace periods, and the harbor committee has recommended against its implementation.

Last year, 18 Cohasset boaters and 58 people on the waiting list were ruled ineligible because they failed to make their annual fee payment by the June 1 deadline imposed by the former harbormaster, Stephen Osborne.

Selectmen refused to extend the deadline, although the boaters argued that there was a discrepancy between the bylaw and the harbor regulations, and that Osborne's manner of enforcing the bylaw was more stringent than the town's previous harbormaster, Harry Ritter.

Eight of the mooring holders have appealed the town's decision to the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, but a ruling has not yet been made.

The harbor committee noted in its recommendation last week that restoring the mooring locations and waiting list positions will "countermand that decision (by selectmen) before the appeal has been heard.

"The article discriminates against those who lost their mooring permits prior to 1988 for the same reason and thus is unjust," the harbor committee concluded last week. "It further opens the door for lawsuits against the town by those discriminated against by passage of this article."

The harbor committee noted that a 30-day extension for the payment of mooring fees or to reaffirm their waiting list position is not necessary. Mooring permit holders are expected to pay 45

Nominees honored as they await award

business people. ...It's esteemed company to be in.

"I was shocked and thrilled to be nominated.

"Win, lose or draw you don't lose a thing — it's an honor just to be nominated.

"I knew Forry and his wife and daughters.

"This is terrific and it means an awful lot."

Robert Davenport, who with his wife, Barbara, owns and operates Elena Sestito Florists in Cohasset and Hingham, was also very pleased to be nominated.

"It's an honor, just the nomination itself, no matter what happens.

"I'm very much looking forward to the dinner no matter how it turns out."

Valerie King, committee chairman for the Feb. 15 dinner at Kimballs-By-The-Sea, said that her father knew all three nominees.

"He respected and liked each one," she said.

She is treasurer of King Jewelers which is now also run by her mother and sister.

The award dinner is the biggest event of the year for the Chamber, according to King.

"We sent out 100 invitations," she said.

Guest speaker will be Sen. William Golden.

"He'll talk about the Chamber of Commerce in general, and the prestige of the award," said King.

Previous speakers have been Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, former award winner Andrea Merrill and Ernest Herzug, a friend of the King family.

The evening will begin at 6:30 p.m. with cocktails.

Former award winner Dan Leahy will welcome guests at 7 p.m. and ask them to be seated for dinner.

At 8:30 p.m., chamber president Richard Straley will introduce Sen. Golden.

Straley will introduce the nominees at 8:50 p.m.

A mahogany-based plaque with a brass scroll will be presented to the winner in recognition of achievement in business and in the community.

"The margin between all three is slim this year," said King.

Last year, there were two winners — Ozzie Ingram and Straley, she said.

All past award recipients as well as King were on the committee to select nominees.

"We did the nominees differently this year," she said.

"We took the four past winners and myself and went through the list of Chamber members," she explained.

"We narrowed them down to 14 and then to 3.

"Then we sent out the ballots to the membership, so the general membership does choose a winner."

Deadline for returing ballots was Feb. 6.

King said the process has worked out much better than past years when numerous nominations were made by the membership.

"We need to keep it to a smaller group," she said.

King said that only she and James F. Kearney, "the Price Waterhouse of the chamber," know the name of the winner.

The award means a lot to her and her family, according to King.

"It was a real great honor when they asked the family if we thought it would be appropriate (to establish the award)," she said.

"He'd be thrilled to know people would want to remember him that way," said King.

Mr. King died several years ago in an accident at the age of 51.

He had operated King Jewelers at Cushing Plaza for 25 years, a business his father had started in 1921.

He took it over in 1955, according to his daughter.

She described her father as "extremely friendly."

"He knew everyone's name who came into the store," said King.

"He was extremely outgoing, and always had a big smile for everyone.

"He had an extremely high standard of ethics for business," she added.

"And he always had people behind him in his time of need because he was always there for them."

King family members, including aunts, uncles and grandchildren, will be at the dinner.

"Dad would feel really honored," said King.

"He was funny — as successful as he was in others' eyes, he never really felt it himself.

"This award would have finally made him say 'I was a success.' "

Budget review concludes Feb. 13

Boys lacrosse will probably be offered on a club basis this spring, Cohasset Jr.-Sr. High's athletic director told the school committee Monday night, Feb. 6.

In addition, it looks like intramural basketball and soccer will likely be offered to junior high boys and girls, said Clark Chatterton.

The sports discussion came during three hours of budget deliberations for Cohasset Jr.-Sr. High School.

The school budget review will likely conclude next Monday night, according to School Supt. Stephen Hart.

The budget is scheduled to go before the advisory committee Feb. 28.

Tenth grader John Smith presented a petition with the names of 56 boys interested in playing lacrosse.

"I think we're going to do it on a club basis," said Chatterton.

"But we're going to have to make some hard decisions.

"Something will have to go."

Chatterton said that will likely be boys' track which has attracted fewer and fewer students.

• He also said that Deer Hill principal Ken Ekbert may coach the lacrosse team on a volunteer basis.

Committee chairman Diana Kornet said she would like to see lacrosse open to girls as well.

"The criticism I've heard is that none of the girl's alternatives give enough of a fitness workout," she said.

Chatterton also said he thought the junior high intramural basketball and soccer "would be best for everyone and cost efficient."

He said play would be three days a week, and there would be no cuts from the teams.

"The object is to have every junior high school student who wants to play sports be able to," said committee member Russell Reidy.

The media and library budget was also among the items discussed.

Teacher Susan McFadd said the price of books is going "up and up and up."

The school committee also briefly discussed the budgets of the following departments: business education, industrial arts, home economics, alternative school, music, art, health education, special education, guidance, maintenance, student activities.

Oaks estate on market again

Plans to develop 109 boat slips around the former estate of the late Jessie Cox have been placed on hold, and the property is for sale once again.

Oaks Realty Trust has withdrawn its application for a permit from the federal Army Corps of Engineers, and has not responded to a January 19 deadline for changes in the plans presented to the conservation commission.

"The plans are on hold," according to harbor committee chairman Fritz Pfaffmann. "Basically, I surmise they are not going ahead with them."

Atty. Paul Feldman, representing Oaks Realty Trust, sent a letter this week to several town officials, saying the owners have reviewed several alternative plans for the nine-acre property on Margin Street.

In December, Atty. Feldman notified town officials that the owners were "taking a pause" in their proposal to develop the waterfront property. At that time the attorney said the vociferous opposition to the plans by residents caused the owners to rethink their proposal.

The original proposal presented last summer to the harbor committee included 109 boat slips around the property, with 38 donated to the town for public use. The owners planned to sell the slips as "dockominiums" for $3,000 to $5,000 per foot. A significant amount of dredging would have to be done around the harbor and on the property in order to accommodate the boat slips. In addition, 62 existing harbor moorings would have to be displaced.

At the last conservation commission hearing, Atty. Feldman proposed to donate the 58-room mansion to the town if Oaks Realty Trust was allowed to develop the waterfront. But at the December special town meeting, voters supported a resolution denouncing the proposal by Oaks Realty Trust.

It was after that resolution that Atty. Feldman notified town officials that engineers for the owners were looking into "other alternatives" for the property.

In last week's letter to town officials, the attorney said the owners are still reviewing several alternatives for the property once owned by the late Jessie Cox. "We are placing on hold our waterfront development while we explore other alternatives in addition to the original plans proposed by my client," he stated in the letter.

There was no time frame indicated for the revisions to the plan, Pfaffmann noted.

"All I really know is that it is definitely for sale," Pfaffmann said.

Oaks Realty Trust purchased The Oaks estate in December, 1987 for $2.6 million in cash from Yankee Oil. That defunct company bought the 53-room mansion in 1983.

In the meantime, selectmen have authorized the formation of a town committee to study possible municipal uses of the former Cox estate. This committee, which will be funded through a state grant, will consist of representatives of the planning board, conservation commission, selectmen, the library trustees, the recreation commission, the harbor committee, advisory committee, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, and an area representative.

Harbor articles . . .

days after receipt of their bills in mid-February, and reaffirmation of mooring list position is to be completed between January 1 and June 1. "Five months time is more than adequate," the harbor committee concluded.

The warrant article also proposed that notification by certified mail be made to those boaters who failed to meet the deadline. "No citizen's failure to act requires such notification and only places an unreasonable burden on the harbormaster to make an additional and prompt notification to those who failed to act on time," according to the harbor committee.

In its recommendation to selectmen, the harbor committee concluded, "all three articles have no merit and are an abusive method for a few people to attempt to escape from their past negligence and at the expense of and detriment to the efficient operation of our town and habor. We recommend strong opposition to all three articles."

Kasperowicz appointed to committee

Moderator William D. Weeks has announced one appointment to the Committee to Survey Structure and Functions of Town Government.

Raymond Kasperowicz of 172 South Main St., was appointed to the Advisory Committee to serve an unexpired term ending in 1990.

New members of the Town Government Structure Committee are Dennis L. Roth, 7 Highland Ave., appointed to serve an unexpired three-year term ending in 1990, and Galt Grant, 256 Main St., appointed to serve an unexpired term ending in 1990.

Grant's appointment will take effect upon his resignation from the Town Insurance Committee.

The appointments were made at a Jan. 23 meeting of the appointing authority, consisting of the chairman of the board of selectmen, chairman of the advisory committee and the moderator.

□ We salute William J. Anstead, one of 15 South Shore residents that was nominated by Rep. Gerry E. Studds for appointment to the U.S. Military Academies this fall. The Military Academy at West Point is where William was nominated and the appointments will be made by the service academy. The nominees were interviewed and selected by a committee appointed by Rep. Studds. Congratulations to you, William.

□ Jim Dormer will likely be the envy of everyone after they read this. Jim, a 1986 CHS grad, is on his way to Sydney, Australia where he will be a student at the University of Sydney. Jim is a member of the Junior Class at Trinity College in Hartford, Connecticut, and this is part of his schooling!! How lucky can one get? Jim will be departing this week, to remain until the end of August. On his way back to little old Cohasset, he will stop in New Zealand and the Figi Islands. Take notes, Jim, so you can give us a full report upon your return. Bon Voyage!!!

□ Happy belated birthday to Gary Ritts.

□ Another famous "Red Gate Laner" is celebrating his big birthday this week, Tim Marsac. To know him is to love him, and we all do!! We wish you a special day and a dynamite year, with tons more to follow.

□ Jason Gill, son of Ann and Robert Gill, has received his MBA from U.S.C. in business and finance. He intends to pursue his career in California.

□ Congratulations go to Derek Lacks, who made the Dean's List at Providence College.

□ Congratulations go to Christa Ansberg, a seventh grader at Cohasset Junior High, who won the school's geography Bee last month. With that win Christa has a chance at winning a $25,000 college scholarship, and we sure are rooting for you, Christa.

Kristin Ellinger breezes past Carver's Lauren Smolinsky during the Skippers' 68-23 win last week. (Staff photo/Buzz Wadsworth)

□ Cheryl and Dick Bugley and John and Susan Carr sure have reason to be proud of themselves, they had a grand success with the Super Bowl Party that they held recently. As most know, the money is going to the Osgood Playgound Fund, and over $2,600 was raised by the party. A great idea that paid off in grand style, and the kiddos are the ones that will benefit. Hats off to you all.

□ Sure is nice to see the list of candidates keep building as the time for election nears . . . all are to be commended for being willing to donate their time and efforts to our town, and we thank you for it.

□ Gerry Costello was "around town" recently, here for a family birthday. Gerry lives at Mount Snow now, and is the owner of two restaurants there. All of you who remember Gerry remember what a friendly, happy person he is . . . he hasn't changed, he still wants all of his friends to stop in and say hello when in the Mt. Snow area.

□ Congratulatons to Cecilia Candia, this month's student of the month at Cohasset High School. Cecilia is a member of the freshman class. She recently spent many hours drawing a mural on one of the walls in the foreign language laboratory. In addition to being chosen student of the month, her name will go in with the others chosen to be a possible student of the year, an honor indeed!

□ Jim Gallagher was spotted around town recently, telling all that would listen every detail about his granddaughter Heather Colleen. We'll bet that Jim's daughter, Sara, will have a hard time being the first to introduce Heather to the "public." Jim will have her out in the carriage as soon as possible. It is truly wonderful to see a man that loves his family so much, they are all lucky.

□ Happy to report that Ingrid Anderson is all better, she had been recently sick over Christmas. She is back at UNH, and feeling fine!

□ Joe and Lynn McVay certainly were a fine looking couple last week, they haven't changed at all. Lynn sparkled, as ususal, with her wonderful sense of humor ever-present. Nice to see you two!

□ Katie Lord sure is making a name for herself on the local slopes, she has had a wonderful year with the CHS ski team. Her presence has been felt for years at Waterville Valley, where her championship style has been known. You can bet she's a happy gal this week, with all of the weather reports talking abbout snow up North. Continued success Katie, we are proud of you.

An interesting offer

Once again, town officials listened to an interesting proposal from the owner of the local commercial landfill.

Paul Barry, co-owner of Cohasset Heights Ltd., has once again offered the commercial landfill to the town. Last spring, Barry made an impassioned speech to town meeting, attempting to sway voters to accept his offer. At that time, Barry made the offer to the town - free use of the landfill and in return, an end to all litigation against his business.

The proposal was not adopted by the voters at that meeting, and Barry went back to the landfill empty-handed.

This week, buoyed by two health board studies which indicate the landfill is not polluting our water supply, Barry made a second offer to selectmen. Use my landfill, he said, and stop the lawsuits against Cohasset Heights Ltd. This time, there would probably be a price tag attached to the service, but it would certainly be less costly than transporting the town's trash to the SEMASS facility in Rochester.

Selectmen have made no decision , but they are reviewing the health board's engineering reports and are expected to have an answer soon.

It is an interesting proposal - one the town should not reject out of hand.

The lengthy engineering reports commissioned by the health board indicate there is no current pollution problems caused by the landfill. They did note, however, there are elevated levels of certain chemicals in the groundwater, caused by the salt storage pits at the state DPW land.

The engineers also strongly recommended that monitoring be continued at the landfill, perhaps increased in certain areas nearest to the town's water supply. Barry has obliged that request and will continue the monitoring process at the landfill.

There are many people who are unconvinced by engineering reports - ask engineers to study the same area and you will likely receive two different results. Many people concede that Cohasset Heights may not be a present danger, but they are concerned about the future.

We agree townspeople should remain concerned. A dump within the town's watershed is not a logical location, and the decision made years ago to allow it was not a good one. However, the man running this current operation has vowed to prevent any problems there, and he has worked vigorously to keep that promise. A respected member of this community, Barry will continue to protect his family and friends from any potential dangers from that landfill. Nothing is a sure bet in this world, and Barry is the first to admit that. But he's trying with all his means and all available technology to protect his community from harm.

Selectmen should take the time to thoroughly review the engineering reports. They should ask questions and receive answers from people knowledgeable in this complex area.

But they should not flatly reject this offer. For a town that is facing a serious financial crunch far into the future, reviewing all alternatives is a necessity. Although something may be cheaper, it may not be the wisest choice. Then again, maybe it is.

It was a brave act to rescue a cat

To the Editor:

On Friday night, January 20, I witnessed an act of kindness and bravery that until now I have only experienced in fabled literature. I am calling your attention to this act so the two men who literally risked their lives will get some deserved recognition.

Last Friday I arrived at my home in Cohasset only to find a cat who had taken up residence in the neighborhood, had climbed to the top of a 60 foot telephone pole across the street! After calling the police and fire departments, I was told that Eastern Edison would be the only ones able to access the pole. Upon the arrival of the Eastern Edison truck, to address this nightmarish ordeal, Edison worker Tom Kelleher began to ponder solutions. Although he had never in his 20 year career at Edison run into this sort of a problem, it wasn't going to stop him from trying. While backed up to the pole Tom got into the bucket on his truck and proceeded to rise amongst the many electrical lines on the pole, attempting to coax the cat down safely. Unfortunately, the cat was playing stubborn and had decided it was much safer at the top of the pole, which had been its home for seventy-two hours. After an hour of futile coaxing Tom decided to call for reinforcements.

While waiting for the other Edison truck we found out exactly how dangerous this rescue operation was going to be. The connections at the pole had 13,000 volts of electricity and if the cat touched anything, not only would the frightened furry feline have died, any one within a 25 foot radius would have been burnt!! When asked why Edison didn't just shut the electricity off Tom explained that the lights would had gone out for about a mile down the road, all the way to Hugo's Lighthouse!

Tom's reinforcement arrived, another veteran named Mike Fulterton, who also had never seen anything like this before. After getting a game plan down both elevated themselves in their buckets to rescue the hapless creature. While Mike prodded the cat away from the deadly electricity Tom came in from the opposite side and bravely grabbed the shaken animal, descending to the street. Before we knew it the cat had jumped out of the bucket and bee-lined into nearby woods.

We are happy to say that the cat is no worse for wear and in the future will probably only venture up shrubbery. I would like to personally thank these two men for their herioc deeds.

Sincerely,
Joan Emanuello and Greg Meallo

Valentine Cabaret shouldn't be secret

To the Editor
and Unsuspecting CHS parents:

It is quite possible your child (if he or she is in 9th-12th grade at CHS) is planning to perform at the annual CHS Valentine Cabaret but has neglected to tell you about it. Or, perhaps he/she has submitted a painting or drawing you have always liked to the silent auction.

Now is the time to quietly question your child as to his/her plans for Tuesday, Feb. 14. Some children give their paintings to the silent auction and never tell their parents. Last year I ended up with a lovely portrait of a student's mother. And, I kept it. Her loss was my gain.

Over the years, many performers have neglected to tell their parents that they are singing a solo, preparing a piano arrangement...doing an original comic sketch.

Parents certainly do have a difficult time keeping track of everything their children are doing. Even if you suspect your child of having no talent...ask what he/she is doing February 14th. Don't act too interested. Just find out.

And then, quietly call Karin Bartow at 383-0572 and reserve your tickets. Or, mail your check, payable to the Cohasset Arts Boosters to Karin at 48 Sohier Street, Cohasset. The cost: $10 per person. You get: a light supper prepared by Kimball's excellent chef; an art display that will knock your socks off; music, some of it tender and loving, some of it loud and wonderful; and memories to last a whole year. Supper and silent auction from 6-7:30 p.m. Music from 7:30 to 9.

Recycling discussed by church environmental group

Give us all a reverence for the earth as your own creation, that we may use its resources rightly in the service of others and to your honor and glory . . .

Prayer at meeting on recycling

"Part of our mission as a church is to care for the resources of the earth," said the Rev. Cliff Cutler, minister of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset.

". . . If not in the forefront, at least we can be in the mainstream of the community," he said.

Rev. Cutler's remarks began a 45-minute meeting Monday morning, Feb. 6, at St. Stephen's on instituting recycling measures.

The meeting was led by Alix White of White Cedar Farm Recycling, a recently formed consultant company at 224 Jerusalem Rd.

It was an outgrowth of an environmental forum led by David Bigley of Greenpeace last month at the church.

At the forum, Bigley stressed the importance of caring for the environment.

"We began thinking what we could do," said Rev. Cutler.

"And we talked with Alix (a parishioner)."

"It's something we will grow with."

"We can begin a process. It may be three years before it is really in place."

White told those at the meeting that the town landfill is almost full.

"There is no accountability for what goes in," she said.

"Recycling helps us with our accountability."

According to White, 80 percent of what we use can be recycled.

"There are simple steps, minimal adjustments," she said.

White showed the group biodegradable paper trash bags which are being used for leaves in Weymouth.

Alix White, recycling consultant for White Cedar Farm Recycling, was the special speaker this week at St. Stephen's. Rev. E. Clifford Cutler moderated the meeting. (Staff photo/Kym Marcella)

They cost about 79 cents each, unless bought in large quantities when they would cost about 59 cents each, she said.

"Plastic bags take 450 years to biodegrade," she said.

She recommended "very simple products" such as Murphy's Oil Soap, Bon Ami and Borax.

"They are good and are not toxic to the septic system," she said.

Rev. Cutler said the possibility of the church buying 500 of the paper trash bags now is slim because of financial constraints.

White suggested that if local schools bought the bags, too, there would be more buying power.

She suggested that the church use paper grocery bags in waste baskets rather than plastic liners.

"You could ask the congregation to bring in paper grocery bags,' she said.

"Everyone has extras," said White.

"That's a good way to have the congregation involved in a small way."

Parishioner Betsy Stevenson said that she has been using coffee grounds from the church, as well as greens from the sacristy, for her composting pile.

White gave secretary Carol Tierney some recycled paper to try in the copy machine.

"The key to a successful recycling program is that it be easy," said White.

"And everyone here is the support group for making it work."

Rev. Cutler said that the church would look into the cost of purchasing recyled writing paper and paper towels.

He said there would also be a container set up in the sacristy for greens, and at another location for glass bottles.

In addition, church bulletins will be recycled, he said.

The church will also set up a box for discarded xerox paper which instead of being thrown away could be used for scrap paper or for the church school.

Rev. Cutler said the group will meet again in a month or two to see how the problem is going.

Also attending the meeting were church members Roger Nast, David Pottenger and Gregory Veiga.

"The (environmental) forum really started thinking serously about this," said Rev. Cutler.

"Parishioners seem interested though there is really not a great groundswell.

"But I think we can build this into the routine.

School news

Library news

At the Junior/Senior High School students have been hard at work studying/reviewing for mid-year exams; but once exams are over, we recommend the following good reads available in the high school library as a sure cure for the winter blahs....

If you like books which deal with the supernatural, you might want to try Margaret Mahy's somewhat challenging novel, The Changeover. In this supernatural romance a strange menacing power seems to be holding Laura's little brother in its grip. If she can use her own latent power, she may be able to save him. Australian author Margaret Mahy has created "Memorable characters as real as one's own neighbors who are caught up in a life and death struggle against unseen, ancient evil."

Or for those whose reading interests lie in the non-fiction realm, there is a spectacular and beatifully illustrated, Smithsonian Book of Flight which covers the history of aeronautics. Still in the non-fiction area, we find Enduring Women by Diana Koos Gentry which "shatters the stereotype of the typical working woman;...in this intensely personal look into the lives of ten diverse American women, not money and power, but personal courage, physical strength, and indominatable will, plus the traditional values of family and home are the measure of success...There is Adie Urie who runs a Vermont farm on real horse power...or Mahala Combs who has led a life of poverty in the coal fields of Appalachia, but strives for upward mobility..."

At Deerhill School Library Marge Murphy and the 6th graders have been holding some exciting book discussion and book review sessions. Some titles the students have been reading and critiquing include: Carry on Mr. Bowditch by Jean Latham; in this Newbery Award winning biography the author has highlighted incidents in Nathaniel Bowditch's life which would appeal to young people. In the process she has written a fast paced book which covers the apprenticeship of a 12 year old boy in old Salem, to a ship chandler, then moves on to his days at sea where he puts to the test all his long nights of studying math and navigation. His book, The American Practical Navigator has become a classic and is still used in navigation today.

Another book being read by the 6th graders is Natalie Babbitt's Tuck Everlasting. In this fantasy "the Tuck family is confronted with an agonizing situation when they discover that a 10 year old girl and a malicious stranger now share their secret about a spring whose water prevents one from ever growing older ..."

And finally in The Incredible Journey by Sheila Burnford, a Labrador retriever, a bulldog and a Siamese cat trek 250 miles across Ontario through the Canadian wilderness. Here is a suspenseful tale of loyalty to home and master that is exceptional...This is a book for everyone — young and old alike — who has ever been owned by an animal.

And at Osgood some old favorites have resurfaced. The second and third graders have had a run on The Hardy Boys, Lorene Miller reports. This mystery series continues to be a sure fire hit and never seems to grow old...The Stories Julian Tells (and others in this series) by Ann Cameron where "a loving family is the center for six happy stories about catalog cats, strange teeth, a garden, a birthday fig tree, and a new friend..." And last but certainly not least are The Berenstain Bear books — just great for the beginning reader... A reminder to the grownups there is now a Parent Shelf in the public library in the children's room which the Osgood PSO has compiled to help with all kinds of parenting situations and problems.

Also at Osgood this week we will be continuing our annual second grade book writing project in which each class writes and illustrates their own book. If past projects and books are anything to go by — The Living Dead and The Wierdest Book Ever, for example —those of us in the school libraries who get involved will have as much fun as the children and second grade teachers do as the books unfold...

On a somewhat less joyful note, the monitor for the computer at the Deerhill School Library disappeared during Christmas vacation and is still missing. If you think you might know of its whereabouts, please call Marge Murphy. She would be delighted to have it back — no questions asked!

In closing I would like to invite anyone in the community to come in and visit the school libraries either to browse through some of the books mentioned above or any other titles which might look appealing, and to feel free to borrow materials for your youngsters or yourselves. If you plan to visit a Deerhill or Osgood Libraries, please call ahead to be sure a class is not scheduled in the library at the time you'd like to visit. At the Jr/Sr High School, you're welcome anytime — even with a class there is usually space available for those who are there to borrow books.

The Blue Fingered Thief

It was the second day of school after the summer vacation. Everyone entered the room happy because they had no homework to do the night before.

I had lost my markers the day before and couldn't find them at home. I thought they might be in my desk but when I opened it everything was gone except my tape, which I hide in a secret pocket under my desk, but that's not important. I thought it was a joke that somebody was playing on me, but when the rest of my classmates opened their desks, their things were missing too.

There was one thing stranger than any of that. There were blue fingerprints all over everyone's desk. Things seemed mighty mysterious. It looked like it was time for Detective Scrappy to go to work. (I'm Detective Scrappy.) I looked at the fingerprints and used my Special Super Fingerprint Machine to discover that they belonged to Mr. Wang, the school janitor. I knew where he lived because I used to live two houses away from him; before I moved. That day I waited outside his house for him to come home but he didn't.

The next day I followed him all around town after school but he didn't go to his house. He went to an old wooden shack. He went inside. I followed him, trying not to let him see me. I tried to keep as quiet as I could but the crunching sound of the dry leaves under my feet gave me away. He came out of his shack and started looking around for me. He didn't find me until I crept out of the bushes behind him, stuck my finger in his back and said, "Put your hands up or I'll shoot."

He did as I said and slowly turned around. When he saw I didn't have a gun, he ran away. I followed him and when I caught him, I put him in my handcuffs and brought him to the police station. The shack was his hideout where he stored all the stuff he stole and sold it, but luckily I caught him before he sold anything and the books were returned to the school and so were my markers.

Another case solved by DETECTIVE SCRAPPY!

Bedtime Thoughts

When I lie in bed at night, many things go through my mind. I usually try to make excuses to my parents so I can stay up later, but that doesn't seem to work, after my third glass of water. Did I do all my homework? Did I study for my tests?

Sports come to my mind next. If it's soccer season, I'm thinking of my next game, and if it will be tough. If it's baseball or basketball season, I'm thinking of how many hits I'll have or baskets I'll score.

Sometimes I hear noises outside, and I get scared, but I know it's just the wind or rain. Even the house makes funny noises, like doors creaking and other mysterious sounds.

I also like to think of what I'm going to be when I get older. I seem to change my mind a lot. One day I want to be a professional baseball player and the next day, a pilot. At one time, I even thought it would be awesome to be a rock star. After all of this thinking, I'm usually asleep.

The Magic Show

Susan and Joey lived in a big house in the city. They had never been to the country before.

This summer they were going away to Maine. On Saturday, July fifth, Mr. Harper (Susan and Joey's dad) loaded up the car. Mrs. Harper dressed Susan in a little white dress just below her knees, with a blue sash that had a huge bow in back. She dressed Joey in nice slacks and an oxford shirt. She kept the sports jacket and tie off for the car trips.

"Okay, kiddoes," said Mr. Harper. "Hop in." They did and they were off.

They arrived in Maine at six o'clock. There was a lake behind the cabin.

"I want to go swimming," yelled Susan excitedly.

"It's too late to go swimming," Mrs. Harper said, "but I'll take you down to the lake and teach you how to skip rocks."

They went down to the lake and Mrs. Harper gathered five flat stones. She showed them how to skip rocks.

Susan, who is younger than Joey, did it right away. Joey, on the other hand, couldn't do it quite as well. He tried his first and second stone; they didn't work. Then he tried his first and second stone; they didn't work. Then he tried the third stone. It worked but it skipped BACK to him! He tried again and again but it kept skipping back. Then he tried one last time; he threw it with all his might, but the strange stone kept skipping back.

Finally they went inside. Joey left the stone there. No one knew, but the stone was magical.

When they went outside the next morning there was a boat in the water. There was a note that said "FOR JOEY" on it.

The family went out in the boat.

They kept the rock, and it kept giving Joey gifts.

After about two years, they found out it was the rock that was giving them presents.

Joey grew older, and he and his family were the richest people in the world.

A Strange Day In July

Jen and Craig were moving to Maine. Their new house was small but very beautiful. It sat on Sunside Lake in a small town called Beesdale. There were amusement parks and many beaches nearby.

Craig and Jen liked the water and Beesdale had the most beautiful views in Maine. They were looking forward to swimming in the lake behind their house.

Last Christmas, they received a twelve-foot Boston Whaler with a four-horse power engine. They would keep it tied to a small dock out back.

It was a long, hot ride to Maine. When they finally arrived, they went down to the lake to skip stones. Jen and Craig threw two each. When Craig threw his third one, it came back! He tried again. He threw with all his might, but the third stone kept skipping back. Craig looked carefully into the lake. He threw the stone again, and back it came. Then, all of a sudden, Jen saw a frog jumping up and down in the water. She realized that when Craig threw the stone, the frog would pop his head up and send the stone back. They had never seen anything like it! As they walked back toward the house, they thought what a crazy summer this would be!

The Strange Pond

Mark was new in the town of Kennybunk, Maine. He had just moved from California. Back in "cali," as he called it, he liked to surf. Although his father thought he was too young to do anything, Mark did just the opposite, everything.

Mark was pretty tall for his age which was six. He had light brown hair, green eyes, and a small nose. He was pretty good looking actually.

One Saturday afternoon after the cartoons were over, Mark decided to take a walk. He didn't know quite where, but he wanted to get out of the house.

Before he knew it, he was looking at a beautiful pond with beautiful grass, and tall trees surrounding it. The pond also had a small beach. Mark was tired after his long walk so he lied down on the soft sand. It didn't take too long before he fell asleep.

Mark was awakened with a small nudge. "What?," said Mark sleepily. He looked up. He was staring at a short, fat and hairy creature. Mark was speechless. He had never seen such a strange creature.

"Yo, dude," said the creature. "chill out. No one's gonna hurt ya."

"Who are you?" asked Mark.

"Names' Chuck. How's it going? I was cruising the coast when I saw you lying there. It was getting kind of late so I figured you could spend the night."

"Are you human?" asked Mark.

"No actually I'm not. I am part of a tribe related to the cat family," said Chuck. "But they all left to go to another island in the Pacific. They left me to guard the place all by myself. By the way, what's your name?"

"Mark. Mark Fisher."

"Well, Mark Fisher, we had better get to sleep or we won't be able to get up and go skip rocks in the morning."

"OK"

"Rise and shine, my little man," said Chuck. "We have to go skip rocks."

"Well, let's get down there," yelled Mark happily.

SPLASH SPLASH.

"Darn. I can't do this right." said Mark.

"No, no, no. You hold it like this, see, and you just fling it."

PING, SKIP, SKIP, SKIP, SKIP, SKIP.

"Wow," yelled Mark. "Your'e really good, Chuck"

"Thank you," said Chuck. "But my performance isn't over yet. Ah, here it comes."

SKIP, SKIP, SKIP, SKIP, SKIP.

But as time passed, Mark stopped coming to Chuck. He had big plans and he was getting older. But he will never forget the week he spent with his magical friend. So, when ever you see a lake or pond on a path that you have never seen before, don't be surprised if you see a rock skipping to and from a beach.

A Strange Day in July

It was a humid, sunny day in July, and Tim felt like going to the small pond at the end of the road. Of course, his little sister, Carrie, begged him to let her come along too. So, he let her.

Together they ran down the road, hot and sweaty. They finally made it to the edge of the pond, and quickly took off their shoes. They put their feet in the cool water and lay down in the grass.

Tim then sat up and picked three stones from the ground. He threw the first stone and it skipped two times, then sank in the water, leaving rings where it had landed. Next, he threw the second stone, but he'd thrown it so hard, he didn't see where it landed. Then, he threw in the last stone, but it skipped back. So, Tim waded in the water a little farther to fetch the wet stone again. He threw with all his might, but the third stone kept skipping back! He then kneeled close to the stone, studying it. Carrie came up and crouched beside him, wondering why it had done that. Then, Tim stood up. He started walking into the pond.

"What are you doing?" Carrie asked, looking at him strangely.

"I have to find out what made the stone do that," he replied. He then dove under, his head disappearing into the water.

Carrie waited impatiently for what seemed like fifteen minutes before Tim's head burst out of the water. He was smiling at her, almost about to laugh.

Then he cried, "It was only a large rock underneath the water that made the stone skip back that way!"

They both laughed as Tim got out of the water dripping wet. So, it hadn't been such a strange day after all!!

A Strange Day in June

"Bye Mom," they yelled as they went through the door. "We will be at the pond." Katie, at the age of thirteen, took her twin brother and sister, Sammy and Jane, by the hand as they crossed Rock Lane to reach the pond.

When they finally reached the pond Katie spread out a blanket under an Oak tree. Sammy was already over in his secret spot on the immense boulders by the shore. Jane was just sitting by the shore thinking. She looked sad and depressed. She did not make a sound as Katie started walking toward her. Katie noticed, as she glanced over at Sammy, the he was looking at a rock with great feeling in his eyes. He suddenly burst into tears and cried, "Why? Why?"

Katie ran over to Sammy. "It's all right. It wasn't our fault. It was Daddy's time to go." Sammy got up and went over to the shore and started skipping rocks into the pond as if he were trying to let out his anger. Katie knew it was hardest for Sammy to accept Daddy's death. Sammy and Daddy were best friends, and Katie knew that could never be broken but Sammy didn't. As Katie looked at Sammy, tears slowly ran down her face. Now Katie could feel the hurt in her own heart. When Jane saw them crying she ran quickly over to them and hugged Katie so Katie would stop crying. She just couldn't stop.

Sammy kept skipping the rocks as though he could just put his father out of his mind. He knew he could not, but he still threw with all his might. Yet, the third stone kept skipping back to him as if the stone wanted to hold onto Sammy and never go away. He realized that that was his father and not the stone coming back to him. Sammy now knew even if Daddy's body was not there his heart was, and it would never go away. The bond of love and friendship never ever could be broken.

Cohasset gymnasts celebrate win over Norwell

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Frankly, you just knew that the Cohasset High School gymnastics' team would eventually pull out a league victory before the season ended. But, why did it take so long to accomplish this feat, considering the Skippers have the best gymnast in the South Shore League. The answer is simple—Cohasset suffers from a depth problem, and, therefore, has to rely mainly on Michelle Hartley to score almost all their points.

On February 1, the excruciating wait was finally rewarded when Hartley captured three events and finished with a meet-high score in the all-around (32.6 points), enabling Cohasset to gain its first SSL victory of the season, a 105.15-104.65 triumph over Norwell.

The Skippers' victory could be attributed, possibly, to their fine performance versus first-place leader Scituate, January 30. Although a talented Scituate squad retained its untainted 10-0 record and sole possession of the South Shore League with a 127.6-113.9 decision, it was the young Cohasset team that showed grace under pressure and a number of personal objectives to boot.

The Skippers (1-8) did relish one important area—the all-around competition. Winning two events, including a personal best in the floor exercise (8.8), Hartley, a junior, took her eighth all-around of the season with a personal best of 33.8. Moreover, the Cohasset score was also a seasonal high.

Although rich in team depth, the Sailors are comprised of six freshmen, six sophomores, no juniors and senior co-captains Suzanne Critchley and Lori Edwards. Scituate's top finishers, Tanya Murray and Lisa Coyne, finished second and third in the all-around respectively. Murray's strong finish was due in part to her victories in the balance beam (8.3) and vault (8.4).

With 11 gymnasts on her team, Cohasset coach Ruthann Sargent is working with only three juniors and three freshmen. The five remaining members are either in Grade 7 or 8—but with the youth, comes enthusiasm.

On the beam alone, the Skippers set three new personal bests with junior tri-captain Carrie Ripley (7.2), eighth grader Tara Gallagher (7.1), and seventh grader Joanna Horn with a 6.4. Gallagher's 28.9 earned her fourth in the all-around competition.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

Sara Bishop's 13 points and eight steals helped Cohasset roll to a SSL victory over Carver, 68-23, January 31.

Allison Ludlow scored 10 points for the Skippers (9-6), who need to win three out of their last five remaining games to qualify for the EMASS tournament. Teammate Kristin Ellinger finished with eight points, 10 rebounds and seven steals.

The defending Division Three State Champions defeated East Bridgewater, 37-28, in a makeup contest February 5. Bishop led the Skippers with 10 points.

BOYS' BASKETBALL

Jeff Bryant scored 21 points and grabbed 10 rebounds and Linc Marsac netted nine of his 17 points in the fourth quarter, propelling Cohasset to a 66-56 SSL victory over Carver January 31.

Sophomore, Terry O'Leary added 16 points and pulled down for the Skippers (4-11), who led 48-40 at the half.

In a makeup game played at Cohasset High February 5, East Bridgewater qualified for the tournament with a convincing 71-44 victory over the Skippers.

Bryant scored 13 points and Jim Reidy contributed with 10 for Cohasset, which was outscored, 22-6, in the fourth quarter.

HOCKEY

The Cohasset High School hockey club collected back-to-back 7-2 defeats last week.

On February 1, Rich Manning, the SSL Small School's leading scorer, netted three goals and Chris O'Donnell scored twice, powering Whitman-Hanson to victory at Rockland Arena.

Matt Elliott had a goal and three assists for the Panthers (9-5-1 overall), and Bob Facella added a goal and an assist. Whitman goalie Steve Corr stopped 25 shots.

Brian Pompeo and Jim Gallagher scored the Cohasset goals.

Three nights later at Hobomock Arena, Mike Richardson had a goal and four assists and Pat Henderson scored twice to lead Hull (13-1-1) past Cohasset.

Hull's David Orpen opened the scoring at 1:45 of the first period and Richardson scored less than a minute later. Gallagher answered for Cohasset (5-9-1), cutting the lead to one, but Chris Oliveri and Henderson (both assists went to Richardson) scored for the Pirates' 4-1, first-period lead.

Hull's Dean Tramontana and Bob Divi to made it 6-1 before Pompeo cut it to 6-2 after two periods. Henderson rounded out the scoring.

WRESTLING

Jeff Liberman (119 pounds) and David Paschal (135) remained undefeated, leading Randolph (17-0-1) to a 41-22 SSL victory over Cohasset Februarv 1.

Hats are back

Cohasset students recently scored a hat trick—not on the ice but in the classroom.

After a request from the student council, the school rescinded a ban on hats in school, high school principal Mary Ellen Gallagher told the school committee Feb. 6.

"We recommend that the wearing of hats be allowed as long as it does not interfere with the educational process or the safety of the student," said student council president Jay Staunton in a Feb. 2 letter to Gallagher.

Staunton added that any inscription on any hat should be acceptable and not offensive in any manner.

"We agree to monitor any problems which may develop as a result of this recommendation," said Staunton.

"It's a little freedom with responsibility," said school committee member Barbara Bliss.

"The implication is that it will be reversed if there is a problem?" asked committee chairman Diana Kornet.

"It will be," answered Gallagher.

However, not everyone was in favor of the change.

"I'm against it," said faculty member George Fortin.

"I don't see any need to wear a hat in the building."

Superbowl donation

The following merchants and residents donated items for the Superbowl Party held last month to benefit the Osgood School "Project Playground":

Cohasset Meat and Produce — deli meats, salads, meat raffle and 1 percent on all groceries; Liquors Unlimited; Kit 'n Kaboodle; Charlottes; Red Lion; Cohasset Tennis and Squash Club; Lisa Coletti; Claudia Story.

Melinda at Design in Bloom; Kathy Walsh; Janet Amiri; Laura Atherton; Bowman and Company; Stop and Shop; Suburban TV (Darryl Roberts); Cohasset Liquors; Pat's Barber Shop; and Legion Hall.

Over 200 people attended adding $2600 to the playground fund which now totals $12,900.

Thanks to Cheryl and Dick Bugley and John and Susan Carr for organizing the effort and to parents who contributed hors d'oeuvres and desserts.

1 win — 8 losses

With only 11 gymnasts on her team, Ruthann Sargent feels that after a three year struggle of hard practicing and devotion the Skippers now have what it takes to win.

The team consists of three juniors, no sophomores and three freshmen. The remaining five gymnasts are seventh and eighth graders.

The Skippers celebrated their first victory in a three-year period this week against Norwell. "It was a great feeling," remarked Ruthann Sargent. "The girls' hard work is really starting to pay off. We have been too close too often losing by 1, 2, 3, 4 & 5 points. Don't get me wrong, I have not minded losing at all, because the girls have looked terrific this season."

Captain Michelle Hartley has set a record high on the floor exercise of 8.8, uneven bars 8.55 and an All Around High of 33.8. Hartley is undefeated in the South Shore League.

Also, Captains Carrie Ripley and Liz Buckley have set personal bests on the balance beam.

Freshman Laura Andrews has been performing well on the horse, bars and floor exercise. Teammate Erin Sutherland, also a freshman, has set a personal best of 6.4 on the floor exercise. Lisa Coates has made great improvement on the balance beam performance.

Gallagher, eighth grader, has shown outstanding performances on floor exercise of 7.85, vaulting 8.0 and also an all-around high of 28.9. Teammates Johanna Horn and Marnie DeMichele have shown much grace performing on the floor exercise and balance beam. And seventh and eighth graders Aimee Mitchell and Nicole Haefner have shown a great deal of improvement on the uneven bars.

SOUTHERLY by land now or formerly of Trustees of New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, as shown on said plan, one hundred forty-one and 07/100 (141.07) feet more or less; and WESTERLY by Lot A on said plan, one hundred forty-two and 26/100 (142.26) feet.

Containing eighteen thousand four hundred twenty-eight (18,428) square feet more or less according to said plan.

For title see deed of Edwin C. Brown, Jr. and Susan R. Palladino dated July 10, 1986 and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 6732, Page 740.

TERMS OF SALE:

Said premises will be sold and conveyed subject to and with the benefit of all, if any, rights, rights of way, restrictions, easements, covenants, improvements, outstanding tax titles, municipal or other public assessments, liens or claims in the nature of liens, and existing encumbrances of record, if any there be, insofar as the same are in force and applicable, created prior to the said mortgage which is being foreclosed.

A deposit of EIGHTEEN THOUSAND ($18,000.00) DOLLARS by certified or bank cashier's check — no cash — will be required to be made at the time and place of the sale. The balance of the purchase price is to be paid in cash or by certified check or bank cashier's check at the offices of Shocket & Dockser, One Apple Hill, Suite 225, (Route 9), Natick, Massachusetts, within twenty (20) days after the sale which balance is to be deposited in escrow with the firm of Shocket & Dockser, pending approval of said sale by the Norfolk Superior Court. Deed to be taken within ten (10) days from the date of the approval of said sale by the Norfolk Superior Court.

The successful bidder, other than the mortgagee, shall give the required deposit to Shocket & Dockser, One Apple Hill, Suite 225, Natick, Massachusetts 01760, which deposit shall be retained by the mortgagee if the successful bidder shall refuse to sign this Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate, or if, after signing, the successful bidder does not perform his or her obligations hereunder. If the deposit is so retained, it shall become the property of the mortgagee as seller under this Agreement, and shall not be applied on the mortgage debt and such retention of the deposit shall not release the successful bidder from his or her obligations hereunder, should the mortgagee decide to pursue the same and/or cease to pursue any and all other rights, remedies, and courses from time to time available.

The premises shall be conveyed by the usual foreclosure deed under the statutory power of sale, subject to the foregoing, and, in addition, subject to any and all unpaid taxes, tax titles, tax liens, water and sewer rates and any other municipal assessments or liens.

The sale shall not be deemed complete until the successful bidder shall have made his or her deposit and signed this Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate. The balance of the consideration is to be paid at the offices of Shocket & Dockser, One Apple Hill, Suite 225, Natick, Massachusetts, on or before 10:00 o'clock on the twentieth (20th) day following the sale, provided that such day is one on which the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds is open for business, and if not, then on the next day on which such Registry is open for business. Time is of the essence as regards to this Agreement.

Other terms, if any, to be announced at the sale.

Cohasset worship...

St. Stephen's Church

The Rev. E. Clifford Cutler, Rector,
383-1083

CENTERING PRAYER AND CENTERED LIVING

A Lenten course on Centering Prayer will meet on Wednesday evenings at 7:30 beginning February 15. The course will be led by the Rev. Dr. Richard Martin. Centering Prayer helps give a dimension of peace in our lives and centers us in our living.

OPPORTUNITY AWAITS

If you have ever thought about singing in the choir, now is the time to give it a try. The choir is just now beginning to work on music for Easter while preparing music for Sundays in Lent. If you have questions feel free to talk with me after church, at church during the week on Tuesday or Thursday, or call me at home any time at 267-1424.

Robert Barney

CHANGED DATE FOR OUTREACH MEETING

The next scheduled meeting of the Outreach Committee will take place at 9 a.m. February 26 in the Watermelon Room. Any new members to the congregation or interested parishioners are welcome to hear about Outreach Committee plans for 1989!

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

The Jenkins School Teen Mothers' program in Scituate would welcome any volunteer babysitting on Mondays, Wednesdays, or Fridays. There are approximately six infants to feed, rock and hold, and several 1-year-olds to watch and play with, and there are new babies expected this spring.

The Director, Elizabeth Hawes, would welcome anyone interested in visiting the program. The mothers receive word processing instruction and high school equivalency instruction in one area, and their babies are lovingly cared for by a team of nurses in a delightful nursery. It is very well organized and very easy to join in on the caring for these little ones.

If you would like more information, contact Wendy Lanoue (St. Stephen's) at 545-5316, or you may call Elizabeth Hawes, Program Director, at 545-7346.

Hull church services

A special Lenten Mass will be celebrated every Friday at 7 p.m. at St. Ann's Church during Lent.

A Valentine's dance will be held from 8 p.m. to midnight on Saturday, Feb. 11 at the Knights of Columbus Hall, sponsored by Hull Knights of Columbus and St. Mary of the Assumption Parish's religious education committee. Admission is $5.

Married couples will have the chance to renew their marriage vows at the 11 a.m. Mass Sunday, Feb. 12 at St. Ann's Church.

Shabbat services

Shabbat services will be held at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, February 10, 7:30 p.m. The family service will be conducted by Elaine Freedman's 6 p.m. Gimel class. Rabbi Stephen Karol will offer birthday blessings for children born during the month of February.

Sha'aray Shalom is located at 1112 Main St., Hingham. For information call 749-8103.

Classes for homemakers

How many ways to show love in your home? The February Homemaking meeting for the women of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will be held Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m. at the local LDS chapel on Gardner Street, Hingham.

The program will consist of four mini-classes on the following subjects: Chinese cooking (egg rolls) by Lynn Turner of Thailand, Coping with Stress by Kim Stumph, Machine Embroidery by Lynette Howe, and Simple Quilting with Harriet Horton. Refreshments will be served.

Diane Mangum, president of the women's organization of the church, (the Relief Society) promises a good evening and suggests that guests are welcome.

If interested, call Diane at 659-4709.

Police sergeant goes to court for his candidacy

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Police Sergeant Richard Barrow is seeking a court injunction against the town which would prevent enforcement of the police department's rules requiring an officer to take a leave of absence while campaigning for paid, political office.

Sgt. Barrow, who took out nomination papers last month for a three-year term on the board of selectmen, forfeited those papers to the town clerk's office two weeks later. At that time, he was advised by town counsel that campaigning for paid, political office without taking a leave from the department was in violation of the department's rules.

According to the police sergeant's testimony, that information "chilled Barrow's efforts to run for public office." Sgt. Barrow refused to take a leave of absence, saying it would cost him $3,000 in salary.

On January 23, Sgt. Barrow requested that selectmen waive the department rules and allow him to run for office without taking leave from his employment. That request was denied by the board.

In his request for a preliminary injunction, filed this week by Atty. Michael Manning, representing the International Brotherhood of Police Officers, Sgt. Barrow asks the court to order the reissuance of his nomination papers, that Police Chief Joseph Kealey be prevented from issuing any form of discipline against the sergeant, and that Chief Kealey be prohibited from enforcing the department's rules until the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission has decided the legality of those regulations.

Sgt. Barrow and Cohasset Officer Paul Laugelle, who was president of the local union when selectmen adopted the regulations in 1983, have stated the rules were never accepted by the police union.

The request for a preliminary injunction will be heard in Norfolk County Superior Court Thursday, Feb. 16.

In his request for the injunction, Sgt. Barrow testified that he is "being denied free and unfettered access to his rightful position on a Town of Cohasset ballot."

According to his testimony, the board of selectmen in 1983 approved new rules and

Optimistic achiever to leave town post

"I hope I've been a voice of reason on the board," said selectman vice chairman Cliff Mitman who is not seeking reelection after six years on the board.

"I have a reasonably laid-back personality as compared to other personalities on the board," said Mitman, 50, a consultant who lives at 118 Beach St. "I get along reasonably well with people."

Mitman is leaving the board to devote more time to a new job as senior consultant with Wyatt Co., which has 64 offices across the world. He works out of the Wellesley office.

After 24 years, he left TPF&Co. where he had been vice president in charge of executive compensation.

"My responsibilities are different than they were," said Mitman. "I have to prove myself to a whole new set of people, and I have to get a whole new set of clients.

"The job is taking more time.

"It's a fun job — it fits my personality.

"There's always a different cast of characters. No two days are the same. I'd never be happy with the same situation every day."

Mitman has lived in Cohasset since 1969.

A native of Philadelphia, he majored in economics at Yale.

Mitman served for three years in the Navy, then went to graduate school at the University of Pennsylvania where he earned an MBA degree in finance.

After seven years DeSantis calls it quits

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

He is not an inexperienced warrior, yet Charlie DeSantis' relentless battle against the state bureaucracy has left him "a little bit empty."

The 47 year-old Forest Avenue resident admits the battle is all but over, and he concedes defeat. But that is not the reason, he states defiantly, why he will not run again for sewer commissioner.

The two-term incumbent told his wife and four children in 1983 that two terms would be it. After long hours, lengthy meetings, and weekly trips into Boston to battle tough opponents, DeSantis said "I'm keeping my word to my family. This is it."

Their home, which DeSantis returned to in 1976 after a stint with the U.S. Army and travels with American Airlines, is for sale now.

"I've done a lot of thinking about this. I've denied my family a lot of things in the past seven years - namely time. I never anticipated the hours I would spend on this.

"But they really want a change, and in all fairness, they deserve a change. My wife wants us to move, and I've decided to honor her decision to reluctantly leave a community that means so much to me. But I suspect," he adds with a smile, "that this community will survive quite nicely without me."

It was not without some trepidation that

Residents oppose Chamber plans to install wiring around the common

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

It may be February, but the Christmas holidays are very much on the minds of some people.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce would like to pay the cost of installing underground wiring around the duckpond to light the common for the holiday season.

Selectmen told members to check with the Wiring Department and to see how much the project would cost.

But a number of residents are against the idea and have written to selectmen with their objections.

"The practice of placing white lights on three or four decidous trees around the duck pond does little to enhance the beauty and purity of the handsome homes in this historic district," wrote Elizabeth W. Warren of 11 Sankey Rd.

"Rather, these lights serve to distract and detract in a negative manner from this special area of town during the Christmas season.

"...The merchants would do better to focus their attention on the commercial areas in town and the leave the residential areas intact, to be decorated by the home-owners themselves."

Kathyrn V. Young of 31 Highland Ave. said, "I feel it is inappropriate for the chamber of commerce to presume that it is their function to decorate an area of town that is residential and is designated as a historic district.

"The common belongs to all citizens of the town and is not a suitable area to be decorated by a private interest group."

She also suggested that the chamber confine its efforts to the commercial area of town.

"The time-honored tradition of candle lights in windows around the common during the Christmas season is both lovely, and in keeping with the religious and family emphases of the advent season," wrote Gordon and Betsy Stevenson of 13 N. Main St.

"Chamber of Commerce lighting displays are inappropriate commercial infringements into our residential area.

"We are even more strongly opposed to the use of our taxpayers' dollars to bury electrical wires or otherwise enhance what amounts to commercial exploitation of the common, particularly when one thinks of all the other more pressing needs facing our town, and its residents and its families."

James and Patricia Murphy of 27 Highland Ave. wrote that the appropriate place for this type of lighting is in a commercial district.

Cohasset's week . . .

Mooring fees due

Some 320 bills for mooring fees went out to Cohasset residents Monday, Feb. 13, according to Harbormaster Irving Gadow.

The bills must be returned with payments by April 1.

"They must be postmarked no later than April 1," said Gadow.

Fee is $4 per foot, he said.

Those on the waiting list must reaffirm their interest in a mooring by June 1, he added.

"The can stop by the harbormaster's office any time during the week to reaffirm," he said.

Last June, 75 residents lost their mooring or their place on the waiting list for missing a deadline.

Some are suing the town.

They also appealed the town's action to the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering and were allowed to keep their moorings over the summer until the matter is settled.

In a related matter, Gadow recently conducted a survey of mooring fees in related towns at the request of executive secretary Gregory J. Doyon.

According to Gadow, the following mooring fees per foot are charged: Beverly, $2; Hull, $1.50 (proposed $3 per foot); Scituate, $3; Duxbury, $3; and Plymouth, $4.

There is no fee charged in Weymouth, Hingham and Quincy, he said.

Tempo is gone

Tempo Television will be discontinued from Continental Cablevision's channel line-up effective Friday, Feb. 17.

In a letter to selectmen, general manager John G. Walber apologized for the short notice regarding the change.

"Tempo had informed us in December that they planned to cease operation in April of 1989," said Walber.

"On Jan. 24, we received notice that the date was moved to February.

"We are now evaluating other programming services that may be of interest to our subscribers.

"We recently completed our fall tracking study and we are now working on our annual 'viewership' study.

"These projects will assist in our decision making."

Town to get grant

"It gave us the feeling that all is not lost on the Curtis Estate," said selectman chairman Burt Pratt Monday night, Feb. 13, as he reported on a meeting last week with a representative of the Executive Office of Communities and Development.

Pratt said that he and other town officials met for about an hour last Thursday, Feb. 9, at Town Hall with Anna Perez of EOCD.

Among those attending were selectman James Gallagher, executive secretary Greg Doyon, housing authority chairman John Muncey, Atty. Richard Henderson representing the town and Atty. Charles Humphreys representing the housing authority.

"Miss Perez left here somewhat happier than when she came in," said Pratt.

"The town will get $9,000 for a consultant."

"The big problem will be gathering up the reports that already exist (to give the consultant)."

The state Executive Office of Communities and Development recently awarded the town a $9,000 grant to study the feasibility of the Curtis Estate Project.

However, it later requested that the money be withheld until the scope of the project was reevaluated.

The study would include such things as soil tests, an analysis of the existing buildings and an overall evaluation of the property.

There is also ongoing probate court litigation involving the Curtis Estate project.

The estate trustees have petitioned the court to break the terms of the Curtis will so they can sell the 53-acre property to a private developer.

The town has interceded in the case, asking the attorney general to recommend that the housing authority be awarded the property and $2 million in assets to provide housing for the homeless, the mentally retarded, the abused and low income families.

Warrant articles accepted

Selectmen rejected four warrant articles during a review Monday night, Feb. 13.

More than 60 were accepted.

The first to be rejected were two articles resubmitted by the planning board.

The first involved creation of a municipal housing authority, and the second, increased density for qualified housing.

The municipal housing article was defeated at the last two town meetings.

The increased density article was indefinitely postponed at last December's town meeting.

"I don't think they should be on the warrant," said Selectman chairman Burt Pratt.

"I think it's an affront from the planning board to bring this around again."

Also rejected was an article submitted by the fire chief to amend the zoning bylaws regarding automatic residential sprinkler systems, and an appropriation requested by the selectmen's office for a town wide space needs study.

Board members said the survey was unnecessary.

Among the accepted warrant articles are transfer of land for cemetery purposes, restoration of forfeited moorings and restriction of jet skis.

There are also appropriation articles for renovation of the police/fire station, $90,000 for a new fire department ambulance, and $87,000 for three school buses.

Hoban applies for store liquor license

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Selectman said they will decide Feb. 27 the fate of a liquor license held by Cohasset Central market 60 S. Main St., which has been closed since last June.

The board also voted Monday night, Feb. 13, to continue to that date a request from James Hoban of Cohasset Meat and Produce for the all alcoholic retail license, one of four in Cohasset.

The decision was postponed so that board members can ascertain if Cohasset Savings Bank is negotiating with a potential buyer for the market.

Last October, the board transferred the market's license from James Finucane of Marshfield to Kevin McManus.

But the lease arrangement was never completed and the store has not reopened.

Further complicating the matter is a letter from the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (ABCC) which executive secretary Greg Doyon read to selectmen.

The letter stated that the ABCC will disapprove the application for the license transfer Feb. 28 unless a tax matter is cleared up with the Department of Revenue prior to that date.

Doyon suggested that the board could rescind or revoke the license, continue the hearing, take the matter under advisement or put the license holder under notice for a certain amount of time.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said there is a distinction between cancelling the license for non-use and revocation.

"If you cancel it, you may hold it in trust," said Henderson.

"If you revoke it, it is gone forever."

Henderson added that he was not convinced the last option would be legal.

Other applicants for the license are Donald Staszko for the proposed Cohasset Plaza, and Robert Davenport of Sohier St.

Atty. Michael Georges, who represented Hoban, said that if the matter were continued for anything but a brief time, it would prejudice his client's application.

"We would file an appeal that we had been prejudiced," said Georges.

The attorney said that according to the president of the bank, they have no prospective buyer for the market, and are planning to send out flyers advertising the property.

Selectman Chairman Burt Pratt said the chairman of the bank intimated to him about negotiations with a prospective buyer.

Selectman Cliff Mitman said that the board wants to maintain the viability of the downtown business area.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby suggested that the license be revoked.

"I have had very few people complaining to me (about the lack of the license, she said.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle noted that the town's fourth license was granted by special legislation despite the fact that Cohasset did not have the required population for it.

Laugelle suggested that the matter be continued for two weeks.

"Then we will transfer it or revoke it or whatever," he said.

Davenport, who was among some 20 residents at the hearing, said that the board had the decision in its hands now.

"I'd like to see the license stay in the building," said selectman James Gallagher.

Henderson reiterated the debt owed by the license holder to the DOR.

"It has to be paid before the license is transferred," he said.

"Until it is paid, an integral part of the process is held up."

He added that the ABCC has the authority to cancel the license over the licensing authority.

"But that is rare," he said.

Georges agreed not to bring suit on behalf of his client during the two week continuance.

A resident asked that all five selectmen be present for the Feb. 27 vote.

"We can't say that we will all be here," said Laugelle.

"By law, we are only required to have three people (for a quorum)."

Concerns about nerve respone and function often lead the doctor of chiropractice to check all of a patients cranial nerves. These twelve nerves exit the skull through a variety of openings and are vitally important to health. The first cranial nerve carries our sense of smell, the second our sense of sight. The third, fourth, and sixth control our eyemovements. The fifth powers the muscles we use to chew, and carries sensations from the skin of the face. The seventh energizes the muscles of facial expression. The eight cranial nerve enables us to hear and maintain balance. The ninth is concerned with taste and the protective gag reflex. The tenth (vagus) nerve has to do with many of the automatic actions of the heart, lungs, and abdominal organs. The eleventh controls the back's trapezius muscle. The twelfth controls the tongue.

Weary warrior calls it quits after seven years

DeSantis entered the world of local politics in 1982. It was at that time that DeSantis, an airline co-pilot, decided to read up on the conventional sewer treatment plant his town was about to buy into.

"I knew it was something that I had to act on immediately," he recalls. "I analyzied the federal Clean Waters Act and learned about alternatives to these massive construction projects Cohasset had just approved. I read that there were desirable alternatives that were encouraged by the Environmental Protection Agency."

The town had just agreed to construct a $20 million wastewater treatment facility as a method of correcting Cohasset's sewerage discharge permit violation.

"I realized this construction would be impossible under Proposition 2 1/2, but by increasing the debt service to the town, it would make it financially irresponsible and perhaps impossible for the town to handle," he notes.

Prior to his study of the situation, DeSantis admits, "I knew as much about sewerage and septic systems as the average American male - that water flows downhill."

He had no idea then how the subject would consume his life for the next seven years.

And although the war has been lost, DeSantis can look back on important battles won by the town of Cohasset against some mighty opponents in state government.

The first battle took place on November 29, 1982 when special town meeting accepted DeSantis' petition to suspend the Metcalf and Eddy plan while alternatives to a central sewer plant were evaluated. As a result of that vote, two sewer commissioners resigned. DeSantis was appointed to fill an unexpired vacancy, and later successfully ran for the position in 1983.

That daring vote by the upstart voters at town meeting was immediately challenged by the state Division of Water Pollution Control. It required expensive legal counsel as the town argued that enforcement of a central sewer plant operation opposed the standards of the federal Clean Waters Act and violated the concept of home rule.

"What I take pride in," DeSantis says, "is that the state was never successful in its legal actions against this small town. They may have pulled the plug on our funding, but they couldn't touch us on the legal issues."

Alternative plans were developed and utlimately town meeting decided to support the Ward Plan. Opponents of the alternative program, people who are just as vocal and unrelenting as DeSantis and the proponents, argue that residents favoring the smaller program are hindering the economic growth of the community.

DeSantis sees it as protection of the "semi-rural nature of the town - most definitely terminating massive urban sprawl within our community."

The leader of the controversial sewer plan recalls with some measure of pride that each time a Ward Plan article reached town meeting, it resulted in a successful vote. And each time a Ward Plan proponent faced election to the board of sewer commissioners, he was victorious.

The last success for the Ward Plan was last spring when special town meeting voters approved the pipe connection into the Hull treatment facility, and appropriated money for that project.

But just as the engineering surveys were being completed for the construction of the intermunicipal project, the state informed Cohasset that the 90 percent federal-state share of the project cost was depleted.

DeSantis says some people still hold onto the hope that the Ward Plan will survive with renewed funding promises from the state. DeSantis is a Pollyanna no longer.

"I can't see how the state will come up with the money," he says. "And if they come to us and say they're going to give us 50 or 60 percent, I'd say forget it. The town just can't afford it without that 90 percent funding.

"Without it, we're dead in the water."

What the sewer commissioners are planning is an expansion of the current treatment plant and the sewering of all the streets proposed in the Ward Plan except for Hull Street. "At this point, it's probably our only alternative," he adds. That plan will require state approval and about $1.4 million.

When asked what it felt like to be told at the 12th hour there was no money available for the long-anticipated Ward Plan, DeSantis recalls, "empty, hollow. It's difficult to express the extent of my disappointment.

"But we have to realize that the town has not constructed something it couldn't afford, like a central sewer plant - something it didn't want that would irrevocably change the very nature of the community people have grown to love."

Bucking the bureaucracy and challenging the status quo was not an easy task to undertake, yet the town of Cohasset proved it would not be bullied into blindly accepting its future as perceived by the state government, he adds.

"We should all take a measure of credit for that," according to DeSantis.

"On the other hand," he adds, "it's ironic that we were denied funds because the state treasury has gone into the red. Perhaps they went into the red because the state has chosen in the past to pursue gold-plated projects that we had to fight so hard to stop."

Charlie DeSantis

Ever the articulate orator, DeSantis said he was never naive about the vociferous opposition to his views, yet he never anticipated the enduring hostility expressed by many town and state officials.

"I guess where I was naive was my belief that the regulations were to be followed -that if the town came up with an approvable plan, the state was there to expedite it. But what I found in this state was a bureaucracy that had no time for this town, but only wished to pursue its own plan (Metcalf and Eddy project)," he states. "I refused to allow that to prevail. It violates our basic Constitutional processes and the statutes they administer."

DeSantis says his disillusionment with the state bureaucracy had no influence on his decision not to seek re-election.

"I still enjoy the political system. I enjoy it although I now realize how cumbersome it is. Ultimately I still believe the will of the town will prevail.

"Personally," he continues, "I found this whole affair ennobling. I've met many wonderful people on both sides of the issue. I admire the complexity of this community, in its ability to believe in itself. Ultimately, I think we now realize that Cohasset can choose its own destiny."

Sewer hike to subsidize operations

During a discussion of the sewer budget, commission chairman Charles DeSantis talked to the advisory committee about the proposed user fee increase of 15 to 50% July 1.

"We have an article for town meeting with a substantial increase in rates," said DeSantis.

"Right now, 15% of the operating budget is paid by the users, and 85% is subsidized by the town.

"The sewer commission is proposing that it is enough for the town to subsidize 50%."

DeSantis explained that if homeowners are spending $50 a year for their sewer user fee, the town is spending $400 to make up the actual cost of $450.

"With the increase, the homeowner and the town would each be paying $225," he said.

DeSantis said that the user fee has always been based on flow.

He said that homes average about 200 gallons a day, while a restaurant like Hugo's might average 11,000 gallons a day, or the equivalent of 55 homes.

DeSantis noted that in five years, the average homeowner might have to pay $1,000 a year because of Massachusetts Water Resources Authority assessments for the cleanup of Boston Harbor and Quincy Bay.

"This is a major change in policy towns will have to accept," he said.

Technically, the increase doesn't have to be approved at town meeting, according to DeSantis.

"But we thought because it is such a controversial issue, it deserved a full explanation."

At the beginning of March, a public meeting will be held on the proposed increase, he said.

The advisory committee approved an overall sewer budget of $167,096, up 6% over last year.

It also approved three transfer requests from the reserve fund. They were $421.11 for repair of the sludge pump, $2,958 for removal and installation of the aerator, and $3,090 for repair of the aerator.

A town hall budget of $47,358 was also approved after being trimmed $15,500 from the proposed $62,858.

Last year's budget was $50,833.39.

The $15,500 was to paint the exteror of the old town hall.

"We felt it shouldn't be a budget item," said advisory chairman Jane Goedecke.

"It should be a special article at town meeting to allow discussion, and to ensure that the money is for only painting and maintenance needs," Goedecke said.

The debt service budget of $479,306.40 was also approved by the committee. It includes $249,857.87 for maturing debt (principal payments) and $229,448.53 in interest.

The amount is up $50,000 from last year, services, fair housing, celebrations and constitution commitee.

Few cuts were made.

"There's not much to cut," said Goedecke.

No action was taken on the town buildings budget. Committee members questioned the need for a new septic system at $5,500.

The advisory committee's next meeting will be held Tuesday, Feb. 28, when it meets with members of the school committee.

Selectmen are scheduled for the Thursday, March 2 meeting.

according to Goedecke, due primarily to borrowing for the transfer station.

An election and town meeting budget of $22,331.21 was approved with five extra hours a week for clerical employee Jackie McGuire.

"Jackie McGuire is one of the hardest working employees," commented Goedecke.

The advisory committee also approved budgets for the shellfish constable, weights and measures, civil defense, historical commission, common historic district commission, archivist, veterans

Protest around the common

"Cohasset Common is a town treasure all year long, but we know many feel as we do about its special charm at Christmas," they said.

"What could be more beautiful than all those houses and churches lit as simply today as they probably were for the last two centuries?

"This IS the historic district.

"...Please do try to remember that driving past those lights is quite different from having them shine outside your windows all through the holiday season."

Elizabeth Durant of 16 Beach St. said that she was also opposed to lights on the common.

"The common is one of the most beautiful in New England, and at Christmas time, the candles lighted in the churches and in the houses around the common are particularly lovely and enhance the feeling and meaning of Christmas.

"To introduce commercial lighting of trees such as exist in Faneuil Market Place seems completely out of place in a residential setting.

"Let the Chamber of Commerce put lights on the trees down town, in the commercial part of the village.

"And please don't ask the townspeople to pay for the lights or for placing wires underground."

Bates building not wanted

The Bates Building would be totally unacceptable as a facility for senior activities, a Council On Aging official wrote to selectmen after being asked to tour the facility for that purpose.

T. Gerard Keating told the board that he visited the building Feb. 1.

"There is insufficient space and there are numerous areas which do not conform with safety regulations," he said.

"In addition, during this present fiscal crisis, thousands of dollars would have to be used to accomodate our activities, which would be unwise at this time.

"Also, the school department has advised us that there is no space available now or in the immediate future."

The Council On Aging is now located at the Cohasset Community Center, 3 North Main St.

IT'S A FACT
Chiropractic Can Help
Chiropractors have a very special education and training in treating nerve-related health problems caused by spinal misalignment. Chiropractors find the areas along the spinal column where nerves may be "pinched" by a spinal vertebra. After finding the problem, the chiropractor manipulates the misaligned vertebra back toward normal. This restores normal nerve supply and function. The result is that the body heals itself with no drugs, surgery or continued discomfort.

Mitman says he's an 'optimistic achiever'

"I was pretty good with numbers," he said. "And this was a little more humanized than economics."

While he was in graduate school, he began working at TPF & Co., a management consulting firm.

During his career with that company he worked in their Philadelphia, New York and Boston offices. When the company opened its Boston office, he moved to this area with his wife, Millie, daughters Amy, now 19, Jenny, 22, and Doug, 24. He now has a daughter-in-law, Terry.

"I didn't know too much about Boston," said Mitman. "We looked on the North Shore but we didn't like it. Someone in the office had bought a home in Cohasset and we came to look on the South Shore. Cohasset is a terrific, beautiful town.

"We moved here from Connecticut when I worked in New York. Everyone was a transient, executive type there.

"This was a community of different types of people —fishermen, tradesman as well as commuter types. It's like the town I grew up in. I'm accustomed to just folks."

The Mitmans lived for four years on Linden Drive, and for five years on South Main Street in a house which they renovated "from scratch."

"Then we wanted to be on the water," he said. "We've been here for eight years."

Cohasset is the first town with which Mitman has become politically involved, although he says he is not a political person.

"I'm an optimistic achiever," he said with a smile.

Prior to serving on the board of selectmen, Mitman brought his consulting experience to the personnel board for five years. His tenure included serving as chairman.

"I had dealt with employees from the bottom up," said Mitman.

"It seemed kind of a natural progression."

He was elected a selectman the first year the board was expanded from three to five members and served as chairman for a year.

"I didn't think there was a representative for the newcomers," explained Mitman.

"I thought I could bring a little different perspective to the board. I think I've been able to do that. Maybe not as much as I had hoped."

Serving on the board of selectmen has been pretty much what he expected.

"There were no big surprises," said Mitman. "The frustration level is maybe a little bit higher. I didn't come with any agenda, or plan to champion any cause. I just wanted to help the board move ahead, to resolve conflicts, to help the board to act."

Though most of the matters dealt with by selectmen have been pretty routine, a few have been tough votes, according to Mitman.

"I was the only one who voted for Crystal Woods, to stay involved in the process," he said.

"My feeling was if it had a good chance of happening, we were making a mistake by backing out of the process.

"I thought we could put contingencies on it.

"I felt for the people who live nearby and have to deal with it.

Cliff Mitman

"Nobody likes to have big changes.

"The four other selectmen and everyone else in the room disageed with him except the developer."

Mitman thinks the five-member board is better than the three member.

"It does make the meetings longer, but on the other hand it is better for people like me who know they are going to have to miss a meeting once in a while. With three members, the quorum is two. Two people is too small a group."

He said it is also easier for members of the larger board to be liasons to other boards.

"The board could do a lot better job organizing meetings and getting things done," added Mitman.

He suggested that executive secretary Greg Doyon be used more to deal with smaller issues, so that the board can spend its time on larger issues.

Mitman said he is glad to have seen the town hall addition finally built even though he is "more satisfied with the outside than the inside."

"At least three different studies were done of town hall," he said. "It was thought that town hall could be at the Osgood School at one time."

Mitman said he would have liked to have seen the town do more with the renovation of the police/fire stations. "We certainly have to do something," he said.

Mitman also feels it is important for the future of the town that a sewer system be installed.

As far as proposed plans for rehabilitation of the Old Colony Railroad, Mitman said, "I have yet to be convinced that it would be practical.

"I've always had trouble believing the numbers from the state concerning the time it would take from Cohasset to Boston. I'm not convinced it would be economically feasible and practical."

Mitman said he would like to see a consultant hired by the town to come up with a comprehensive zoning plan to deal with such things as what Route 3A should look like in 10 years.

He said he would also like to see the twon's Benjamin Report updated for the future.

"Longer term plans make some sense," he said.

Mitman said he wishes he had had more time to spend at town hall "talking to the town employees and town officials."

"But I can't be there 9 to 5," he said. "So I missed some input."

His advice to his successor would be to maintain decorum at meetings.

"There is no reason to treat people poorly, even if you disagree," he said.

He said he would also like to see selectmen more actively involved as liasons with other boards. "If other boards have a problem, the first person they should go to is the liason," he said.

Mitman said by and large, he has enjoyed being on the board of selectmen. "I feel reasonably pleased with the contribution I have made," he said.

Mitman said he intends to continue to make a contribution to town government by possibly running in the future for a board which requires less time.

"I think everyone should be involved," he said. "This is just a time in my life when I have to be less involved."

Recreation thanks Ellinger for support

Many thanks to the individual team coaches and the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club for making the 1988-1989 Youth Basketball program a success.

Special thanks to George W. Ellinger, who has donated hours coordinating and restructuring the youth basketball program. George not only served as the president of the Basketball Boosters Club, but has been essential to the restructure of the basketball program serving children grades 2 through 9 with clinics and league play.

A large number of volunteers are necessary for this program and coordination remains vital to the organizational structure of the program, it's participants and coaches. Thanks to George for his selfless dedication to the program, his expertise, time, his work with the basketball program, and in general, helping to make Cohasset a better place to live.

Sen. Golden brings message of financial gloom

"This is the fifth time I've been before you to report on matters pending before the legislature," State Sen. William Golden told Selectmen Monday night, Feb. 13.

"The four other times, I've been relatively optimistic about increasing local aid," said Golden.

But this year, I come with far less optimism."

In his state of the district address. Golden discussed the local impact of the state budget crisis.

Gov. Michael Dukakis is proposing a $13.45 billion budget for 1990. There is a $636 million budget deficit.

Golden said an increase in state aid for Cohasset may not materialize, and the town should anticipate level funding.

He discussed the local aid figures over the years, and noted that when Prop. 2 1/2 went into effect, the state increased local aid.

"We have had problems over the last eight years resulting in an increase in state spending," he said.

He also said the federal deficit has increased over 200 percent.

According to Golden, the federal government has cut way back on its funding of sewage treatment facilities.

"If the state doesn't jump in in a major way, communities will have no way of funding sewage treatment facilities.

"The state has compensated for cutbacks from the federal government," said Golden, "but we're facing enormous fiscal challenges."

Golden said he hopes local aid will not be lower than last year, "but I can't guarantee it."

He added, "There is a strong feeling among the average citizen that state government doesn't spend money well."

Golden said he favored passing the state budget every two years, and reforming Civil Service which has operated since the 1880's.

He said he sees no major revenue increases, and to expect slowness of payments for everything from Executive Office of Communities and Development to Department of Environmental Quality Engineering commitments.

"You say you (state government) have a credibility program," said selectman Cliff Mitman. "Frankly, you've earned it."

Mitman referred to some legislators sitting home over the summer while the governor ran for president.

"We have to show people we can spend public money well," said Golden

"THIS RATE MAKES IT SMART TO HAVE YOUR IRA HERE. I'LL MAKE IT EASY."

"A lot of people settle for a lower IRA rate simply because they don't know how easy it is to open or transfer their account here. And I think that's a shame.

"Because at Rockland Trust, one visit is all it takes. We take care of all the paperwork and notifications for you. And we give you a full 9.00% annual rate on a 4-year IRA CD—for an effective yield of 9.55%.

"Even if that's just ½% more than you're earning now, it could add up to thousands of dollars extra when you retire. I think you'll agree, that's well worth a 5-minute stop."

He charted a course

Agree with him or not, Cohasset Sewer Commissioner Charles DeSantis has made a difference in this community.

For seven long years, Charlie made it a personal battle as he waged war against the state. For those years, he lead the fight for Cohasset's independence - believing as strongly now as in the beginning that home rule should prevail in every community. And if Cohasset residents voted repeatedly against a central sewer plan for this town, then the state had no business pressuring us into accepting such a project, he believed.

Cohasset rejected a hugely expensive central sewer plan many years ago, and later opted for a smaller, alternative plan. Although the state bureaucracy did not look kindly on our change of attitude, the government reluctantly recognized it as an approvable plan. It took thousands of tax dollars and sophisticated legal counsel to convince them.

Some people think it was a wasted battle. Although we won our argument to have an alternative program in this town, the state, like an angry child, pulled away all its funding. We are left with an alternative to the alternative plan, crossing our fingers that it will work and that we can afford it.

There are some in town who believe DeSantis lead us blindly down the path - that he knew there was little chance of success but we followed without question. No doubt it was an uphill fight from the start, but Cohasset won many of the battles before this war was over. DeSantis is proud of this town and its refusal to be bullied by big business and state bureaucracy.

And if some people disagreed with the message, there was never a need to hurt the messenger. DeSantis is a knowledgeable man - one who has spent hours in defense of what he believed in. That is an admirable quality, particularly when the cause is noble.

Local rule should prevail in a democracy.

DeSantis was right in his attempt to foil the state's plans for our community - we must all work to preserve the right to maintain local authority. The majority of people in this town voted to go with an approvable alternative sewer plan. And when that plan was reluctantly approved by the state, the bureaucracy should have helped, not hindered its implementation.

We were at times overwhelmed by the vociferous opposition to DeSantis' statements. It was frequently more than restrained opposition - there was hatred and anger expressed in those voices.

But through the entire ordeal, he held his head high and spoke with a self-depreciating sense of humor. Although serious-minded about this issue, DeSantis never takes himself too seriously.

"I'm sure this community will survive quite nicely without me," he said this week.

As he and his family plan to move away from Cohasset, there are those who disagree.

DeSantis has helped to chart the future survival of this town. His energy and intelligence will be missed.

CHS moves to semi-final competition

For the 12th consecutive year, Cohasset High School has moved into the semi-final competition of the Boston Globe Drama Festival.

In addition, six members of the Cohasset cast were selected to the festival's All Star cast. They are: Jay Staunton, Jack Beddows, Pam Haase, Brian Ormiston, Jason Cameron and Lynda Hague.

Cohasset High School performed "This Is A Test," by Stephen Gregg during last week's initial round of competition at Scituate High School. Cohasset, Scituate and Hingham high schools were selected to the semi-final competition.

"It was a very good festival, very competitive," according to Cohasset director Ron Emmons. "The South Shore is very strong theatrically right now."

During last year's festival competition, Cohasset High made it all the way to the state finals in Boston and ultimately finished in third place.

Cohasset will now proceed to the semi-final competition which will be held March 4 at Brockton High School. "We'll have to make some adjustments - the stage there is so huge," the director commented.

Emmons noted the judge's comments after the production will prove helpful in future competition. "It was very positive, very helpful feedback," he stated.

Lights around common a concern

This letter was written to the Board of Selectmen.

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to a letter printed in the Cohasset Mariner on February 2, 1989. The letter was written to you by Janet Mahoney, Secretary for the Board of Directors of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. It regards the installation of underground wiring in order to light the Common for the holiday season.

This practice causes much concern and displeasure for some Cohasset residents. The Common is one of the most beautiful areas in town and is viewed by all motorists who use North Main Street.

The practice of placing white lights on three or four deciduous trees aroud the duck pond does little to enhance the beauty and purity of the handsome homes in this historic district. Rather, these lights serve to distract and detract in a negative manner from this special area of town during the Christmas season.

I wonder if the home owners around the Common have been polled regarding the lights. I hope that their opinions would be sought and considered in this matter. They are the ones most directly affected.

Letters

It must be stated that the commercial area in the Village is beautifully and tastefully decorated by the local merchants each Christmas season. This is appreciated and they deserve praise for the care with which this has been done.

In my opinion, the Chamber of Commerce would better serve the town by seeking alternative sites for their lights. I would respectfully suggest that several sites might be considered: the area of Cohasset Plaza on Route 3A, Constitution Park at Depot Court, or the square at the corner of North Main Street and Jerusalem Road.

I should like to highlight the belief that the merchants would do better to focus their attention on the commercial areas in town and to leave the residential areas intact, to be decorated by the home owners themselves.

Elizabeth W. Warren
11 Sankey Road

Opposed to common lights

To the Editor:

I am opposed to the Chamber of Commerce putting lights on the trees on the Common. I do not know anyone who favors it except the Chamber.

At Christmas time the candles lighted in the church windows and in houses around the common are particularly lovely and enhance the feeling and meaning of Christmas.

To introduce commercial lighting of trees such as exist in Faneuil Market Place seems out of place in a residential setting.

Let the Chamber light the trees in the commercial part of the village, downtown, if they want.

Please don't ask taxpayers to pay for them or to bury wires.

Kick-off event for Tebbetts

There will be a kick-off event for selectman candidate Edwin "Ned" Tebbetts February 26 from 3 to 5 p.m. at the home of Lois and David Weltman, Gammons Road.

The public is invited to this meeting where Tebbetts will discuss his ideas about solving the town's financial problems. "My discussion will reflect my concern that a number of key officials in this town have lost their grasp of what things cost - programs like pension plans," Tebbetts said, noting his previous employment as a principal actuary in charge of pension plans for private corporations.

Several residents have been named to the Tebbetts campaign, including co-chairman, Fred Koed, Jacqueline Dormitzer, Jean Cotton and Patricia Laugelle. Treasurer will be Joseph McElroy and campaign coordinator is Marek Lars. Lois and David Weltman are serving as campaign advisors.

Student of the Month

Sarah Bishop, a senior at Cohasset High School, was selected as "Student of the Month" for January for her dedication to education and athletics.

"In her academics, she has taken on a very heavy academic load and has excelled in her subjects," said math teacher Dennis Walsh who nominated her.

"In addition to the above, she has worked as a teacher aide to me and has been extremely helpful to me.

"It is through this that I have observed her applying herself," said Walsh.

"For example, in her A.P. Latin course, she probably put four times more effort into her term project than the other Latin scholars."

Walsh noted that she has also excelled in athletics.

"She plays three varsity sports — field hockey, basketball and softball.

"In the Powder Puff football game this past fall, she quarterbacked the senior girls to a victory over the juniors."

Students may be nominated for academic excellence, extra-curricular activities, community service, school service, unusual accomplishments or a combination of these things.

The selected students' picture and reason for selection are displayed in the new display case across from the attendance office for the rest of the year.

Any of the school's 540 students in grades 7-12 can be nominated.

A student of the year will be selected from among the students of the month.

CHS artists of the month

The Cohasset High School artists of the month for February are the three "Art-All-State" nominees. They are: Matt Silva, Kasey Smith and Dudley Bryan.

These 3 artists have had to prepare a portfolio, application, statement of purpose and collect recommendations from teaches. They will be interviewed in Boston in March. We wish them luck. Samples from their portfolios are on display near the art room.

On behalf of the third graders, Mrs. Alcott, Mrs. Atkinson, Mrs. Montuori and Mrs. Schadhauser thank Dr. Tufts for sharing his time, energy and expertise.

Winning sixth grade essay

(This award-winning essay was omitted from publication during the first week of the sixth grade writing contest. Ed.)

SPITE AND MALICE

My first cousin once removed has short brown hair and blue eyes. She is of average height and kind of chubby with great legs and a super personality.

She is helpful and kind, has a great sense of humor, and if you need anything she'll do her best to give it to you. My dad's cousin loves to play cards and she knows almost a hundred different card games.

Whenever she comes up to our summer house, we play cards. Sometimes her two kids, my mom, dad, and my sister play too. We play Spite and Malice, War, Crazy Eights, Jack-of-Spades, Go Fish, Peek, Uno, Old Maid, and lots of other games. I think I'm pretty good at most of the games too because sometimes I win and I usually don't get clobbered too badly. It's not every first cousin once removed that will drive from California to Maine for "Spite and Malice."

Playground receives special letter

February 1, 1989

Mrs. Barbara Bush
The White House
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Mrs. Bush:

From February 1 - 17, 1989, the students of the Joseph Osgood School, a kindergarten through third grade school in the town of Cohasset, Massachusetts, are taking part in a readathon called "Put Your Heart Into Reading" for the purpose of raising funds to build a custom playground for their school in June, 1989. They are collecting pledges from friends, neighbors and relatives and hope to raise $3,500.00 to put towards our goal of $35,000.

At 9:50 a.m. each day during the course of the Readathon, the entire school takes part in D.E.A.R. - Drop Everything and Read - to stress how important reading is and to promote participation in the Readathon.

The Project Playground philosophy promotes the concept of everyone working together towards our goal. We hope we are setting an example for our children about how cooperation is the key to success. The actual construction of the 8,000 square foot playground will be completed in two days in the style of an old fashioned New England barn raising.

The excitement about Project Playground is evident in the community and the committee would very much appreciate your words of commendation to the students for their effort. Of course, we would always welcome a visit on your way to Kennebunkport and know you would surely enjoy a trip down our spiral slide.

Wishing you years of enjoyment in The White House.

Sincerely yours,
Ann Whiteley
Ann Whiteley

THE WHITE HOUSE

February 6, 1989

Dear Students of the Joseph Osgood School,

I am so happy to hear about your wonderful readathon, "Put Your Heart Into Reading." Next to being with my family, reading is my favorite activity in the world, and I think it is really great that every day you have the chance to Drop Everything and Read -- and help your school get a new playground, too! Three cheers for all of you!

I hope you will read all your lives -- as much as you can and as often as you can. Books will teach you almost anything you will ever want or need to know, and besides, reading is just plain fun. I also hope you will always remember that cooperating with others is the very best way to get things done. That is what Project Playground is all about -- working together to make things better for everyone involved.

Please say thank you for me to your teachers, your parents, and all the family and friends who are helping you with your readathon and with Project Playground. They must love and care about you very much. President Bush and I wish you very good luck, and happy reading!

Warmly,

Barbara Bush

Teachers attend health clinic

A revolutionary movement is sweeping through Cohasset High School, but this revolution has only positive results.

The movement was initiated by the staff and is a health and wellness program designed to increase awareness of diet, exercise, and stress management routines.

Thursday, December 15, Dr. Dorette Hope of Northeastern University's Department of Health, Sport, and Leisure presented an in-service program on the aspects of wellness and suggested where the staff might fit on the wellness continuum. She presented strategies for devloping an in-house program and also conducted individual lifestyle assessments through a computer program. Within 24 hours, each participant received an evaluation and suggestions for ways to continue or improve in the areas of diet, exercise, stress management, and interpersonal relationships.

In the weeks following this presentation, other activities developed. A before-school walking group began, as well as a mini-walking group during lunch. The faculty voted to subscribe to a health newsletter that will circulate within the building, and even the school's student newspaper, MINIMAG, dedicated its latest issue to health and fitness.

Thursday, Feb. 9, the staff will participate in a health fair where they may have heart rate and blood pressure testing, cholesterol and diet evaluation, and taste test some nutritious snacks made from the Cohasset High School Wellness Cookbook! There will also be opportunities for physical activities such as volleyball and aerobics, as well as arts and music for relaxation.

Keeping the staff healthy is one benefit that pays the school system back with increased involvement within the group and healthier and fitter employees.

Hartley strives to stay on top of league

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Add Michelle Hartley to the list of great Cohasset High winter performers.

Last year, Bryan Edwards gained notoriety by shattering the all-time schoolboy basketball career scoring record. In addition, he guided Cohasset to the Division Three state title game.

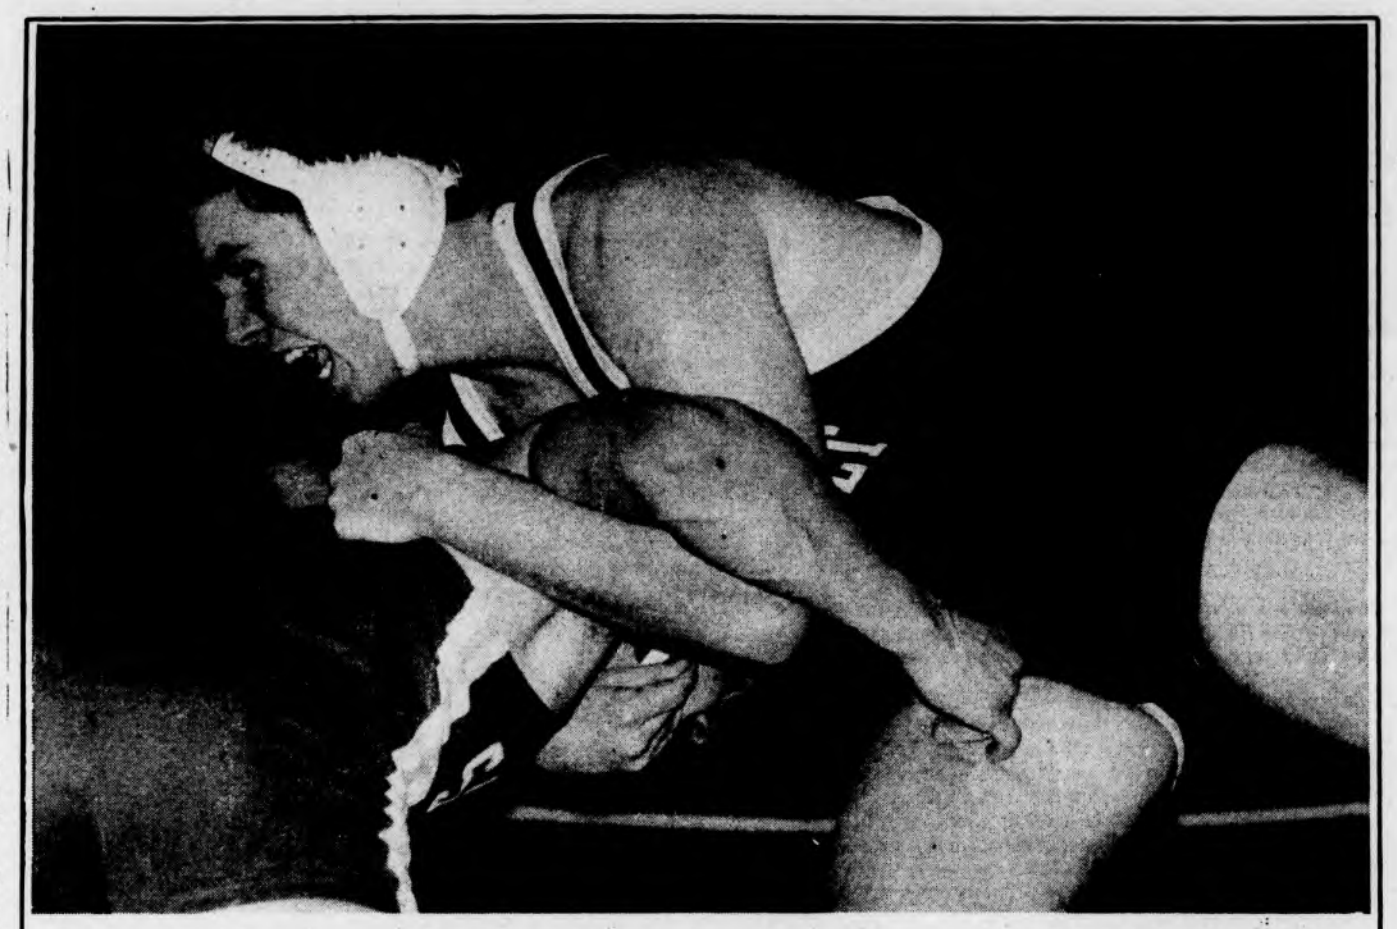
This season, the junior gymnast is undefeated in the league with top scores in the uneven parallel bars (8.55), balance beam (8.7), vault (8.6) and the floor exercise (8.7). She averages 33 points a meet and is heading for the state tourney. Furthermore, she has won every all-around competition and is in a leadership role as tri-captain — with Liz Buckley and Carrie Ripley — of a young (eight team members are seventh to ninth-graders) Cohasset team.

"She's always working and striving to get better," said Cohasset coach Ruthann Sargent, who first met Hartley when she was nine years old at the Kathy Corrigan School of Gymnastics. "She's one of the top gymnasts around. You can tell; she has that polished look. She's had some bad luck but she's changed for the better."

Indeed she has. To post Hartley's numerous ailments would definitely make the New England Journal of Medicine staff very proud.

The former Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic in her freshman year as well as the South Shore All Star squad had to scratch from the state championship because of ankle problems.

For the next 18 months, she was on and off crutches with tendinitis in both ankles, hospitalized with a life-threatening iron deficiency and working out more in physical therapist's offices than in the gym.



By the end of the summer of 1987, she was back in shape and looking to a new season, but a burst appendix opened her sophomore year. Ligament and muscle problems in her ankles ended her season before it began.

After treatment and recovery, she started training at the Ellis School of Gymnastics in Braintree, bringing the fun back into the sport.

Now in her strongest season of competition, she set a personal best with an 8.8 in floor exercise and 33.8 points against Scituate Jan. 30 and surpassed that with a league-best 34.0 versus Randolph one week later.

Academically, she is taking advanced placement biology and computer classes. Besides gymnastics, she is a member of the 1989 spring track team. Last season she qualified for the state championship in the 100, 220 and triple jump. She's also a member of the varsity soccer team. She hopes to get a gymnastics scholarship to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Opposing coaches in the South Shore League will have the pleasure of seeing her again next year.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

Senior center Sara Bishop scored 13 points and had seven steals to lead host Cohasset (11-7, 8-4 league) to a 34-27 SSL victory over Norwell Feb. 7.

Cohasset avenged an earlier loss to Norwell, defeating the Skippers on their own court by one point, 35-34, in overtime.

More importantly though. Cohasset moved within one victory of qualifying for the Eastern Mass. tournament.

With the SSL regular-season schedule now over, Cohasset must secure a tournament berth at the Hall-of-Fame classic (Massasoit Community College), held Feb. 21 (first round) and 22 (consolation and final).

Cohasset, the defending Division Three state champion, got seven points and 15 rebounds Kristin Ellinger. The Skippers scored the first eight points of the fourth quarter to wipe out a 22-20 deficit.

Donna Carnes led Norwell (14-3) with 11 points.

Bishop, meanwhile, concluded the week with a perfect 10 as she recorded 10 points, 10 rebounds and 10 steals in a 39-25 defeat over Abington Feb. 13.

BOYS BASKETBALL

Despite playing without four starters due to sickness and injuries, Norwell was able to take a 58-53 South Shore League decision at home to move within one victory of tournament qualification.

The Clippers (11-5, 7-3 SSL) had 15 points from senior forward Tom Mueller while John Donahue and Tony McLaughlin each had 12 and Mark Woodworth added 11.

Cohasset (4-13, 1-9) held a 21-12 lead after one period, but Norwell came back to take a 39-36 lead into the fourth quarter.

The Clippers used key rebounds and a bucket from Donahue with 30 seconds remaining. A free throw by Woodworth gave Norwell a four-point cushion during crunch time.

Jeff Bryant was high man for the Skippers with 13 points. Linc Marsac scored 12, Terry O'Leary 11 and Jim Reidy 10, including two three-point field goals.

HOCKEY

Matt Lyons netted four goals and added one assist, leading Hanover (10-4-1) to a 11-3 SSL small schools victory over Cohasset at Pilgrim Arena Feb. 8.

After a 3-2 first period lead, Hanover scored five goals in the second period and pulled away with three goals in the third.

Rob Morris and Keith Wilson added two goals each for the winners. John Abban, Jerry Abban and David Ray scored one goal each for the Indians.

Paul Marks, Brian Pompeo and Ned Chase tallied one goal each for Cohasset (6-9-1).

AS IS YOUR CUSTOM
Kitchen installation in the nineteen-sixties reflected the technology and lifestyle of the times. There was very little variation from the refrigerator/oven/sink layout, designed essentially for mom. Today, the introduction of single-parent families, single homeowners, two-cook kitchens, microwaves, food processors, and table-top appliances of every sort make the customized kitchen a necessity. While the form of the sixties-era kitchen followed the function of a typical nuclear family, today's kitchen must accommodate very personal dictates. The two-wage-earner family requires increased storage capacity for weekly supermarket purchases. The two-cook family needs expanded work area. The single homeowner may want streamlined efficiency. One thing is certain, however. The custom kitchen has replaced the "average" kitchen in today's household.
Every kitchen can be transformed to fit the needs of your particular household. In some cases you may need a carpenter to knock down a wall or two or add a partition to accommodate the new layout of your room. With this completed, kitchen design associates can create beautiful work areas, appliance centers, cooking spots and storage. We work with you to come up with the perfect design for your room. We then use Millbrook cabinets or Poggenpohl, which has been described as the Mercedes of kitchens, to complete the look you desire. Work with us at 962 Washington St., Rt. 53, Hanover. Tel. 617-826-4121.
HINT: It is possible to create a custom kitchen wth stock cabinetry and accessories.

Please bring the rental/lesson money into the recreation office before boarding the bus in the morning. The bus will return in the evening, to town hall at about 7:30 p.m.

Because of time factors required to complete accounting procedures and transactions, payments for the Gunstock trip, Thursday, Feb. 23, must be made before Saturday, Feb. 11.

Summer Soccer Camp

Again this summer, the Cohasset Recreation Department has contracted North American Soccer Camps, Inc. to conduct a one-half day, week-long soccer clinic, which will begin Monday, Aug. 21, to Saturday, Aug. 26, at the Deer Hill Field.

The program will be from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. The Saturday time will be announced during the week. The cost for camp is $80 for the first child in a family, $75 for the second, and $70 for the third or more in each family. Each participant is also provided a camp T-shirt and soccer ball. Parent coaching clinics will be held on two evenings during the week and exact days and times will be announced.

To register for this program, call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791 as soon as possible. A $25 deposit will be necessary at the time of registration and the balance will be due by June 1, 1989. Registration is necessary now in order that we be assigned the proper number of coaches to keep a 1-15 coach/participant ratio.

Sgt. Barrow fights town for candidacy . . .

regulations for the department. The union noted at that time that any attempt to enforce the rules would be an illegal change in the working conditions.

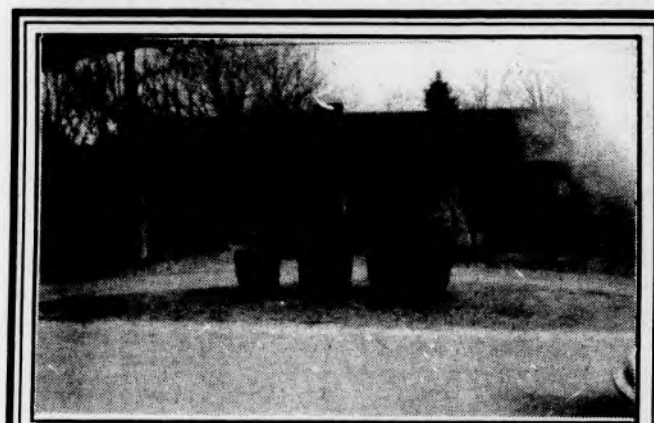
The union withdrew that allegation after the town agreed to delay implementation of the rules while bargaining took place. But, according to Sgt. Barrow's testimony, bargaining and implementation of the regulations never occurred.

The rules, he noted, were never filed at the town clerk's office as required by state law.

"The plaintiffs contend that the rules are not in effect and have petitioned the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission for a specific determination of the matter," according to the court document.

In the meantime, the deadline for the election nomination papers to be filed with the town clerk is February 27 for the April 8 election. According to the court document, "Only injunctive relief prohibiting the enforcement of said rules until the Commission determines the legality of their implementation will enable Plaintiff Barrow to secure a position on the April ballot.'

If elected to the board, Sgt. Barrow is free to resume his duties as a Cohasset police officer. In his court testimony, however, the police sergeant said he would waive the annual $1,000 stipend he would receive if elected to the board.



Because selectmen refused to waive the department's regulations, the police chief is free to discipline Sgt. Barrow if he "flaunts" those rules and files nomination papers without a leave of absence from the department. "Given the denial of the Board of Selectmen for a personal exemption, defendant Chief Kealey would indubitably respond with discipline" against the sergeant, according to the court document.

"Such discipline (which could entail discharge) based on a rule against conflict of interest would effectively destroy any possibility of a fair election. Should Civil Service or a contractual arbitrator rule that such discipline was unwarranted, such a ruling would arrive far too late to affect the election's outcome," according to the injunction request filed by Atty. Manning.

In the document, the union's counsel argues that the department can continue to abide by the rules in effect prior to this "disputed" version.

If the injunction is denied, according to Atty. Manning, it would deny Sgt. Barrow the "real opportunity" to compete for elected office.

"The effect (of a denial of the injunction) will be the permanent chilling of the Constitutional rights to free association, free speech and free access to the ballot for all members of the Cohasset Police Department," the injunction petition states.

It's on again for selectman candidate Barrow

Police Sgt. Richard Barrow returned to town hall late Wednesday as an official candidate for selectman.

The King Street resident obtained nomination papers after selectmen reversed a decision which had barred Barrow from joining the race. Their reversal did not come without some level of town hall drama Tuesday night.

The issue is far from over. A special meeting of the selectmen has been convened by Chairman Burt Pratt for Friday, Feb. 24 at 5 p.m. to "discuss the police department rules and regulations."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle, who has abstained from all previous votes on the matter, has notified the town clerk that he will participate in Friday's vote.

Angry official wants new vote

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"You backed me into a corner," said an angry selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt after two other board members voted Tuesday night to allow Police Sgt. Richard Barrow to run for selectman without taking a leave of absence.

The board voted last month 2 to 2 when asked by Barrow to waive the department regulation which requires a police officer to take an unpaid leave of absence if he or she runs for office. The split decision constituted no action on the request.

The fifth member, selectman Rocco Laugelle, abstained because he has a family member on the department.

Barrow appealed the board's decision in court. Last Thursday, he lost a request for the court to issue an injunction against the town.

At this week's meeting, Sohier Street resident Robert Davenport asked selectmen Pratt, Martha Gjesteby and James Gallagher if there was any chance they would change their stand on the Barrow's issue.

The fourth selectman, Cliff Mitman, was not at the meeting.

"You can't rethink a judge's decision," said Pratt.

"I don't legally know what we could do to overturn a judge's decision. He denied the injunction.

"We denied the waiving of the request.

"I don't think anything is possible if the court has spoken."

It was a sticky predicament

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Throughout this past weekend, Richard Barrow contemplated the cost of running a sticker campaign.

The police sergeant's request before a superior court judge to allow a campaign without taking a leave of absence from his job was denied last week. He was a willing but unofficial candidate.

Barrow, a sergeant in the Cohasset Police Department, intended to run for a three-year seat on the Board of Selectmen. However, he was informed by town counsel that a police officer must take a leave of absence from the department while campaigning for paid, political office.

Sgt. Barrow has refused to take a leave from the department, a move that could cost him about $3,000 in salary.

"I considered taking a leave from my job," the 34-year veteran said. "But why should I? I'm afraid I couldn't get back into the department. The selectmen would have to put me back on the department once the election is over - win, lose or draw. Why should I trust them to give me back my job? They wouldn't waive the rules for me to run, so I sure don't trust them to give me back my job."

Sgt. Barrow was referring to a request he made last month that selectmen waive the police department regulations which prohibit an officer from running for paid political office

Chamber's 1989 award winner figured 'one of the boys' would be selected

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"Surprised? That's the understatement of the year," said Joanne Winters after she was named recipient of the Chamber of Commerce's fourth annual Forrest E. King Award Feb. 15.

"I thought it would be one of the boys," said Winters, who recently left Hugo's after 23 years as weddings and functions coordinator.

She plans to open her own business.

"The boys" are the other two nominees, Robert Davenport, who with his wife, Barbara, owns Sestito Florists in Cohasset and Hingham, and Leo Fiori, proprietor of the Exxon Station on Route 3A.

The award, in recognition of achievement in business and in the community, was presented at a dinner attended by 114 business people and officials at Kimball's By The Sea, Cohasset.

Guest speaker was Sen. William Golden, who gave each of the nominees resolutions from the senate.

"Every time I come to Cohasset, I feel like I've come home," said Golden, who grew up in town.

"We're here to honor three wonderful people in memory of another wonderful person.

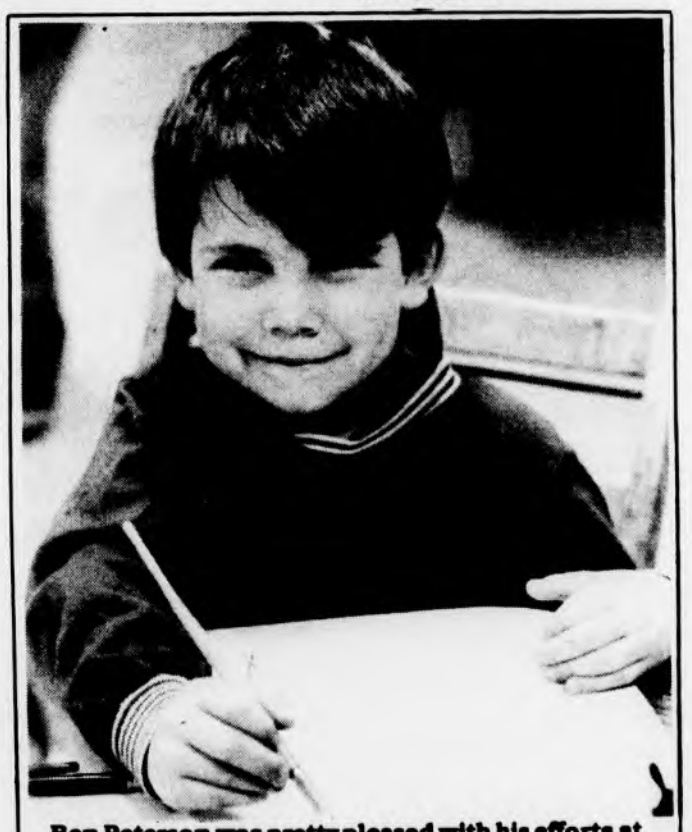
"Forrest King was a wonderful, wonderful man and represented the best of Cohasset."

The late Mr. King was a founder of the chamber of commerce. He owned and operated King Jewelers at Cushing Plaza, a business his father had started.

Golden talked about the importance of basic values, and called the business people "pillars of the community."

He said he felt that each of the nominees merited full consideration and he extended his congratulations to them all.

Golden called Winters "in many ways, the hostess of Cohasset."



"We both learned politics in the restaurant business," he added.

The award was presented by Mrs. Forrest King and her daughter, Valerie King, committee chairman.

Winters received a standing ovation when her name was announced.

"Twenty some odd years ago, I started doing weddings at Hugo's," she said, "and about 2,000 wed-

Sewer hearing March 2

The Sewer Commission will hold a public meeting on the new proposed sewer rates Thursday, March 2 at 7:30 p.m. at the Bates Building, 43 Elm Street.

The commission will answer questions on their town meeting article which, if passed, will authorize the new rate schedule. Presently, sewer users are paying less than 20 percent of the cost of operating and maintaining the sewer system. The balance, more than 80 percent, is paid by the taxpayers. The objection of the new rate schedule is to allocate these costs on a 50/50 basis.

Legislation sponsored

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) has co-sponsored comprehensive environmental legislation with Associated Industries of Massachusetts for the 1989 legislative session.

The bill entitled "Hazardous Material Waste Elimination and Management Act," would establish the most progressive hazardous waste reduction and planning program of any state in the country.

"A.I.M. is pleased with the support the business community and the Legislature has given us in developing and proposing this progressive environmental legislation to deal with the state's hazardous waste management crisis," said A.I.M.'s President, John Gould.

Warning for unpaid taxes

Warning letters have been mailed to those property owners who still owe their Fiscal 1988 real estate taxes.

If the bills are not paid by Friday, March 10, the process of placing a tax lien on the property will begin.

For further information, call the Treasurer-Collector's Office at 383-9900, extension 113.

Selectmen's action

Selectmen took the following action at their meeting Monday night, Feb. 13, at Town Hall:

- Approved a budget of $7,364 for the dog officer, after deleting $350 from office supplies which had already been supplied by the town.
- Appointed Peter O'Connor to the Transfer Station Building Committee. And — accepted the resignation of Max Pounder from that committee.
- Appointed Fire Capt. Robert Silvia as acting chief during Chief Daniel Brock's vacation Feb. 26 to March 4.

Walkway repair

Town Counsel Richard Henderson has written to a local contractor giving him the go-ahead to direct the mason to begin repair work on the brick walkway in front of the new town hall addition.

The walkway was blocked off several months ago because heels of shoes, especially those worn by women, were getting caught in the spaces between the bricks.

Henderson recently met with Wayne Whitaker of A. P. Whitaker & Sons, Inc., as well as selectmen chairman Burt Pratt and executive secretary Greg Doyon to discuss problems with the walkway.

According to Henderson, the repair work will consist of removing all the brick work, and relaying it in a tight bond pattern with a perimeter of bricks laid flat and level with the bond pattern.

"It is my understanding that one-half the cost of repairing the walkway will be borne by A. P. Whitaker & Sons, Inc., and the other 50 percent will be paid by some other individual or entity," wrote Henderson.

"At this time, it is the town's position that the architect is responsible for the 50 percent balance because of the design of the walkway.

"To the extent authorized by the board of selectmen, I will pursue collection of this matter.

"Additionally, I will request that the board of selectmen will insert in the warrant for the next annual town meeting an article which will request an amount of money equal to one-half the cost of the walkway which would be available after July 1, 1989."

Fire captain exam

Tuesday, Feb. 28, is the deadline for applicants to sign up for the promotional exam for fire captain to be held Saturday, May 6.

According to Cohasset Fire Chief, Daniel Brock, there are no openings for fire captain now.

But, he said, members of the fire department can still take the exam to see how they score and to be placed on the list.

Brock said that it has been about six years since the fire captain exam was held.

Selectmen purchases

Cohasset Selectmen took the following action at their meeting Tuesday night, Feb. 21, at town hall:

- Signed a contract with Sciaba Construction for a transfer station at the landfill.
- Voted 2 to 1 not to consent a decision by the advisory board to allocate some $3,337 for a computer for the health board.

Selectman chairman Burt Pratt was opposed. He said that such purchases should wait until after a survey of the town's computer needs is done.

Health board chairman Sharon Becker said that a computer would triple the efficiency of the board in being able to enforce regulations.

She also said that a typewriter must be replaced now with at least a word processor.

- Approved change of manager of Papa Gino's of America to Melissa Smith.
- Accepted a plan for renovation of the police/fire station with minor changes.

The plans include a new door which would give inside access to the two departments.

Selectman James Gallagher said he would discuss with the renovation committee whether a $3,000 firemen's pole is necessary.

"We have a building committee, let's work with them," said Gallagher. "They've done an excellent job."

- Postponed until next week's meeting, consideration of warrant articles until a full board is present.

Pratt was opposed.

- Voted to allow Senior Center Director Kathy Bryanton to attend the National Council on Aging Conference March 29-April 1.

Board members said the town could not afford to pay the $765 cost for the trip.

But selectmen suggested that Bryanton find out how much next year's conference will cost and submit that in the budget for next year.

- Agreed to have selectmen chairman Burt Pratt talk to the cemetery committee and town counsel regarding the selling of unused graves back to the town.

A town regulation prohibits the selling of graves to any buyer but the town, said Peter Laugelle, the town can only pay what the grave was purchaed for, he said.

"If a grave holder only can get what he paid, say he paid $40, years ago, he isn't going to sell," said Pratt.

The town is faced with running out of available graves in a few years, and is proposing to build a new cemetery.

Pratt said he would also like to see a deed so he can read the fine print.

"I think a bylaw clarification is in order," he said.

Cohasset Knoll sold

GHM Inc. , a developer of retirement communities with on-site health centers and an owner/operator of long-term care facilities, has agreed to purchase 20 eastern Massachusetts facilities from Beverly Enterprises, Inc., including Cohasset Knoll.

The $47.25 million transaction, involving nearly 1,800 intermediate and skilled nursing care beds, is subject to approval by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts' Department of Public Health, Division of Health Care Quality.

GHM, a private company incorporated in 1977, is presently developing more than 10 retirement communities valued at over $1 billion.

Upon completion of the purchase, GHM will own or operate 24 long-term care centers in Connecticut and Massachusetts, representing approximately 2,250 beds.

Candidates corner clarification

There was a misstatement in an article written in last week's Cohasset Mariner regarding a kick-off event for selectman candidate Edwin "Ned" Tebbetts.

The event, which will be held February 26 from 3 to 5 p.m. at the home of Lois and David Weltman is by invitation only, and a capacity response has already been reached.

Anyone who would like to be included in future events for candidate Tebbetts can call Pat Laugelle at 383-1737 after 6 p.m.

Plenty of contests in April election

The races are all but set for the April 8 election.

Candidates have until Thursday, Feb. 23 to take out nomination papers for the ten available positions. The papers with 50 signatures of certified Cohasset voters must be returned to the town clerk's office by Monday, Feb. 27.

Thus far, the race for two three-year seats on the board of selectmen will feature incumbent James L. Gallagher, and challengers Diana D. Kornet and Edwin H. Tebbetts. Although Cohasset Police Sergeant Richard Barrow intended to run for selectman, he can not without taking a leave of absence from the department. He has refused to do so, and therefore his name will not appear on the ballot. Sgt. Barrow has not ruled out a sticker campaign for a seat on that board.

Thus far, there are three candidates for two vacancies on the school board. A vacancy was created when incumbent Diana Kornet announced her retirement from the board, and her candidacy for the board of selectmen. Incumbent C. Christopher Ford will be running for a three-year seat on the school committee. Ralph D. Kidder is also a candidate along with H. Edward Brennock Jr.

Incumbent assessor Thomas S. Duggan is the only candidate at this time for a three-year seat on that board.

And board of health chairman Sharon L. Becker will be seeking re-election to that board. Thus far, there are no challengers.

There are three seats available for the trustees of the Paul Pratt Library. Incumbents Barbara M. Powers and Lucia Woods will be running for re-election. Incumbent Michelle Buckley is not seeking re-election to the board. There are no other candidates at this time for the three seats.

Incumbent water commissioner Ronald Goodwin will run again for a three-year term on that board. He has not yet received a challenge to his campaign.

There is a three-year seat on the sewer commission up for grabs. Incumbent commissioner F. Charles DeSantis is not running for a third term. Henry A. Rattenbury will seek that seat, along with Manuel E. Salvador, the former supervisor of the Cohasset sewer treatment plant who was suspended from his employment by the current board members.

Patrick Plante, a member of the planning board, will not be seeking re-election. William J. Good of Fairoaks Lane is the only candidate thus far for that five-year planning board seat.

Shelanne S. Durkin of Old Pasture Road will be a candidate for a five-year term on the recreation commission. She is the only candidate thus far for the vacancy created by the retirement of incumbent Richard Barrow.

The race for a seat on the Cohasset Housing Authority will feature a contest between incumbent Joanne Young Nawn and challenger Anthony J. Finegan.

Hearing to be held on non-license

If a completed application is received in time, selectmen said they will discuss Feb. 27 setting a hearing date on an application from Robert Davenport of Sohier St. for an all alcoholic retail package store license.

The board noted, however, that it does not currently have such a license to give.

Executive secretary Greg Doyon explained that Davenport is requesting a new license, not transfer of an existing license.

The town has four such licenses.

The fourth license is held by Central Market which has been closed since last June.

Selectmen are scheduled to discuss at next week's meeting what action to take on that license. It was to have been transferred to a new owner but is being held up by the Department of Revenue because of a tax matter.

"This would be license number five," said selectmen chairman Burt Pratt.

"We don't have one to give, and we would be exceeding our authority," he said.

Doyon said he explained that to Davenport.

He said he discussed the matter with town counsel who told him to accept the application and follow the statutes and guidelines and have the board make a decision.

"There is no such thing as accepting an application for a license which may come up in the future," said Pratt.

Doyon explained that a few additions to the license application are needed.

"Since we don't have a correct application, if it comes in this week, put it on the agenda and we will decide how to proceed," said Pratt.

Special permit hearing

The Zoning Board of Appeals will consider two requests for special permits at its meeting Thursday, March 2, at 8 p.m. at town hall.

Anthony D'Onofrio, representing trustees of the Catlin Real Estate Trust, is seeking to construct an addition to the structure at 17 Lothrop Lane.

Janet L. Walden is seeking to rebuild and remodel the structure at 186 South Main St.

New committee to review E.O.C.D. grant services

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Selectmen voted Tuesday night, February 21, to accept a new scope of services for the town's $9,000 Municipal Advance Program Grant from the Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD).

According to a letter from Ana Perez, regional director of the Massachusetts Housing Partnership, the scope differs from the previous one in two ways.

"First, the septic system analysis has been reduced to reflect fewer engineering tasks, as the engineering report from Perkins Engineering accomplishes some of the tasks listed in the previous scope," she said.

"This report was recently purchased by the trustees of the Curtis Estate at the cost of $14,440. I am sending the town a copy under separate cover.

"Secondly, the Curtis Estate Trustees have been added to the list of organizations to form an advisory committee to the grant.

"The final decision as to the use of the property is dependent on the court's re-interpretation of the language of the trust.

"The contribution from representatives from this group should be helpful to the advisory group's discussion."

The grant will pay for consultants to prepare a conceptual plan describing affordable housing options for the site, incorporating existing reports, and analyzing the site's septic capacity to support additional bathrooms.

The advisory committee will also include members of the selectmen, Curtis Estate Action Committee, Cohasset Housing Authority, Cohasset Housing Partnership, and Cohasset Fair Housing Committee.

Executive secretary Greg Doyon said that Perez feels that by incorporating the trustees in the scope of services, it will build the town's case.

The estate trustees have petitioned the court to break the terms of the Curtis will, so they can sell the 53-acre property to a private developer.

The town has interceded in the case, asking the attorney general to recommend that the housing authority be awarded the property and $2 million in assets to provide housing for the homeless, the mentally retarded, the abused and low income families.

"She feels our position will be stronger talking to the trustees," said selectman chairman Burt Pratt.

"I said we had some difficulty being in an adversarial position for the last three years.

"She understood we have some difficulties."

Selectman James Gallagher said there should be a member of the trustees on the committee if that is what Perez wants.

"She said she was quite sure they (the trustees) feel the pressure," continued Pratt.

"They would be willing to talk for that reason," said Pratt.

He also said Perez suggested that a 99 year or 40 year lease be discussed.

Sewer Rate Hike Public Hearing

Thursday, March 2nd
7:30 PM
Bates Building
43 Elm St.

The commission will answer questions on their town meeting article which, if passed, will authorize the new rate schedule. Presently, sewer users are paying less than 20 percent of the cost of operating and maintaining the sewer system. The balance, more than 80 percent, is paid by the taxpayers. The objection of the new rate schedule is to allocate these costs on a 50/50 basis.

Town not ready to do anything with Bates Building

Selectmen did not officially offer the Bates Building to the Council On Aging for use as a senior center, selectman chairman Burt Pratt said Tuesday night, Feb. 21.

"We're not ready to do anything with it," said Pratt of the building which still houses some town offices until they can move to town hall.

He said that he and senior center director Kathy Bryanton had a brief discussion about it.

"I said off-the-cuff, down the road it could be available for her use," he said.

Based on that conversation, Council On Aging vice chairman T. Gerard Keating visited the building and reported back to selectmen that the facility was "totally unacceptable" for senior activities.

His letter to selectmen was printed in the Cohasset Mariner.

"It wasn't an official offer," said Pratt. "I said maybe some time.

"The public has gotten a hold of it, and it has opened a whole can of worms.

"The housing authority has first crack at it."

The housing authority recently had its site consultant look at the building, and concluded that it could probably accommodate two families under Chapter 705 housing.

School budget hearing

A public hearing on the proposed FY '90 Cohasset School Budget will be held Monday, Feb. 27 at 8 p.m. in the Home Economics Room at the Junior/Senior High School.

A copy of the proposed budget is available in the Superintendent's office.

All interested citizens are invited to attend.

Further technical analysis of the building's structure, systems and conversion potential was recommended.

The board also agreed to allow the Rotary Club to remain at the building as tenants at will.

E.O.C.D. services

"Probably 40 years hence, the trustees wouldn't ask for the property back," said Pratt.

"She's just throwing out ideas."

Selectmen said they would rather meet with a trustee than a representative of the trustees and changed the wording in the scope of services to reflect that.

"We may as well try," said Gallagher.

"The cash is waiting for us," said Pratt. "We have to vote on the scope of services."

The vote was unanimous.

"THIS RATE MAKES IT SMART TO HAVE YOUR IRA HERE. I'LL MAKE IT EASY."

"A lot of people settle for a lower IRA rate simply because they don't know how easy it is to open or transfer their account here. And I think that's a shame.

"Because at Rockland Trust, one visit is all it takes. We take care of all the paperwork and notifications for you. And we give you a full 9.00% annual rate on a 4-year IRA CD—for an effective yield of 9.55%.

"Even if that's just ½% more than you're earning now, it could add up to thousands of dollars extra when you retire. I think you'll agree, that's well worth a 5-minute stop."

Barrow contemplated a sticker campaign

unless they take a leave of absence. Selectmen denied the request.

As a result of that decision, the Cohasset police union voted to seek an injunction against the town, preventing enforcement of those regulations, According to Sgt. Barrow and Officer Paul Laugelle, who was president of the union in 1983 when selectmen voted to adopt the regulations, those rules are not in effect because the union never voted to support them.

Sgt. Barrow appeared in Dedham Superior Court last week, asking the court to waive those regulations which would then allow him to run for the selectmen's seat. A challenge of the validity of the Cohasset police regulations is now before the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission.

The court denied Sgt. Barrows request last week, and as a result, his name will not be included among those candidates running for two three-year terms on the board.

Town counsel was not available for comment this week. Atty. Michael Manning, representing Sgt Barrow and the International Brotherhood of Police Officers, was also not available this week for comment.

Other candidates for the two selectmen's seats include incumbent James L. Gallagher, and challengers Diana Kornet and Edwin Tebbetts.

This past weekend, Barrow said he would discuss all options with several residents who have expressed interest in developing a campaign for the King Street resident.

"Many people have told me they support me and that they would like to help out financially. That's what I'm going to need if I decide to go along with a sticker campaign,"Barrow explained.

The police sergeant said he is not sure he can even participate in a sticker campaign. That is one of many questions he must have answered by his attorney.

"The regulations say that an officer of the police department must take a leave of absence on the day he takes out nomination papers until the day of the election. Since I don't have any nomination papers, I imagine I have a right to campaign - that it doesn't preclude a campaign run on stickers," he stated.

"I can't see how the rule affects me, but I want to check with my attorney before I decide anything," he added.

A sticker campaign, according to Sgt. Barrow, is an expensive proposition. Special mailings are sent to every voter in town by the candidates' campaign workers, with a sticker included with the information about the candidate. That sticker will be used by voters on election day when they attach the candidate's name to the appropriate space on the ballot. Poll workers for that candidate are also allowed to distribute stickers to voters outside the voting booths at town hall.

"It's virtually the same thing as writing in someone's name on the ballot," Sgt. Barrow noted.

"I really have thought about taking a leave from my job, but I just can't trust the selectmen to put me back when it's time for me to return," Sgt. Barrow said, explaining that selectmen are the appointing authority for the local police department. "They could prolong it for me and make me wait. When three selectmen won't allow you to run, then I can't trust them to put me back in my job. That's a chance I'm not willing to take."

Selectman Pratt angered by Tuesday vote. . .

"We could still bring it up again because there is no prejudice with a tie vote," said Gjesteby.

Executive secretary Greg Doyon suggested that the board go into executive session to discuss the matter because it is still in litigation, but the board made no such move.

"I would hate to deny anyone the right to run for the office," continued Gjesteby.

She made the motion to allow Barrows to run for selectman.

"The motion is not in order," said Pratt. "Since it is still in litigation, I urge you to remove the motion."

"This has nothing to do with the (court) case," continued Gjesteby.

Pratt said he wouldn't make any move without having an attorney present.

"The matter is in litigation," said Doyon. "I suggest you move very, very cautiously."

Gallagher agreed that he would like to have legal counsel, but he seconded Gjesteby's motion.

Pratt asked Doyon what prerogative he had not to accept the motion.

"This is very, very dangerous, Jim and Martha," Pratt said. "You are diddling with a legal matter. I don't think we're in any position to do anything tonight."

"Appealing the rules and regulations is different than allowing someone to run for office," said Gjesteby.

She noted the meeting was the last time the matter could be brought up because the deadline for taking out nomination papers is Thursday, Feb. 23.

"I refuse to put your motion to a vote," continued Pratt. "You're taking unfair advantage of other people who aren't here."

Gallagher said, "It's your responsibility as chairman to put it to a vote."

He said he believes that police and fire officers should be able to run for office.

"This is a definite matter of democracy in action," said Gjesteby.

"Anyone in town can run for office," she said.

Not if they work for certain organizations, said Pratt.

"It's up to the voters to decide," answered Gjesteby.

"How can you people sit here and defy a court judge?" asked Pratt.

"Town counsel spent $1,000 researching this," said Gjesteby. "It's costing the town too much money not to allow someone to run."

She added that her motion was a new one, not a reconsideration of a previous one.

"If you people pass this, I will call a meeting tomorrow of all five members, if I have to subpoena them," Pratt claimed.

"We're not going to vote this thing tonight. I refuse to put it to a vote.

"I would think they (the other two selectmen) would come rushing right in here when they see what you people are trying to do. I ask you again not to do this. You are getting into deep, deep trouble."

After several minutes of silence, the motion was put to a vote and passed 2 to 1.

"I'm taking this action under protest," said Pratt.

He said he would call town counsel (who is on vacation) to apprise the board of the ramifications of the action, and to see if he would be allowed to call a special meeting before noon Wednesday.

"I think this action is absolutely unprecedented," said Pratt.

As the Mariner went to press Wednesday afternoon, no meeting had taken place.

□ We want to wish Herbert F. Crehan a lot of luck as he begins his new role as vice president and senior consultant with Alexander and Alexander Consulting Group in Boston.

□ Speaking of vice presidents, Marge Santacroce is a brand new one...she was recently elected to the position at Cohasset Savings Bank, and everyone is thrilled for her. Marge used to be in charge of consumer loans and human resources. Congratulations, Marge.

More new from Cohasset Savings Bank, there will be a face missing as of the 28th of this month! Ann Curley will be retiring after 16 years. Ann is an account representative, and it is going to be hard to picture the bank without her smiling face ready to greet you. We'll bet that a large part of her retirement time will be spent in the company of her grandchildren that she loves so much, and that she cannot wait for that reason! Best of luck to you in your retirement, Ann.

□ Harold Litchfield and his able crew received a round of applause this week, with the Cohasset Garden Club leading the cheers! As most know, the Garden Club plants and maintains the watering trough at the end of Beach Street. The next time you see it, take a good look at the Perry Higginson and Johnson sign that is in the middle of it. It was erected by Harold and his men, who, from all reports, were so cooperative and agreeable while performing this task. It isn't only the Garden Club that should be grateful, the whole town should, and we are!

□ Although she is no longer a Cohasset resident, we will always think of her as being one, and we are proud of her. Priscilla Streeter that is! She was named Hingham Visiting Nurse Humanitarian of the Year for 1988 at a reception held recently at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham. Mrs. Streeter has been Administrator of the Hingham Nurse since 1973, when there were 9 under her supervision. The staff has now grown to more than 60 registered nurses, physical therapists, homemakers, home health aides, medical social workers, nutrionists, maternal and child care workers, and support staff. As everyone knows, Priscilla is the wife of Dick Streeter, Assistant Superintendent of the Cohasset Schools.

□ Congratulations to Alan and Linda Genovese on the birth of their daughter, born on Jan. 30th at the South Shore Hospital.

□ An awful lot of people were shocked when they read last weeks Mariner article on Charlie DeSantis leaving both the sewer commission and Cohasset! Charlie certainly worked hard for our town, trying to achieve what was best for all, and he is to be commended. Regardless of what your personal feelings toward his beliefs are, the next time you see him thank him for working so hard on your behalf. The time and energy that he devoted should be recognized, and appreciated! Best of luck to you and your family Charlie, no matter where you go or what you do. You will be missed!

□ It is hard to believe, but the plans have been set for the 13th Annual Cohasset Roadrace by the Sea. The date is April 2nd, the starting time is 1 p.m. and the place is the Cohasset Common. Peter Logan and Roy Fitzsimmons will be directing the race, and all proceeds will again benefit many in-town charities and organizations. You may pre-register, applications are available at Good Sport, Cohasset Liquors or by mailing a self addressed envelope to Box 36, Cohasset, MA. The fee is $8.00, and the number of runners is limited to 800, so get that application now, and good luck! Wouldn't it be nice to see a Cohassetite win this year??

□ A round of applause goes to Pam Hasse, Brian Ormiston, Jay Staunton, Jason Cameron, Jack Beddows and Lynda Hague six CHS students that were selected to The Boston Globe Drama Festival's All Star Cast. We also congratulate the cast of "This is a Test," who won the honor to move on to compete in the semi-finals of the Festival. The semi-final will be held on March 4th, and we wish them the best of luck. We're rooting for you, guys!!

□ Speaking of students, Sarah Bishop was chosen as this month's Student of the Month at CHS. Congratulations to a fine girl.

□ And the winner of the fourth annual Forrest E. King Award is Joanne Winters!! Hats off to you Jo, a special gal who has a way of making everyone feel as though they are the only one around. You deserve the best, and this is just the beginning!

Sports for everyone

Sports are important in this town. From Little League to youth soccer to sailing to high school competition, sports are a vital part of our life in this town.

It never ceases to amaze people that a small community like Cohasset can produce and nurture so many great athletes and a continuous legacy of superlative teams. But it is a tradition in Cohasset, and small numbers have never hampered our desire and drive.

The boys and girls basketball teams have made headlines for many years. Their victories in state competitions have thrilled parents and fans for several seasons, while our competitors scratch their heads and wonder how our kids continually knock down the giants of the league.

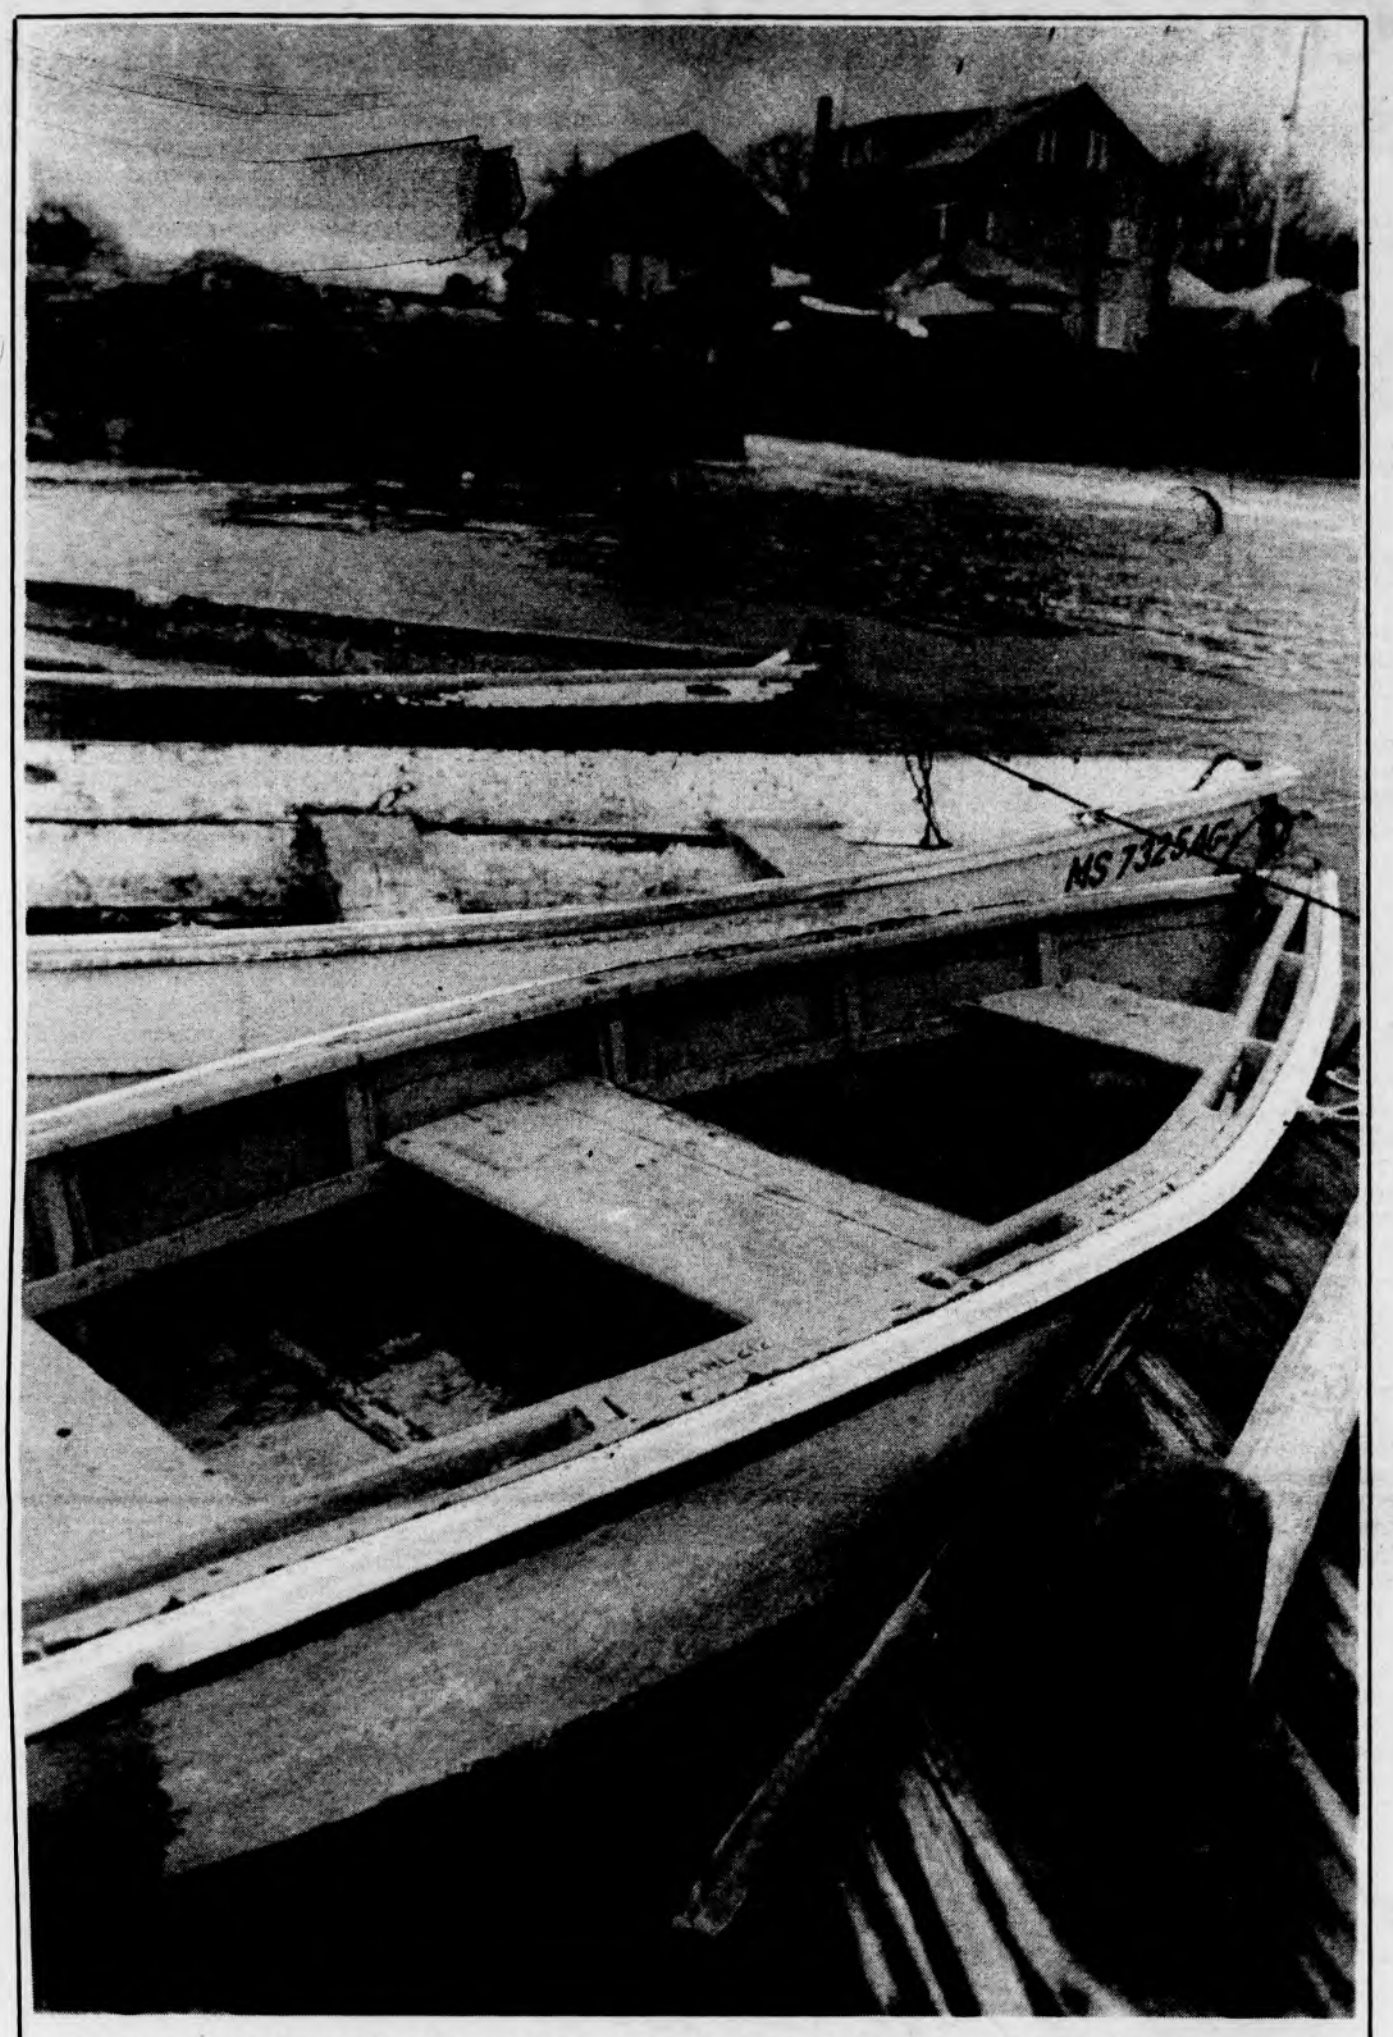
Cohasset High sponsors one of the smallest wrestling teams in their league. But numbers have no relation to talent and ambition, as coach Torin Sweeney has discovered. They may never be a championship team, simply because of the limited numbers. But individually they are exceptionally talented and are posting victories over imposing rivals. It is a sport that has caught on in Cohasset, and one that many new fans find exciting and complex.

Our gymnastics teams is a new to the high school. And although their membership is small compared to the competition, the girls proved they can topple the Goliaths of their league.

Much has been written about the exceptional talents of Michelle Hartley, a co-captain of this year's team. She is indeed a bright star, whose future ambitions will not conclude at Cohasset High.

But the other girls, many of them quite young for an interscholastic team, are also winning individual competitions. Their efforts and talent are a continual source of pride for their young coach, Ruth Ann Sargent.

The team is anxious to become a recognized force in their league, and that day is fast approaching. The team is extremely young, with a group of seventh and eighth graders filling a large portion of the roster. Their day to reign victorious will arrive.



The team is filled with energy, talent and eagerness to succeed. That combination is unbeatable. Their enthusiasm is contagious, their spirit is inspiring.

Our ski team is another example of how a small group of dedicated youths have taken it upon themselves to succeed. It is only through the effort of these devoted athletes and their parents that Cohasset skiiers have had the opportunity to participate in interscholastic competition.

We hope more and more fans will recognize the efforts of these great teams, and all the athletes within our community. Their efforts deserve our attention.

Wrestling is an art to admire, much like their counterparts in gymnastics, and the racers on the ski team. Although it is a team sport, they must succeed by individual performance. It is exhilarating to watch as a youngster grabs the spotlight and performs beyond expectation. One need not be a parent to have great pride in their artistry, and to celebrate their accomplishments.

Success is a tradition in Cohasset. Our athletes succeed beyond all expectations. There is drama and anticipation, and we should all be part of that audience.

Streeter named humanitarian of '88

Priscilla J. Streeter formerly of Cohasset, was named Hingham Visiting Nurse Humanitarian of the Year for 1988 at a reception held recently at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

Carol Sullivan, President of the HVNA Board of Directors, said "Since 1920, the Hingham Visiting Nurse has cared for the sick, regardless of their ability to pay. Now, when the health care industry is becoming larger, more depersonalized, and more business-oriented, the Hingham Visiting Nurse remembers that the very basis of good health care is compassionate caring people."

Streeter has been Administrator of the Hingham Visiting Nurse since 1973.

A Vermont native, Streeter worked as a staff nurse at Gifford Memorial Hospital, Gifford, Vermont, and as a school nurse in the Vermont Public schools. She came to the Hingham Visiting Nurse in 1973 to supervise a staff of 9, and oversee an annual budget of $41,000. Under her supervision, the HVNA has grown to its present staff of more than 60 registered nurses, physical therapists, homemakers, home health aides, medical social workers, nutritionists, maternal and child care workers, and support staff. Its annual budget is now more than $900,000.

Streeter is a graduate of the New England Deaconess Hospital School of Nursing, Boston and Emmanuel College, Boston. She is married to Richard J. Streeter, Assistant Superintendent of the Cohasset Schools. They are the parents of two daughters, and they have one grandchild. The Streeters recently moved to Sandwich.

Skipper icemen deal a 3-2 blow to rival Hull

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset's hockey team ended its 7-10-1 season with a major upset, dealing tournament bound Hull a 3-2 loss at Hobomock Arena February 15.

Jimmy Gallagher, a South Shore League All-Star, scored the winning goal from Brian Pompeo and Brian Curran with 5:39 left as the Skippers rallied from a 2-1 deficit.

"It's a good way to end the season with," said Cohasset coach Dennis Walsh. "Hull is an excellent hockey club, but they were flat tonight. I think they were looking ahead to the playoffs."

Mike Richardson had given Hull the lead, 2-1, 27 seconds into the final period, on a pass from Pat Henderson. Cohasset tied it at 4:50 when Pompeo, also a SSL all-star, intercepted a pass, skated around a defenseman, and scored from 15 feet.

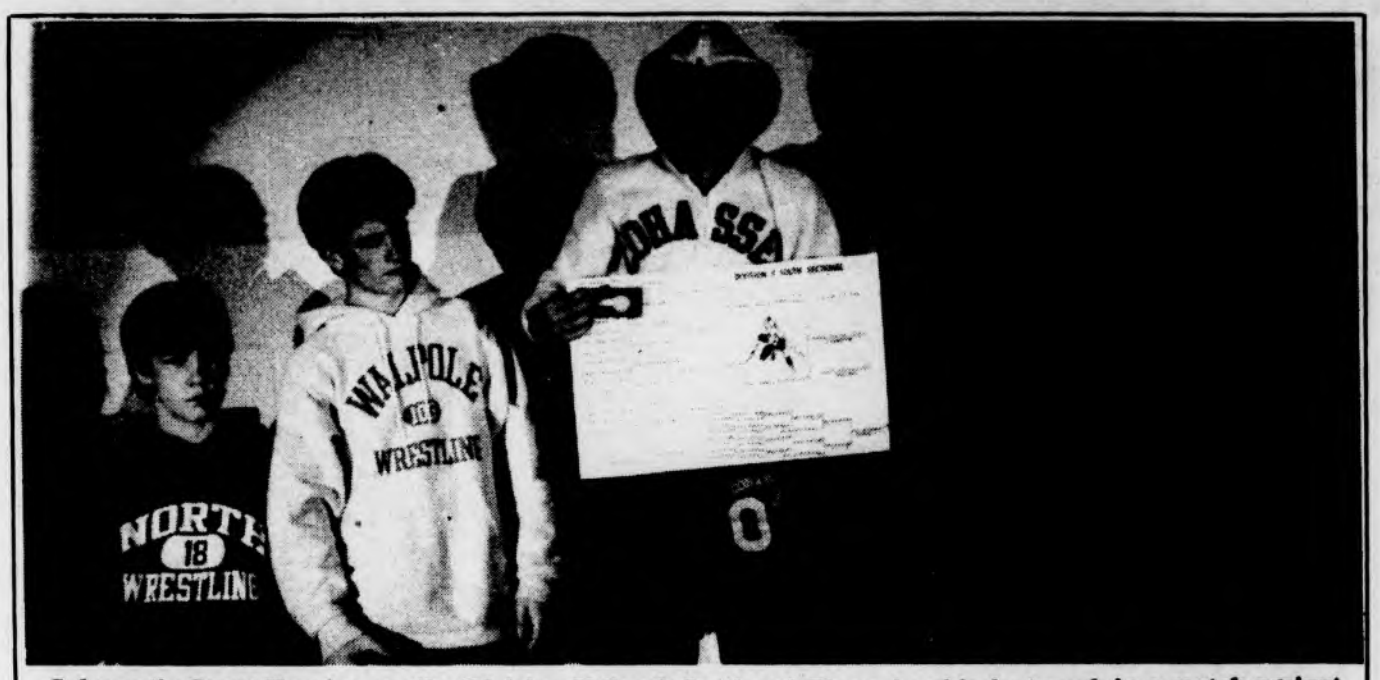
Curran opened the scoring, 3:30 into the game, combining with Ned Chase and Pompeo to gain the early lead. The Pirates tied it two minutes later when Richardson set up Dennis Peacock.

Cohasset goalie Joel Reidy made 18 saves. Kevin Gibbons of Hull stopped 23 shots.

Boys' Basketball

Brian Snow, the SSL Small School scoring champion with a 28-point average, had 23 points and nine rebounds and Abington outscored Cohasset, 8-0, at the line in the fourth quarter, as the Green Wave secured an EMass. tournament berth with a 51-43 victory February 13.

Abington (9-10 overall, 8-4 league) captured second place with a 49-44 triump over Hanover the following night. East Bridgewter (15-4, 11-1) ended Cohasset's five-year reign as league champions this season. Norwell, meanwhile, shared second place with Abington, thus giving the two schools an automatic berth in the tourney (if a school wins more than 12 victories a season and/or finishes second in their league standings, it qualifies for the tournament.)



The Cohasset-Abington game was tied, 24-24, at halftime. Nine third-quarter points by Snow helped Abington forge ahead, 39-37.

Jeff Bryant, a SSL all-star, led Cohasset (4-14, 1-11) with 14 points and 10 rebounds. Teammate Scott Flaherty added eight points, while Ed Reilly and John Graham scored eight points each for Abington.

The regular season will come to an end for Cohasset this week when they play Hopkinton in the opening round of the Millis Tournament. The Skippers will be hoping to advance to Feb. 23 final versus the winner of the Ashland-Millis game.

Girls' Basketball

Sara Bishop, a SSL all-star, had a triple-double and Cohasset dominated the boards to move within one game of an EMass. tourney berth, defeating Abington, 39-25, February 13.

Cohasset's Gregg Nourie won the Division II South Sectional Championship last week in a match against Walpole's Mike Healy. (Ginny Nourie photo)

Host Abington (7-10, 3-8 league) took a 10-6 first-quarter lead, but the Skippers blanked the Green Wave, 13-0, in the second period for a 19-10 halftime advantage. Cohasset outrebounded Abington, 18-4, in the second quarter.

Bishop finished with 10 points, 10 steals and 10 rebounds and Heather MacDonald had seven points and 10 rebounds (six in the second period.) Nancy Riley and Kristin Ellinger, also a SSL all-star, combined for 11 points and 26 rebounds for the winners.

For Abington, Katy Donovan scored 10 points and Sue Cashman had nine.

The defending Division Three State champion Cohasset (11-7, 8-4) must win one game in this weeks Hall-of-Fame Tournament at Massasoit College to qualify for post-season play.

The classic, sponsored by the IAABO Board 54 Plymouth County Basketball Officials, will begin with Hingham taking on Rockland, followed by Cohasset versus Bridgewater-Raynham in the nightcap. The consolation and final games will be held the following night.

Skiing

Mike Suhrbier and Katie Lord of Cohasset were individual winners in downhill action at Prospect Hill in Waltham February 13.

Suhrbier narrowly defeated Mark Boulton of Waltham by 26-hundredths of a second. Lord outlasted her nearest competitor, Liz Hazel of Waltham, by more than a second.

For the overall team scoring, Dover-Sherborn captured first place with a total of 187 points in the boys' division. In the girls, host Waltham edged Dover-Sherborn, 242.5-191.5 (there were 10 schools that competed in the meet.)

For Cohasset, the boys totalled 71 points which gave them a fifth-place finish, while the girls tied for eighth with Newton South (47 points each.)

Gymnastics

Cohasset's Michelle Hartley earned a league-high score of 9.0 in the South Shore League gymnastics' championship meet at Duxbury High School February 16.

Hartley placed third in the all-around competition with 33 points.

Kara Connerty of Norwell and Kristin Korszlenewski of Hanover tied for first place in the all-around (33.25 points.)

Scituate's Tanya Murray finished fifth with 32.75 points.

Tara Gallagher of Cohasset tied for fourth place (7.8) with Scituate's Kerry Melville in the vault.

Scituate almost swept the bars event, but Hanover's Jessica Ganong (7.95) edged out Lisa Coyne (7.55), Deb Schaller (7.5) and Suzanne Critchley (7.45), respectively. Coyne also lost to Ganong in the balance beam by five-hundreths of a point, 7.85 to 7.8.

Critchley tied for fifth in the beam (a 7.5 score with teammate Kate Scott) and the floor exercise (a 8.0 score with Kristyn Gamel of Randolph.)

In the vault, Beth Lawrence of Scituate placed third

Basketball Camp Registration Underway

Registration has started for the 1989 Hingham Basketball Camp which will be held June 26-30 for boys and girls grades five to 9.

Program Director William "Skip" Mortimer head coach of Hingham High girls varsity, said prospective campers should send in their applications and deposit as soon as possible since the camp is limited to 100 participants on a first-come, first-serve basis.

The cost of the camp is $90 which includes a non-refundable $25 deposit which is required with application by June 1. The balance must be paid by June 20 to ensure enrollment in the camp.

Mortimer has 20 years of summer basketball camp experience which includes the position of Program Coordinator at Dave Cowens Basketball Camp and Program Director at Larry Siegfried Basketball School.

Mortimer will be working with Division Coordinator Dave Hickey, the Hingham High junior varsity girls coach. Hickey has served as a special consultant at the Dave Cowens Basketball Camp.

Cohasset-Hingham hoop squads duel

By Bill Modestino
Sports correspondent

For both the Hingham and Cohasset basketball squads, it will come down to a one-game showdown to determine who will qualify for the State Tournament. Perhaps it is quite appropriate that these two neighboring schools will meet each other in the girls' consolation game of the third annual Hall-of-Fame Classic (sponsored by the Plymouth Colony officials) being held this week at Massasoit Community College (Brockton).

In the opener, Hingham was eventually overmatched by a scrappy Rockland club in the second half, en route to a 69-48 loss Feb. 21.

For Cohasset, they met Bridgewater-Raynham (18-1 and co-champions in the Old Colony League with Silver Lake) in their opening round match without SSL all-star forward Kristin Ellinger, who sprained her ankle in practice the previous day and, therefore, was unable to start against B—R.

Despite the fine bench production of Cohasset to make up for the loss of Ellinger, it wasn't enough as B-R defeated Cohasset, 53-47.

At the start, Cohasset is outshining Bridgewater with their team defense. As a result, Cohasset grabs a 10-7 lead after the first period, courtesy of a buzzer-beating three-pointer by Sara Bishop (17 points overall).

Guard Barbara Lagrotteria provides the Lady Skippers their biggest lead of the day, 19-11, with a coast-to-coast transitional basket (4:23). Bridgewater-Raynham, however, brought the deficit down to three (26-23) at halftime.

The action begins to pick up in the third period due to three lead changes. Inevitably, the B-R press is showing signs of wearing down Cohasset. Also, Jen Mead, the big, burly center for the Trojans, is pushing her weight around to establish room underneath the boards. Cohasset regained the lead, 40-38, on Lagrotteria's follow-up with 46 seconds left in the quarter. Mead had a productive stanza as she scored 11 out of B-R 20 points.

Tonya Peterson of Cohasset opens the final quarter with a beautiful steal and lay-up (B-R 43-42). 2 1/2 minutes later, Bishop pushes Cohasset ahead, 45-43, on a corner jumper (Bishop is in the game despite four personals on her). In the meantime, B-R's frontline is dominating the boards, bot not capitalizing on their follow-ups. Unfortunately, this would be Cohasset's last lead of the game as Kirsten Edeman and Mead combined to score B-R's final 10 points in four minutes.

"The team is not dejected; we played as hard as we could. B-R was quicker and had more muscle on the boards. Then again, we expected that. Of course, Kristin might have made a difference. We will give it a shot tomorrow," said Cohasset coach Bill Fallon.

Mead finished with21 points, while Eckman chipped in with 17. Cohasset's Bishop nded up with 17 points, followed by seven points each from Heather MacDonald and Nancy Riley.

More victories for CHS gymnasts

February 1, the Cohasset Skippers Gymnastics team celebrated their first victory of the season.

However, one victory was not enough, the girls have finally pulled it together as a team effort towards their victories. February 6, Cohasset had their second victory against Randolph 115 to 114.2 Michelle Hartley, Captain, swept the all around title with a season high of 34 points. Teammate Tara Gallagher coming up right behind her with an all around total of 30 points. The remaining 9 Skippers helped towards their second victory.

February 8, 1989 Cohasset had its third consecutive win of the season now against Carver High 111.45 to 97.15. Cohasset had to put on its best performance because Capt. Liz Buckley and Capt. Carrie Ripley were unable to compete due to injury and sickness. Starting out on the uneven bars with exceptional performances by Aimee, Nicole, Johanna, Laura, Tara, and Capt. Michelle started the girls off with a nine point lead. The Skippers then picked up an additional point on the balance beam and vault rotation.

The Case of the Plutoniumized Pet

It all started out when a canister of plutonium was stolen from the Low Point Science Lab.

It was a quiet evening at the Low Point Science Lab and all the scientists had left. Only three guards were on duty. All of a sudden a loud honk rang out in the night. Soon a pair of headlights shown through the darkness. One of the guards went out of the toll booth to see what was the matter. When he got to the car a young and pretty girl rolled down her window. "Do you think you could help me sir?" she said sympathetically to the guard. "I think I have a flat!"

"I'll open the gate for you ma'am, just drive on up to the lab, a guard will be waiting for you." Up the long curvy hill she rode, but in the middle she stopped to let a man out of her trunk secretly. She continued up the winding road where she saw a guard waiting for her.

"What seems to be the trouble, ma'am?" asked the guard.

"I have a flat," she replied.

"I'll jack her up and see what I can do," the guard reluctantly added.

Meanwhile, Harry (who was the man the girl let out of her trunk) sneaked past the guard, who was helping the girl, and went into the lab. He quickly took out a nail file, jammed it into the computer key hole and jimmied it around until the screens went blank. He stealthily went down the hall and went into the door at the end of the hall that said "DANGER AUTHORIZED PERSONNEL ONLY." Inside was a wall with cylinders of plutonium. He ran over and took the controls of a giant arm with which he could get the plutonium. After he got the plutonium, he ran back down the hall to a window. He took out a glass cutter and made a hole to escape through. He met the girl where he was left off and they sped off into the night.

Two days later there was a report about the missing plutonium. They knew they would have to stash the plutonium or it would be curtains for them. Harry went to a nearby store and bought a box of hamster food to stash the goods in.

"Here you go Pal, have some food." Pal munched away at the food I gave him. All of a sudden he turned blue as a blueberry! "What's wrong Pal?" I exclaimed. I took him down to the station to have an autopsy done on him. If you didn't know, I'm a private eye.

"Plutonium," Max said "he ate Plutonium." I was shocked he could have eaten plutonium. Then I remembered the hampster food. It must have been that. I immediately brought the food back to the lab and got the fingerprints. We got the prints of a store helper and one other, besides mine, of course. Those other prints belonged to Harry Davidson, a well known criminal. He had escaped from a top security prison and was never seen again. In order to catch the crook I set up a few police and myself in the store. At night we would hide in the rafters and any other hidden places.

Three days had passed and it was Wednesday, but on that night, at eleven forty-five, there was a click and then a snap at the door. Through the faint light of the full moon I could see two figures, one of which was Harry. I watched them go down the pet food isle. When they reached the hampster food they stopped and searched through the boxes, scattering them around. I gave the signal. All of the men jumped out from hiding. The two figures got startled and ran down the isle. I knocked over a barrel of nuts and when they hit them they went flying into the frozen foods. I slapped on the cuffs and took them to the waiting paddy wagon and brought them to the station.

It turns out that the other crook was Brenda Hanley. After all that I revived my hampster but he is still blue. Anyway he's feeling better.

The Temple of the Sun

Sam Tucker, safari hunter, is at work today like any other day. Except for today isn't like any other day. Today he got called by Safaris "R" Us. They wanted his help and skill on an expedition down in South America. They were for the mysterious Temple of the Sun. Legend has it that a huge diamond was formed by the sun and set in the temple for worshipping. Until now (1989), no one has gone inside the Temple and come out alive. As Sam's plane lands in South America our story begins.

"Wow! Great weather, Sammy," Mack says. "Where do we meet the others?"

"Over there," Sam says pointing at three bystanders.

"Are you Sam Tickle?" one of them asks in a foreign tongue.

"Tucker, Sam Tucker, nice to meet you," Sam says.

"I'm Dan, this is Jake and this is the professor."

"This is Mack, my assistant," Sam says.

They all pile into an old 4x4 jeep not knowing what evil lurks ahead of them.

In four days they're in an Amazon jungle walking through wet ferns, vines, and gross things little kids fear.

"Look, the temple, I can see it from here," Sam says standing on Mack's shoulders.

By nightfall they have reached the base of the temple. Jake relieves himself and accidently leans on a secret panel exposing an entrance.

"What? Huh? Look at this! Over here!" He yells noticing it, "With my safari skills I found the door!"

They walk cautiously through the passage way for hours until the professor accidently sets off a net booby trap. Hundreds of Inca cannibals are there in seconds.

"We'll be eaten alive!" yells Mack. The cannibals unravel them and bring them to a large room. Everyone kneels except for the five friends. The guards buckle their knees and they fall to the ground. Next, an emperor walked in and the tribe starts chanting a weird song. Finally, the emperor speaks, "Who are you?"

"We are but mere friends out for a walk. We happened to see your temple so we dropped by for some tea," Sam said lying.

"Liar!" The emperor points at Sam, "You and your friends will be punished!" "Guards, take them away!"

As the guards lead them down the hall, Sam manages to sprinkle pepper on the guards' noses and he, only, escapes. Sam follows his captured friends at a safe, unseen distance. Soon, though, he is lost.

After a few minutes he smells a gross, burning flesh aroma. Following its scent he reaches a kitchen like room. Inside are about thirty tribesmen eating what looks like people. For some unknown reason they're chanting, "Less filling!! Tastes great!!" Realizing it's his friends, he pulls out his uzi and blows away most of them, but some cannibals escape to warn others.

"The diamond of the Sun!" Sam yells looking at it in the center of the room. He runs over, grabs it, and runs out of the room. Finally finding the exit, he turns and hears his enemy is close behind.

Out in the jungle, still being pursued, he runs across an old World War II bomber that is in perfect condition. He fires it up and he takes off minutes before the runway is sprayed by arrows and spears.

Back in New York, he's a real hero. He won many awards for bravery, skills, and for helping his country. Even the president meets with hm.

This is yet another example of Sam Tucker, safari hunter, on the job.

A Special Day

My dad has dark brown hair and hazel eyes. He is about as tall as some of my friend's dads.

Dad likes to play all sorts of games — mostly Nintendo games. He likes Pinball particularly, but he also enjoys Ice Hockey. I like Pinball almost as much as he does, but my father has stayed up until one or two in the morning to play. He is fun to play with, even if he does cheat just a little when we play games like Clue. My dad has an obsession with chocolate chip ice cream and Roy Orbinson's music.

I don't know how Dad manages it, but he goes to work, plays uncountable games with me, plays sports with my brother, and still finds time to spend with my mother.

Patty Pig's Adventure

It was a hot day on the Jones' farm. The ducks, cows, horses and the pigs were lying in the shade of the barn.

The pig, Patty, was upset because no one paid attention to her. She was an odd little pig with big ears and a curly little tail.

The sun beat down on the dark soil. Then, in one second, for no reason, Patty ran right out of the pen to the rest of the farm. She was free, like she always wanted to be.

Patty started to walk, not knowing where she was going. She walked day and night.

When Tuesday came around, she was about sixty miles away from the farm, but she was happy. Patty saw deer and squirrels and other things she never saw before. She was amazed, but she missed the farm.

After an hour, Patty decided to turn back. It took three days, but she made it.

She was welcomed with open arms and with quacks, neighs, moos, and baas from the other animals. That day she realized she liked it better on the farm.

"Ziggy Bob"

Ziggy Bob is not a human. He is a thumbody. He is a real Joe Skier. At night when no one can see him he rules the mountain. He uses flat toothpicks for skis and regular toothpicks for poles. He lives in a tiny hut off the trail way in the woods. There is a whole town of little Ziggys. They are all called Ziggy but the second part of their name is their real name. They all have Ziggy Marley piped into their huts. Around ten o'clock all the Ziggy people go skiing and flatten the trails so the next day all the people of the world can go skiing. Nobody has ever seen a Ziggy, but nobody knows how the trails are flattened none of the snowcats ever go out to flatten the trails because they are already flattened in the morning. I was interested in how the trails were ultragroomed every night, so after everyone was gone I sneaked out and hid under the porch of the lodge. It was right next to one of the ski trials. I listened carefully but all I could hear was little swishes. It was pitch black so I couldn't see anything, but I looked carefully and I could see what looked like little men. There were thousands of them. They were all going down the hills of the trails and singing Ziggy Marley songs. I was bewildered but I will never tell a soul about the Ziggy men.

The Teddy Bear

The teddy bear sat quietly and alone in the corner of the toy shop. He was just imported from Norway to London. All the other toys made fun of him because he was made of soft fur instead of glass. They were boring and not fun to play with, but the teddy bear was bundles of fun.

The teddy bear's name was Harry. He was brown and soft and very huggable. He had loving blue eyes and a small black button nose. He had a pink little mouth. On his paws were painted a small red heart. Around his neck he wore a brightly colored woolen scarf. On his head he wore a matching cap.

The man who owned the store had a daughter. Once when she had a birthday, her father said she could pick one thing she wanted from the store. And her first choice was the teddy bear. Her father asked her if she really wanted him. She replied, "Everything else is boring. This is the only fun thing."

So she and the bear lived happily ever after.

Charley, The Snowboarder

"Here we are folks at the 1992 Winter Olympics in Siberia," the sportscaster announced.

Charley, who was from the U.S.A., was a snowboarder and he was in the locker room talking to his coach. "I don't know if I can beat that Russian Boris Koskov, Jr."

"I am sure you will, Charley. He is so dumb that he tripped over himself and tumbled through the finish line with a time of ten minutes and thirty two seconds," replied his coach.

Reluctantly Charley went out onto the starting platform and strapped on his snowboard. Bang! the gun went off and the clock started.Charley got off to a bad start. He was racing down the mountain when he saw a huge tree looming in front of him. "Oh, #!*%," he yelled as he collided with the tree. The clock was still running and Charley did not want to be made a fool of. He got up and started to board down the mountain when he flew over the top of a rise and yelped, "Oh, noooooo!" as he saw thousands of moguls and jumps. He went somersaulting over one of the jumps and before he knew it, he was half way to the finish line. The crowd was cheering so loudly that he was paying no attention to where he was going. He slammed into the plexipole and bounced through the finish line with a time of nine minutes and thirty two seconds, a new world record!

Unfortunately Charley's great finish resulted in injuries. He raised two thumbs in casts when the gold medal was presented to him!

Finding Something Special

It was a warm, sunny day in April, and Lila was sitting in her kitchen. She had just read a notice in her mail, saying that unless she could get more money in three days, she would have to sell her house.

Lila was very disappointed because this house was very special to her. She had grown up in it, and lived here for many years. She didn't know what to do.

The next day, as she was going down to the cellar to get some peach preserves, she noticed a closet behind the staircase that she had never seen before. Lila didn't know whether to open the closet or not even go near it. She thought about it for a few moments, then could wait no longer. She ran to the closet door, turned the knob, and opened it. Inside this little closet was a dusty, brown chest. She heaved the chest out and set it down on the floor. She found the key to open it in a pocket on the side of the chest. As she put the key in the lock, her hands trembled, more from excitement than from fear. She lifted up the top of the chest, and inside was pack after pack of hundred dollar bills.

She couldn't believe it! It was too good to be true! Lila smiled joyfully, then brought the money upstairs. She quickly sent some of the money out to relatives. Then, she sent the rest out to the real estate agents, so she could keep her home. She still hadn't found out how it got there, but maybe it had been there all the time.

Smiling

Ever since T.J. Wilken was a baby he has always smiled. When he was a baby he would smile even if you didn't do anything to make him.

Now he's fifty-one and he is still smiling. He was with the Barnum and Bailey's Circus for about five years as a clown. The people who owned the circus really liked him because he was real funny and liked to be around other people.

Now that he's fifty-one he isn't as active, but still smiles and makes lots of friends. Just recently his grandchildren stayed at his house. He took them to the circus, the zoo, and the movies in one day.

Mr. Wilken works at a hospital. He works with kids that are scared and don't want to have surgery. He sometimes plays with the kids or talks to them, but at the end they're always smiling. The reason he works at the hospital is because his wife died and he wanted to help people so they don't die.

Recreation Department programs listed

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for grades K and 1, boys' and girls' basketball clinic at the Deer Hill School gym, beginning the week of March 6, from 3:30 to 5 p.m.

The fee for the seven-week teaching clinic to be headed by David Shumaker, will be $12, with a discount for subsequent children from the same family. To register or for further information, call the recreation office at 383-6791.

Beginning next winter, the 1989-1990, Recreation/Booster's Basketball program will include a clinic for grades 2 (i.e.: this year's grade one students, and the March, 1989, seven-week program will allow interested children additional exposure to the game and skills, prior to the 1990 season program.

Stressed will be fundamental skills as well as a general orientation to the rules and concept of the sport, in a low-key, recreational setting, where children will be afforded fun and exercise as well as skill development. The concept of this program is to provide a "pre-clinic" atmosphere, hopefully, making next year's program less overwhelming.

Shumaker had prior experience working with children, and was a CHS Varsity basketball player, and will be the head instructor of the seven week clinic.

First grade boys and girls will begin Tuesday, March 7, at 3:30 to 5 p.m., Deer Hill gym, and kindergarten boys and girls will meet at the same times and place starting Wednesday, March 8.

Pre-registration is necessary as the clinics will be limited as to number of participants. Children must not be dropped off at Deer Hill until 3:30 p.m., and picked-up at 5 p.m. promptly.

If transportation to or from the clinic is a problem, please let us know when you call to register. The programs will end during the week of April 24, meeting seven weeks, but not meeting during the week of April school vacation.

AFTER SCHOOL RECREATION GAMES/SPORTS PROGRAM

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations, by calling 383-6791, for boys' and girls' after school games programs which will meet on the following days, for the following grades, from 3:30 to 5 p.m. at the Deer Hill School gym, beginning the week of March 6, 1989: Mondays — Grades 2 & 3 — Boys' and Girls' — 3:30 to 5 p.m.; Thursdays — Grades K & 1 — Boys' and Girls' — 3:30 to 5 p.m.; Fridays — Grades 4, 5 & 6 — Boys' and Girls' — 3:30 to 5 p.m.

All programs will be restricted as to the number of participants, and registrations will be accepted on a first-call, first-enrolled basis. The fee for the programs will be $12, with a 50 percent discount offered to families with more than one child registering, not just for the same group. David Shumaker will be the recreation department's head instructor for this program.

The programs are designed with fun and exercise in mind, and will include low-organized games, team sports and quiet activities — if demand indicates, limited arts and crafts will be offered.

Children may not report to Deer Hill gym until 3:30 p.m. as other programs are going on until then, and must be picked up promptly at 5 p.m.

For registering for further information, call the recreation office at 383-6791.

For those of you who may have had difficulty reaching town hall or the recreation department during the past couple of weeks, we apologize for your inconvenience.

The new central telephone system appears to be online, functioning well now and you should have no further problem reaching us.

The town hall, general switchboard access number is 383-9900, however, the recreation office phone, 383-6791, allows switchboard access as well as direct access to the recreation office.

Should you wish to call recreation on weekends or evenings, use 383-6791. That number will also override the switchboard when it is not being manned, allowing for direct access after hours and weekends. Also, 383-6791 is direct access to our answering machine for outgoing and incoming messages.

NAC BASKETBALL GAME

The Cohasset Recreation Department has 42 tickets for the Saturday, March 4, NAC basketball game between Boston University and Northeastern University, to be held at 1 p.m. at BU's Walter Brown arena.

The cost of a ticket and bus transportation to and from Boston, from Cohasset Town Hall is $5 per person, and you may register by calling the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791.

This event is ideal for families, eliminating having to drive to and park in, the city of Boston. All tickets are section 9, rows A, B and C. The bus will leave from Cohasset Town Hall at 11:45 a.m., Saturday, March 4, and return to town hall at about 4 p.m., right after completion of the 1 p.m. game.

FURNITURE REFINISHING

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a furniture refinishing course to be taught by Mr. Kenneth Sargent, beginning during early February.

Classes will meet from 9 to 11 a.m., Thursday mornings and the fee for the four week, eight hour-program will be $35 per participant. Classes will be limited in size; each person will receive as much individual attention as necessary.

Should you be interested in this program, you may register by calling the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6691.

Community center courses

Registrations are now being taken for Community Center kids' courses beginning in March.

Wednesdays from 9 to 11 a.m. beginning March the center will offer Tiny Tot Chef (9 to 10 a.m.) and Science Nature (10 to 11 a.m.), each for eight weeks.

While these courses are offered separately, together they comprise a two-hour block of fun for pre-schoolers. In Tiny Tot Chef, kids experiment with simple, edible recipes and learn kitchen safety; in Science and Nature, they will take discovery walks on nice days and work on nature projects and crafts indoors during inclement weather.

4H Babysitting for kids ages 10 and over will begin Wednesday, March 1 from 3:30 to 5 p.m. for four weeks. This program stresses a better understanding of young children — their care and safety, plus first aid and other practical tips. The cost is $18.

Ingenue Charm Course for girls ages 9-14 starts Tuesday, March 7 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. for six weeks. Girls learn self-confidence through positive attitudes toward developing their best qualities. The course includes hygiene, grooming, poise, exercising and proper use of make-up and wardrobe.

For further information on these or any other courses offered at Cohasset Community Center, call 383-0088.

Body Sculpting class

Beginning March 1, a Body Sculpting class will be held at Cohasset Community Center Wednesday mornings from 8:45 to 9:30 with Normandie Nigh.

This class will replace the regular Wednesday morning aerobics class with Normandie.

Body Sculpting will utilize hand weights, leg weights and large rubber bands to tone and build muscles in all parts of the body. Participants are asked to bring their own hand weights, which can be purchased from any sporting goods store.

This class will be on-going with sign-up on a monthly basis.

For further information call the Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088.

Cookie sale volunteers

Patriot's Trail Girl Scout volunteer Becky Bates-McArthur is serving as the Cohasset Cookie Manager for the 1989 Girl Scout Cookie Sale.

This position encompasses a variety of responsibilities including processing troop Cookie Sale orders, training troops in safety and sales procedures, and providing support to other community volunteers involved with the Cookie Sale.

Bates-McArthur encourages Cohasset residents to support the Girl Scouts in the community by participating in the Cookie Sale.

Residents who have not been contacted by a Girl Scout taking orders door-to-door may order cookies directly by calling Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council at 482-1078 or 1-800-882-1662.

'Peter Pan' auditions set

South Shore residents from nine years old on are reminded that open auditions for "That New Theatre's" production of the musical "Peter Pan" will be held Tuesday and Thursday, Feb. 28 and March 2, beginning at 6:30 p.m. at the First Parish Church in Norwell.

The group is looking for males and females, of all sizes and types starting at nine years old, to play the Lost Boys, Pirates, Indians, and animals.

The group is looking for singers, non-singers, dancers and mimes. The cast will consist of over 35 members, and the majority of the cast will double various roles and be an intregal part of the staging.

There is no membership or registration fee to be a part of "That New Theatre." Cast members will, however, be asked to assist in fundraising for the show which, due to the technical complications of it, is expensive to produce.

The show will be performed 10 times over the last weekend in April and the first in May. Rehearsals will be weeknight evenings, but not everyone will be required to be there every night.

Auditioners should try to bring a prepared song, but music will be available at auditions. Dialogue readings will also be provided.

For further information, call 878-2127 or 826-7983.

Art center coffee

The Friends of the South Shore Art Center are holding a coffee for volunteers at the Center Thursday, March 2, at 11 a.m. Veteran volunteers are invited to come and share their ideas and experiences. Everyone with an interest in the visual arts and a few hours a month to volunteer is welcome. No special skills are required — just a willingness to learn and a desire to work in a stimulating and congenial environment. If you can stay for lunch with the staff at noon, bring a sandwich.

Call 383-9548 if you would like to come or for more information. The South Shore Art Center is located in Cohasset at 119 Ripley Road.

Barrow faces 'disciplinary action' if he runs

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

As of Friday, Feb. 24, there was another twist in the saga of selectman candidate Sgt. Richard Barrow.

Selectmen voted by a 3-2 margin at a special meeting Friday evening not to waive the police department regulations which prohibit an officer from running for paid, political office without taking a leave of absence.

A letter has been sent to the officer by the selectmen's executive secretary, stating that if Barrow continues to campaign without taking an immediate leave of absence, "the violation of the rules and regulations (of the police department) may result in disciplinary action" against the police sergeant.

This vote by the full board of selectmen contradicted an earlier vote taken Tuesday, Feb. 22 in which two selectmen voted to allow Sgt. Barrow to run for the office. Only three of the five selectmen attended that meeting, and thus the vote succeeded 2-to-1.

Verbal fireworks flared Friday night as selectmen accused each other of deception in their attempts to get Sgt. Barrow on and off the ballot.

At the conclusion of Friday's meeting, Sgt. Barrow's campaign staff was still unclear whether his candidacy was official. Despite selectmen's intention to prohibit the officer from running without taking a leave, it was not immediately understood whether their vote was binding.

Town counsel, who was vacationing out of state and could not attend last week's meeting, sent a memo which stated that selectmen could reconsider Tuesday's vote and their decision would be legal.

Parent proposes school budget cuts

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"We have to start looking at some bold steps," said parent Roy Fitzsimmons at Monday night's public hearing on the school department's proposed $5,576,783 budget for fiscal 1990.

The budget is up $463,777 from last year, a nine-percent increase.

Fitzsimmons and others suggested such things as regionalization of services because of the town's tight financial situation.

'We're talking about a nine percent increase in the system, yet the town is facing fiscal restraints.'

Roy Fitzsimmons

The school committee has not yet voted on the budget.

"Usually we wait until after the public hearing to vote so that we can take the comments into account," explained School Supt. Stephen Hart.

Hart began the hour and a half meeting by explaining that the department has some built in increases.

For example, he cited examples of 60 percent increases in some special needs expenditures.

Hart said that transportation costs will increase next year from $22,860 to $37,575; day tuition, $133,895 to $176,143, and residential tuition, $48,179 to $115,620.

"Just these three distinct areas represent a significant increase," he said.

PSO member Sue McNamara asked what percentage the state pays for special needs programs.

Hart said that the state pays 60 percent of the Five offices to be contested in April 8 election

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Cohasset's April 8 election looks to be an exciting one with five contested races.

Five candidates have filed their nomination papers for two, three-year selectmen's seats.

In addition, there are a number of candidates for the school committee, health board, sewer commission, and housing authority.

The candidates, all of whom have returned their nomination papers according to the town clerk's office, are:

Selectman

Richard P. Barrow, 63, of 283 King St., is a lifelong Cohasset resident who is a police sergeant.

Barrow has been a member of the Cohasset police department for almost 39 years.

His candidacy has been an ongoing controversy because a department regulation requires a police officer to take an unpaid leave of absence if he or she runs for office.

Last month, selectmen voted 2 to 2 when asked by Barrow to waive the department regulation.

His request before a superior court judge to allow a campaign without taking a leave of absence from his job was denied two weeks ago.

When the matter came up again last week, selectmen voted 2 to 1 to waive the regulation, then voted 3 to 2 not to waive it.

Barrow has been a recreation commissioner for the past 15 years,and said he would resign that post if elected a selectman.

He has also served on the harbor committee and the Government Island Study Committee.

Barrow said he is running for selectman because improvements are needed in town, and to get the Housing workshop

The South Shore Coalition invites interested citizens to a housing workshop Saturday, March 4 from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at Norwell High School.

"Building a Housing Coalition on the South Shore" is a conference which will present findings on housing needs in the area as well as ways to plan and finance innovative solutions.

Case studies will highlight the steps that communities undergo in building affordable housing.

Developers, bankers, state and local government officials and housing advocates will attend.

To register, call 659-4909. The conference is free.

Oil tank disposal fee

The Cohasset Board of Health recently voted to require a fee for disposal of oil tanks at the Cedar Street Municipal Landfill.

Effective immediately, tanks which are cleaned and quartered appropriately will be accepted at the charge of $20 for capacity of five hundred gallons or less and $50 for tanks in excess of five hundred gallon to 1100 gallons.

Checks are to be made payable to the Town of Cohasset and paid to the landfill supervisor on site. No disposal will be allowed without prepayment.

Rep. Murray files bill

Mary Jeanette Murray filed a bill to roll back the recent hikes in motor vehicle registration and license fees.

"When the Dukakis Administration put out its first broad-based tax hike with the Registry fee increases," said Rep. Murray, they were unfair, inappropriate tax hikes that would be fought by members of the Legislature. The battle on behalf of taxpayers with the filing of this fee rollback proposal has begun.

Rep. Murray said the Registry fee hikes "were a wild grab at millions of additional tax dollars disguised as a fee." This is the issue where the line has to be drawn and "to stop picking the public's pocket every time we have a fiscal mess," she added.

Kate Abbruzzese and her son, Jesse, had a blast in this week's snowstorm as they frolic in the flakes. (Staff photo/J. Paul MacDonald)

Rep. Murray said, "people are outraged that the little they might have saved in reduced auto insurance rates is being wiped out by these Registry fee increases. Many of the hikes that effect businesses such as the increase in truck weight charges will simply be passed along to consumers. And the last thing we need right now is another consumer's tax."

Gjesteby at conference

Selectman Martha K. Gjesteby, MAPC Treasurer and local representative, attended the Washington Policy Conference, in Washington D.C., February 8-10.

The conference is an annual event sponsored by the National Association of Regional Councils (NARC.) The theme for this year's event was, "Challenges for the Regional Community in the 1990's."

Gjesteby is a long-standing member of both the NARC Long-Range Transportation Committee and Human Services Committee.

Gjesteby also attended workshop meetings for the Long-Range Transportation Task Force and the Human and Economic Services Legislative Committee. These meetings discussed ways to forge a consensus on a surface transportation program to meet the nation's highway and mass transit needs and new ways for regional councils to plan and coordinate human services.

Gjesteby has been the Cohasset representative to MAPC for more than 10 years. She is a member of the Council's 25-member Executive Committee and MAPC's Transportation, Legislative, and Land Use Technical Advisory Committees (TACs.)

Return census forms

Town Clerk Frances Marks reminds residents that census forms should be returned as soon as possible to town hall.

Feb. 20 was the official deadline, according to Marks, but the forms can still be returned.

There is no late fee, she said.

So far, better than 80 percent of the census forms have been returned, Marks said.

In addition, Marks said that residents have until May 1 to get their dogs licensed.

Cost is $6 for spayed or neutered dogs with certificate of proof, and $10 for males or unspayed females.

There will be a late fee of $25 after May 1, she said.

The dog licenses will run from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31, Marks added.

So far, about 500 residents have licensed their dogs, but at least 250 have not, according to Marks.

PUBLIC MEETING ON PROPOSED NEW SEWER RATE SCHEDULE
Thursday, March 2, 1989 at 7:30 PM
Bates Building, 43 Elm Street

This public meeting is being held to explain and answer questions on the new proposed sewer rate schedule.

Both sewer users and all taxpayers would be affected by the new rate schedule because a portion of the sewer system operating and maintenance costs are subsidized by the general tax levy. The balance is paid by the sewer users.

Charles DeSantis,
Chairman for
The Cohasset
Sewer Commission

. . . Cohasset's week

Pleased with office

The Recreation Commission has written to selectmen thanking the board for providing it with new office space and furniture.

"Having spent the last 12 years virtually working from a closet, you can probably imagine how much our office means to us," wrote the commission directed by John M. Worley.

The commission said it now has ample room for not only daily administrative tasks, but for meetings as well.

"Because recreation is a seven day and evening per week proposition, you may be assured that our space will be employed to good use, perhaps more so than any other town hall department or office.

"The only concern we have at this point is a way to secure the sliding windows in the front wall of the office."

The commission stated that it has asked Richard Ainslie for an estimate and design to secure the windows.

Selectmen were not pleased that the commission went ahead and contacted the clerk of the works without prior approval from them. Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt said the board will "come down pretty hard" on the commission in a letter they plan to send.

The commission also said that it will use the old office, lobby and auditorium when needed for larger program registrations as well as for issuance of facility permits each June and July.

"Because of the great numbers of registrants than can be generated by the programs, too much confusion, in too small an area would manifest, should we try to operate out of our new wing office," the letter said.

"Again, our many thanks to each of you for your consideration and support, allowing us to better serve our community."

No more free rides

The Cohasset Animal Control has enlisted the assistance of the Hingham and Hull departments to help transport stray animals from Cohasset.

Animal Control Officer William Quigley notified selectmen last week that because the Cohasset animal control van is out of commission, he has had to use his own vehicle to pick up stray animals reported by local residents.

During the last episode, two dogs caused some damage to his 1988 Ford LTD Crown Victoria, "scratching the door, soiled the interior with hair, fought, and one vomited on my velour interior," he reported.

In the future, Officer Quigley noted, he will ask for help from neighboring towns until the town purchases a new vehicle. In his proposed FY '90 budget the officer has requested a new van be to replace the one that has been out of commission for months.

Thinking about raise

Selectmen took under advisement a recommendation by the personnel board to raise the salaries of non union town employees by five percent.

The raise would constitute a cost of living increase for the employees. Step raise increases are separate from the annual pay raise.

Last year, the employees received a three percent hike.

Although Selectman Rocco Laugelle felt the raise was "too low," Selectman Cliff Mitman argued that simply because the fire department received a nine percent raise, it does not necessarily follow that the non union employees will receive the same increase. The fire department's salary was based on a comparison of what other towns pay their firefighters, he said. "But it doesn't follow that because the Fire Department got nine percent then the rest of the town has to get 27 percent (increase) over three years," he said, suggesting that Cohasset's hourly rate and wage levels be compared to those in other towns.

The personnel board said its recommendation was based on a survey of Boston-area towns.

Selectmen suggested that a survey of salary rates in comparable towns be completed before they vote to recommend the salary hike to town meeting.

Five contested offices highlight election

town back to the people.

Incumbent James Gallagher, 44, of 183 S. Main St., has lived in Cohasset since 1959.

A tradesman, he has served for three years on the board of selectman.

Gallagher said he is running for reelection because there are a lot of different projects he is interested in such as affordable housing, pollution and landfills.

"I've always enjoyed being in town government," said Gallagher.

"I've enjoyed being a selectmen and trying to save money in different ways.

If reelected, Gallagher said he would like to "find a way for people to get along and not let personalities or personal vendettas" get in the way of good government.

In addition to being a selectman, Gallagher served on the recreation commission for five years, the cable council for about three years, and also on the garage study committee.

Diana Kornet, 45, of 29 Nichols Rd., is a part-time travel agent and also works in a children's clothing shop.

A Cohasset resident since 1976, she has served on the school committee for 10 years and is completing her second term as chairman.

"I love the school committee and have enjoyed serving, but 10 years is an appropriate amount of time," she said.

Kornet said she is running for selectmen because of her interest in such issues as appropriate waste management, planning affordable housing and the growth and direction of the town.

"I'd like to preserve what is good about Cohasset, and to help make it better," she said.

Edwin Tebbetts, 63, of 9 Jerusalem Rd. Drive, is a retired actuary who is now self employed and gives investment advice.

A resident of Cohasset for 28 years, he has been a member of the capital budget committee for nine years, five years as its chairman.

"I've been very involved in politics on the local, state and national level," said Tebbetts.

"I have been a delegate at quite a few conventions."

Tebbetts received a master's degree in public administration last spring from the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

"I'm very enthusiastic about the opportunity to serve in public office," he said.

Charles M. Kane, 54, of 265 Fairoaks Lane, has lived in Cohasset for four years.

He owns the Stars on Hingham Harbor restaurant, and Kane's Food and Spirits in Quincy.

This is Kane's first run for elective office in Cohasset.

School Committee

Incumbent Christopher Ford, 47, of 145 Border St., is a realtor and owner of Hallmark 100 Properties of Cohasset.

A resident of the town since 1956, he has served on the school committee for three years.

He said he is seeking reelection because "I'm concerned about maintaining the required economic support to maintain the quality of our schools.

"I believe there is a serious threat at this time to the financial stability of public education.

"We have to work hard to maintain it."

Ford talked about "the impact on children and the community if we buckle in to the fear of overriding Prop. 2 1/2."

"It's going to require some leadership to keep it as an issue before the people," he said.

"It's worth fighting for and sacrificing for."

H. Edward Brennock, Jr., 42, of 136 Doane St., is a lifelong Cohasset resident who is running for political office for the first time.

Employed by New England Telephone, he said he decided to become involved because he has three young children in school.

"With the constraints of Prop. 2 1/2, and the declining and then increasing enrollments, I thought I would like to get involved," he said.

Also running for the two, three year seats on the school committee is Ralph Kidder.

Health Board

Sharon Becker, 44, of 186 North Main St., describes herself as an "environmental advocate."

A resident of Cohasset since 1967, she served for about three years on the Disposal Area Study Committee.

Currently chairman of the board of health, she also serves on the Cohasset Mapping Committee and groundwater study committee.

Becker said she is running for reelection because "after three years on a board, one gains a proficiency which is useful to town, and I think I have gained that.

"I think I could be of value to the board for another three years."

Hugh A. Morgan, 44, of 24 Bow St., is a revenue collection supervisor for the MBTA.

A lifelong resident of the town, he lost to Michael Sullivan in last year's health board race.

Sewer Commission

Manuel Salvador is seeking the one, three-year term as sewer commissioner.

Former sewage treatment plant supervisor, he was suspended by the current sewer commission about a year ago.

He has filed a lawsuit against the commission for his suspension.

Salvador has extensive experience in supervising Cohasset's plant where he worked for 16 years.

Also a candidate in that race is Henry A. Rattenbury.

Running for other offices are Anthony J. Finegan and Joanne Young Nawn, for one, five-year housing authority term.

Melvin Waldfogel, Barbara Power and Lucia Woods are candidates for the three, three-year positions as library trustee.

Running unopposed are Thomas Duggan, for another three-year term as assessor, and Water Commissioner Ron Goodwin.

Other unopposed candidates are William J. Good, for a five-year term on the planning board, and Shelanne S. Durkin, for a five-year term as recreation commissioner.

Social Service appeals for funds

For the first time in its long history of service to Cohasset, the Social Service League is making a general appeal for contributions from townspeople.

This month, a letter went to each household in town, pointing out the services the League offers: delivery of Meals on Wheels, the New Friends program, flu shots, clinics and checkups, professional counseling and nursing, etc. Many of these services are performed by volunteers.

Profits of the Consignment Shop at Cushing Plaza help support the League's activities. Nevertheless, as grants and outside funding dwindle and the League's expenses rise, it seems prudent to seek support from a broader base.

Response to the League's letter has been encouraging so far.

Anybody who did not get a letter and wishes to contribute may send a check to the Social Service League, 14 Highland Ave., Cohasset, 02025.

Rep. Cerasoli on cable TV

State Rep. Robert A. Cerasoli (D-Quincy), Chairman of the House Committee on Post Audit and Oversight will discuss the Governor's tax and budget proposals as Wigmore Pierson's guest on "Cohasset Talks: Pierson to Person" next Thursday, March 2, 8-9 p.m. on cable channels 3 and 53.

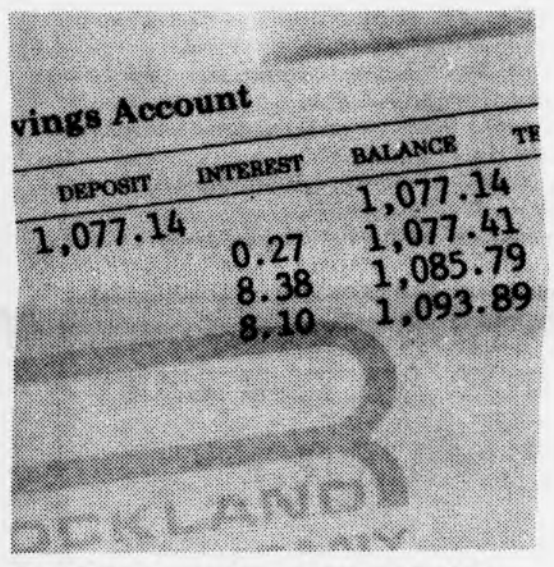
"8.75% AND A PASSBOOK, TOO. WHY WOULD YOU WANT A CD?"



One of my customers told me, "I read all the ads. And nothing even comes close to your Horizon passbook account."

The annual interest rate on any amount over $1000 is 8.75%, with an effective annual yield of 9.14%. That's competitive with a high paying CD.*

But she likes it better than a CD, because it doesn't tie up her money. Or make her worry about maturity dates. And she really likes the security of having a passbook, so she can easily check her balance whenever she wants, and watch the interest accumulate and grow.

I told her lots of people must feel the same way, because we're opening more and more Horizon accounts every day.

"I'm not surprised," she said. "On the South Shore, people know a good deal when they see one."

Residents comment on 9 percent school hike

cost for most residential programs.

But he said the local district would be responsible if the state didn't pay.

While reviewing the all district budget, Hart noted that $4,000 is allocated for out of state travel for educators to attend conferences.

The same amount was allocated last year.

Fitzsimmons said that it might be time to negotiate that item out of the budget because of the constraints of Prop. 2 1/2.

He also asked the school committee if it has thought of regionalizing some services.

Hart said that one problem would be the travel time for students to go to another location for a class.

"The student would miss three periods," he said.

"We're looking at audio and visual hook-ups which might make it more reasonable," said Hart.

Committee chairman Diana Kornet said that the committee has talked about the possibility of regionalization.

"But an important ingredient," she said.," is someone else who is also interested.

"That is the main stumbling block-finding an appropriate partner."

"No surrounding towns have expressed any interest to me," said Hart.

Fitzsimmons said that it would be beneficial to all the surrounding towns to discuss regionalization.

"I agree with Roy about looking at regionalization," said McNamara.

"It should be discussed by the school committee.

"Whether or not it would be cost efficient, I don't know."

Fitzsimmons also suggested the possibility of closing the Osgood School and dividing the students between the Deer Hill and Junior/Senior High School.

Committee member Barbara Bliss said that some money would be saved by closing a school.

"But we'd have much larger classes," she said.

High School principal Mary Ellen Gallagher said that parents have a real concern about sending sixth graders to the high school.

"There is a great deal of work done making them feel safe and welcome," she said.

Gallagher also said that classroom space would be a problem.

"We don't have a classroom here that is empty all day," she said.

She said that some rooms which had been used as classrooms are now used as computer rooms.

"We're talking about a 9 percent increase in the system, yet the town is facing fiscal restraints," said Fitzsimmons.

"If we continue coming back every year (for an override), we are going to fall farther and farther behind."

Hart said the committee is putting together a strategic five year plan which should be ready about the beginning of April.

Kornet said it will include such things as determining the best use of school facilities, reviewing the organization and structure, and developing community support for the school system.

Committee member Christopher Ford noted that no teachers will be cut.

One position was reduced at the junior/senior high school, but another was added for the sixth grade.

"The cost of the buildings is not extraordinary," added Ford.

"Perhaps we could strike some deal with neighboring schools to use specialists, say in biology, in three or four towns," he said.

Ford also said that he is not convinced that closing a school is the best route to take.

"Hull closed down one school and it hasn't helped their costs," he said.

Fitzsimmons asked what the town was getting out the school system.

"Every day, I get people who can't spell or compute," he said.

"I don't think you have too many Cohasset graduates who can't read or write," answered Ford.

"I think we're getting a lot for our money in Cohasset."

Fitzsimmons also asked what Cohasset was doing to get the best teachers.

Hart said that the system received over 200 applications for a recently advertised elementary school position.

"I think we'll always be at an advantage because of geography," he said.

"We could add 15 percent to the budget if you want the best teachers," added Ford.

"I would if we could get rid of the worst," answered Fitzsimmons.

Bliss said that the teachers hired in the last few years have been "very exciting."

Hart noted that this year, Cohasset is spending 102 percent of the state average on per pupil costs.

"Most of the schools that are higher than us, are larger," he said.

Kornet noted that Cohasset ranks at the top as far as such things as SAT scores.

"I'm proud that we spend just near the state average, but come out in the top 10," she said.

Fitzsimmons asked if the committee has a fall-back plan in case the town doesn't accept the budget.

"We're still looking that over," said Hart.

Local bank reports quarter increase

Cohasset Savings Bank reported a net income of $654,000, or $.65 per share for the year ending December 31, 1988.

This represents an increase of 12 percent over the $583,000 reported for 1987 and second highest in the Bank's history.

For the fourth quarter ending December 31, 1988, net income was $70,000, compared with $161,000 reported for the fourth quarter of 1987. The results of the 1988 fourth quarter reflect a significant increase in the provision for possible loan losses when compared to the same quarter in 1987. This increase was attributable to specific loan losses realized during the fourth quarter of 1988.

Net interest income for the full year of 1988 was $2,208,000, compared with $1,929,000 for 1987, with interest from a larger loan portfolio increasing by $933,000 while income from short and long term security investments declined.

Assets of the Bank increased from $59,225,000 as of December 31, 1987 to $62,363,000 at December 31, 1988, and stockholders' equity increased from $11,982,000 at the end of 1987 to $12,608,000 at the end of 1988, and there are 1,003,000 shares of common stock outstanding.

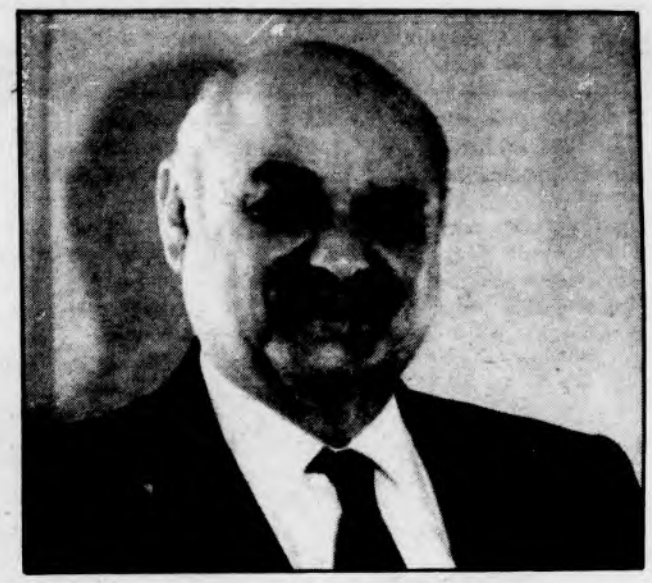
Creative solutions by Tebbetts

At a Kick-off gathering Sunday, Feb. 26 at the home of Lois and David Weltman, Selectmen candidate Ned Tebbetts stressed that creative solutions need to be found to address issues in Cohasset.

He suggested that regional approaches should be considered as a means of economy for tax dollars. These shared approaches to funding could apply to transportation, solid waste disposal, clean water, sewage and education.



Edwin 'Ned' Tebbetts

As a "Taxpayer Advocate," Tebbetts also hopes to encourage much greater communication among town boards, a look at rapidly escalating legal costs in the town and greater awareness of availability of state and federal funds for special projects, such as sewage. In addition, the candidate believes that alcohol and drug abuse have become a major problem for students and adults in Cohasset. These problems need to be acknowledged and addressed more openly.

Tebbetts believes that his background in pension planning and finance will be a major asset to the Board of Selectmen. He also stressed that his four years as Chairman of the Capital Budget Committee has given him considerable knowledge of town boards and the capital needs of the town.

Tebbetts will be speaking at several events either already scheduled or in the planning stage. He is willing to talk to any citizen about his or her concerns.

Anyone interested in attending a coffee should contact Co-Chairperson and Special Events Coordinator Pat Laugelle on King Street.

□ John S. Colocousis, son of Ann L. Colocousis of Vero Beach, Fla., formerly of Cohasset, and Kristin R. Green, daughter of Dorothy A. Flaherty of Hanover, formerly of Cohasset, were named to the Dean's List for the fall term at Babson College.

Babson College is an independent co-educational college offering graduate and undergraduate degrees in business administration. It is one of the few colleges in the country to offer a major in entrepreneurial studies. The school, founded in 1919, is accredited by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges and was the first non-university college to be accredited by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business.

□ Barbara Froio was again recognized as the top sales associate among Hallmark 100 Properties' three area offices. Froio completed $3.7 million in sales and listings in 1988 to lead the company for the second year in a row.

Barbara is with the Cohasset office of Hallmark 100 Properties and is a past director of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors.

Chris Ford, Hallmark 100's President, attributes Barbara's continued success to her professionalism and keen sense of her clients' needs which leads to a high volume of repeat business through referrals and satisfied customers.

□ Lt. James R. Brackett of Cohasset, recently completed his annual reserve two-week active duty for training aboard the USS John F. Kennedy.

□ Melissa Nothnagle, a senior at Cohasset High School, has been awarded a Gold Key in the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards Competition. Missy's honor was for a sculpture done at the Boston University Summer Visual Art Institute. Approximately 5,500 pieces of artwork were submitted in 5 regional exhibitions and 511 Gold Keys were given. As a Gold Key winner the sculpture is now on display at Boston's City Place in the State Transportation Building and is in competition for one of 200 Blue Ribbons awards on the state level.

□ Barbara Weisenfluh, Jacqueline Clark, and Helen Pratt, brokers with the Cohasset office of Hunneman & Company, Better Homes & Gardens, have been named as top producers for the year 1988.

In making the announcement, Saul B. Cohen, President of Hunneman's residential division, pointed out that this designation is earned only by those agents in the top quartile of the company.

□ A salute goes to Lt. James R. Brackett this week. Lt. Brackett recently completed annual active duty training aboard the USS John F. Kennedy.

□ The South Shore Art Center has a nifty idea to help chase away the March Blahs!! They are going to offer a mask-making class this Thursday and Friday (March 2 and 3) from 7:30-9:30 p.m. The class will be taught by Syma, a well-known Hingham artist. If you are interested and would like more info about the Masked Ball and the Syma Mask workshop, call the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548.

□ Congratulations to Paul Wilson, a senior at Cohasset High School. Paul made it to the finals of the Golden Gloves, and was on television last Saturday night for the event. Good job, Paul.

□ Happy to report that Helen Jason is recuperating nicely from the recent fall that she took. Knowing her, she'll be up and around in no time, you can't keep a good woman down!!

□ It doesn't seem possible that we have to write about another pillar of the community that has passed away, but Helen Ketchum's death certainly cannot go by without a few words. For all of the time and love that she devoted to the arts in this town, we thank her. She surely inspired more than a few budding dancers and actresses with all of her help at the High School, and the Drama Club was one of her true loves. Helen could always be spotted walking around town, and she had lots of friends along her route. Surely, Red Gate Lane won't be the same without her friendly chats. She will be missed by all!

□ Cohasset's own nutritionist, Patricia Messing, will hold a workshop on cholesterol and fat in food next Wednesday, March 1, at the Cohasset Community Center from 7:30-9 p.m. You will be able to learn what is really on that label, and what foods to stay away from. To register call 383-0088 or 383-2410.

□ We hear that Ann Curley had a grand time at her retirement party, held by her co-workers at the Cohasset Savings Bank. We are sure that you got all of the honors that you deserve, and here's to a happy and healthy retirement.

Chiropractic for Health

COMMON SPINAL PROBLEMS

On a daily basis, the doctor of chiropractic confronts three basic problems of the spine: Fixation is a restriction in the normal amount of movement that should exist between spinal bones (vertebrea). Loss of this motion interferes with the normal balance of health. Specifically, the nerves, artery, veins, and lymph vessel that exit from the spinal column between bones may become compressed. With dyskinesia, the movement is greater than normal. When at rest, the vertebra appears to be in a normal position. When the patient moves, however, tho vertebra follows an irregular movement pattern. Finally, the subluxated vertebra often involves an alignment problem. In all three situations, normal function of the spine may be returned with chiropractic adjustment.

By utilizing indicated chiropractic applications the spinal column . . . the communications network of the body . . . may resume normal function. SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC can help you achieve this and thus attain a total state of well-being. Disciplinary action if Barrow runs . . .

But there are some who disagree.

"As far as (town clerk) Frannie Marks is concerned, Dickie's name is on the ballot and it's legal. She's says he's a candidate and no one can take him off except himself," Tanna Kasperowicz, Barrow's campaign treasurer explained after Friday night's vote.

The town clerk later explained that votes by the board of selectmen about the police department regulations do not affect the functions of her office. "There was never a time I would not have given Mr. Barrow his nomination papers," she stated. "When his papers were returned to me, it stated that he has accepted the nomination. Barring any problems with certifying the signatures on that paper, the candidate has accepted nomination.

Following Tuesday's vote, Sgt. Barrow obtained nomination papers from the town clerk's office and returned them later that day with the required number of signatures. His name was officially listed as a candidate for selectman at that point.

But according to selectmen, their subsequent vote Friday night to refuse a waiver of the police regulations, nullified Sgt. Barrow's candidacy if he still refuses to take a leave of absence until the election.

"I don't know where we stand right now," a confused candidate said this past weekend following the latest vote. Sgt. Barrow had been working and was unable to attend the Friday night emergency meeting.

Barrow said he would consult with several residents who have offered to help with a campaign for his candidacy. One option, according to Kasperowicz, is to solicit donations so that Barrow can afford to take a leave from his job during the weeks remaining before the April 8 election.

Last week prior to Tuesday's vote to waive the department regulations, Barrow said he would consider running on a sticker campaign. He would not be an official candidate, but voters would be given stickers to be placed on the ballot, signifying their support for Barrow. The police sergeant explained it would be similar to a write-in candidacy.

Selectman Cliff Mitman led off Friday's emergency meeting by calling the previous vote "the most deceptive, scheming thing that went on with this board since I've been on it." He immediately suggested that no exceptions or waivers be made to the police department rules, thereby forcing Barrow to take a leave if he decides to campaign.

Selectman Gallagher resented Mitman's accusations, saying he had no part "of what you accuse me of."

"Never before in all my years on town boards have I ever seen a board do something of this nature. I can't believe you voted for this," stated Selectman Rocco Laugelle, who was also absent from the Tuesday night vote. "I don't care if the Good Lord brought it up - I can't believe you voted for it."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said her concern was that another week would go by before selectmen could vote on the matter, and the time for submitting candidate nomination papers would be expired.

Gallagher argued that he never tried to deceive the board, but voted for the waiver of the department regulations as he has consistently.

Advisory committee member Arne Gjestby asked selectmen if "it is wise to make more legal problems." He noted that their decision to refuse a waiver of the rules has cost the town about $1,500 in legal expenses "to keep one person off the ballot."

Two weeks ago, Sgt. Barrow sought an injunction against the town in an effort to become a candidate. He failed to receive that court ruling.

In the meantime, selectmen have requested town counsel's opinion on the matter on several occasions.

Selectman Mitman answered that selectmen were not the ones creating the legal problem, and at no time have they ever refused Barrow the right to become a candidate. "He (Barrow) can stay on the ballot by taking a leave of absence," Mitman added.

The meeting concluded on a sour note as Selectman Gallagher recalled a high school civics class in which he learned the importance of local government. He likened the vote Friday night to an act of Communism, which deprived a resident the right to run for public office. "You're picking and choosing who can run for public office," he stated. "And if he (Barrow) has enough gumption to run, it's not for the good of the (police) department, but for the good of the town."

Selectmen Pratt and Mitman supported their decision. "It has nothing to do with Dickie. It seems to me that a police officer (as a selectman) is in the position to provide coersion. I don't care if Dickie runs - that's not the issue. Our counsel has said the rules are there and they are enforceable," Selectman Mitman stated.

Sohier Street resident Robert Davenport noted that Selectman Laugelle had voted Friday night, although he has abstained in the past from all matters involving the police department. His son, Paul, is a member of the department.

"That's a privilege I have," Laugelle answered.

"This wouldn't have cost the taxpayers a cent if you had voted the first time," Selectman Gallagher noted.

Where's coercion?

It's a confusing situation, to say the least. Last week, a majority of two selectmen decided to allow Sgt. Richard Barrow to run for selectman without having to take a leave of absence from his job in the police department.

By Friday evening, a new majority of three selectmen voted not to waive the police department regulations, requiring Sgt. Barrow to take a leave of absence in order to remain on the April 8 election ballot.

In between the two votes, a lot of angry words have been spoken on both sides.

At Friday night's meeting, Selectman Cliff Mitman said the previous vote taken on Tuesday was "sneaky and deceptive." He expressed great anger at the way the vote was undertaken, with the knowledge that two selectmen were absent from the meeting, one of whom would be a pivotal "swing" vote in the matter. If Mitman had attended Tuesday's session, he would have voted against waiving the regulations, as he has consistantly. The issue would not have passed.

We believe it was not a sneaky nor a deceptive vote by the two selectmen who voted Tuesday night to waive the police regulations. Selectmen were asked by a resident at that meeting if they would reconsider their previous vote barring Sgt. Barrow from the race unless he took a leave. Selectman Martha Gjesteby, who has continously supported that argument, motioned to allow the police sergeant into the race. Selectman James Gallagher, who initially thought it would be best to hear first from the vacationing town counsel, later joined her in the vote to waive the regulations.

They were not part of any conspiracy to deceive the board of selectmen, and that should be made clear.

Selectman Mitman reiterated his objections to having a police officer "become his own boss." It would be a similar case if a school teacher ran for the school board, or a firefighter ran for selectman - situations Selectman Mitman strongly opposes.

Such practices, he believes, could lead to a possibility of coercion.

That conceivably could be a danger, but in a small town like Cohasset, the probability of coercion is great for many elected officials. There have been selectmen who are members of Rotary or the American Legion, voting on leases for the organizations, or permits for a liquor license or use of town property. There are town officials who are members of a local church or the community center, who vote on permits and licenses. School board members are parents of children in the public school system - could they be accused of favoring one school over another, one classroom over the next?

In a small community like Cohasset, neighbors may want to influence a town official's decision on whether a certain school should be closed, or the whether the commercial landfill in town should be shutdown. Perhaps they initiate the conversation by saying, "you do me this favor, and I'll do you another."

We're not saying this happens, and we certainly do not accuse anyone, but it is conceivable. Is a policeman more likely to be coerced than a local realtor or a local developer or a local attorney? Who would be excluded?

It's a difficult problem in a small town where neighbors know neighbors, and where some town officials are related to just about half the population, including other department heads, board members and town employees.

Sgt. Barrow said, if elected, he would abstain from all votes pertaining to the police department. It would be up to the townspeople to hold him to that pledge. Coercion involving a local police officer would be more easily detected than if it occurred elsewhere.

Coercion is a problem that must be dealt with, but it is certainly not a condition confined to the occupation of police officer.

Historical Society spring events

The Cohasset Historical Society recently announced an active schedule of events for the coming months.

These will be open to the public, and will cover a diversity of subjects ranging from Cohasset's unique history to antique crafts as practiced in centuries now past. Scheduled for March is the first of the Society's "Learning Nights" at Caleb Lothrop House.

These events will explore the fascinating arts and crafts of bygone days, and are designed to be both interesting and instructive.

The Society's annual spring dinner meeting will be held in April, with its feature subject titled "The Road to Jerusalem." Cohasset's Jerusalem Road, an ancient highway dating from the town's earliest years, became the 19th century site of summer "cottages" built and owned by Bostonians of wealth who wished to escape the heat and discomfort of the city's summer months. A fascinating story spanning two and a half centuries of the town's history, "The Road to Jerusalem" will be produced by the Society using resources from its own archives.

In May, the Society's Costumes Committee will present another in its series of Lothrop House costumes exhibits, open to all having an interest in the fabulous gowns and accessories of Cohasset's gala 19th century. June, traditional opening time for the Society's two summer museums at Cohasset Center, will see a special presentation relating to the world-renowned Carillon of St. Stephen's.

A special concert of carillon music will be a feature of Opening Day at the Society's Capt. John Wilson Historical House and Maritime Museum, and a program related to the famous bells in St. Stephen's tower will be offered.

Summer months are the ideal time to view Cohasset at its best, and the Historical Society is planning historical walking tours of two of the town's most scenic — and most historic — areas, the Common and the Harbor, for July. August will see a special event, in conjunction with the Bicentennial of American Lighthouses being celebrated nationwide this year.

"Minot's Light Revisited II" will feature a close-up look at the world-famous offshore lighthouse now reassembled and appearing the same as it has for the last 129 years. Last summer's highly successful boat tour to Minot's saw the granite tower with its entire top section removed for restoration work. This summer will see the work as completed with the 114 foot granite structure again ready for service.

In September, the Society's busy Costumes Committee will hold another Lothrop House exhibit featuring antique gowns and costumes from its extensive collection. These special events for the coming months are designed to give a fascinating view of various aspects of the history of this unique old New England town. Further information will be forthcoming as the season progresses.

Singers present children's theatre

The Unicorn Singers are hard at work on a special production to celebrate the tenth anniversary of their founding.

Director Margo Euler, with well-known stage director Donald Capen (the team that directed "Evita" for Hingham Civic Music Theatre in 1987 and "Chicago" for That New Theatre last September), are shaping two pieces for chorus, actors, dancers and orchestra that are especially suitable for the whole family (school-aged children). Two charming fairy tales with fantastical beasts, a count and countess, a mysterious Man in the Castle and a singing dragon who writes poetry are the lead parts in Menotti's "The Unicorn, the Gorgon and the Manticore" and Rutter's "The Reluctant Dragon" which will be performed with full staging by the 24 Unicorn Singers, 12 children, 4 dancers and an 8-piece orchestra on Saturday and Sunday March 11 and 12 at Norwell's Cushing Center.

Children who attend with their parents will especially enjoy the antics of Ed Bartholomew of Hingham as the "Reluctant Dragon" who doesn't want to fight St. George (Rich Jensen of Canton), but when coached by the shepherd youth (Kate deLima of Cohasset) in a 50's style rock 'n 'roll number, manages a thrilling duel with a surprising outcome!

A favorite with the experienced choral ensemble The Unicorn Singers is Menotti's "The Unicorn, the Gorgon and the Manticore," with which the group made its debut (and took its name!) in 1979. The piece is a series of 12 madrigals, sung a cappella and interspersed with orchestral interludes danced by 12 of the singers and the four professional dancers as the three beasts and the Man in the Castle. Witty dialogue between the scheming Countess and her husband (played with great flair by Jeanne Scammell of Norwell and Norman Shaw of Weymouth); the charming contribution of 12 third-grade dancers from Nantasket's Children's Dance Center (Caryl Brayton Toole, director); and the storybook set by Scott Ketcham of Cohasset, transporting the audience to the "pink promenade by the sea" outside the Man's Castle will enrich the charming story told through song and dance.

Children attending the program (suitable for ages 6 and up) might wish to bring crayons; while waiting for the 1¼ hour show to start they will enjoy coloring in a special "Castle Coloring Book" being created by artist Kate Dickerson of Hingham for the occasion, with scenes from the production. The booklet will be sold for a modest donation at the door.

"The Unicorn Meets the Dragon" will be performed Saturday, March 11 at 4:30 and 8 p.m. and Sunday, March 12 at 4:30 p.m. Tickets ($9 adults, $6 children) are available at Nobles Camera Shop (Hingham and Cohasset) and Dwyer's Cleaning Spot (Norwell) or by calling 749-0162.

The Cushing Center is an intimate theatre in Norwell on Rte. 123 with limited seating; advanced ticket purchase is strongly suggested.

U.S. Rep. Studds states his support for pay raise

By Gerry Studds

(Gerry Studds is US representative of the 10th Congressional District)

Long before Abner Doubleday invented baseball, Americans had developed a national pastime—ridiculing elected officials in general, and the U.S. Congress in particular. From the tract writers of the 18th century, to the cartoonists of the 19th century, to Will Rogers in our own era, the sport of hunting, exposing and satirizing pomposity, hypocrisy and venality has been practiced with relish.

"Whenever I run out of jokes," Rogers is reported to have said, "I just pick up the paper and read what the Congress of the United States has done, and folks die laughing."

For its part, the congress often seems unaccountably eager to maintain its role as the easiest of targets, the "sittingest" of ducks. This past month, with plenty of assistance from headline writers, editorial writers, radio talk show hosts, and a self-anointed spokesman for the "public interest," the Congress did it again—falling head first into a gaping hole of its own making.

Elected officials sometimes appear to be the only living species of mammal without vertebrae. No subject makes their backbone disintegrate more rapidly than that of their own pay. Fearful of public anger, they invariably conduct themselves in a manner which elicits and exacerbates that anger.

By the time the House and Senate voted to disapprove the pay raises recommended by the President's Commission, a Congress which comprise for the most part decent hardworking men and women had allowed itself once again to become an object of public scorn and fury—widely portrayed and perceived as a collection of lazy, greedy, gutless and porcine creatures—hiding behind a protective fence of their own ingenious design, grunting and snorting with both front feet in the public trough.

Unfortunately, a difficult, complex and important public policy question—how to periodically adjust the salaries of our top federal officials—was reduced by much of our media and by some who had access to that media, particularly Ralph Nader, to a hopelessly simplistic caricature of itself.

For the most part, members of Congress did very little to use their own access to the media to clarify, to flesh out and to put in some semblance of perspective the question which so suddenly and so predictably seized the attention of the country.

Instead, most of them concluded that such a course was far too "risky." Better, they decided, to beat their breasts and express outrage and contempt for their own institution and the laws of its making than to look an angry public in the eye and say, "There's more to this than you think. The public interest may not be as easily discerned as some would have us believe. I understand your anger, but pause for a moment with me, and together let's examine the question."

By rejecting this course, by choosing the easiest, "safest" path, members may ironically have confirmed and validated the very public contempt from which they cowered and the outrage to which they pandered.

When the roll was called on Tuesday, very few Members of Congress voted in a manner consistent with what they believed to be in the public interest. In the long run, that kind of behavior, while understandable, is the bedrock source of public cynicism.

And now, if I may, a few words about the issue itself. Let me list those key elements which I believe were missing from the picture presented to the general public and which justified my vote against a resolution to scuttle the pay raise package.

First, it was President Reagan, with the support of President Bush, who recommended to the Congress the increased levels of pay.

Second, some 80 percent of the federal officials to whom the top rate of pay would have applied are not members of Congress at all, but rather federal judges, the most senior managers of the executive departments of government and research doctors at the National Institutes of Health and scientists at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Third, the fact that the proposed pay levels were to take effect without a vote of the Congress has both historical and logical justification. Historically, whenever Congress voted on its own pay, an outraged public and media denounced it for indulging in a flagrant conflict of interest. And so the idea of an "independent" commission was conceived as a "reform" in response to outcry. It would make recommendations to the President who would accept (or lower) them and forward them to the Congress.

Logically, it seems to me, voting on one's own pay constitutes the most self-evident conflict of interest. Rule VIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives reads: "Every Member shall be present within the Hall of the House during its sitting...and shall vote on each question put, unless he has a direct personal or pecuniary interest in the event of such question." Perhaps someone can tell me how a member can vote on his or her salary without violating this rule.

Fourth, many people said to me during our recent open meetings at home and by mail, "Why can't you people simply allow yourselves the same modest, annual cost of living adjustment that everyone else in the federal government gets?" A good question—in fact, the question. Almost no one seemed to know, and many found it difficult to believe, that had we done just that for the past 20 years, the salaries in question would now be higher than those recommended by President Reagan.

The explanation? Lack of vertebrae. Because this subject is perceived to invariably arouse public emotion, the Congress voted to exempt itself (and all the other to judicial and executive branch officials) from the modest, annual cost of living adjustment in no fewer than eight of the past 13 years.

That is what I meant when I said that the hole into which the Congress fell was of its own making. Of course a 50 percent increase appears indefensible on the face of it. Of course people will be staggered by an increase that is, in and of itself, more than the average family sees in a year. And of course the situations could have been avoided by the minimal amount of courage required for members of Congress to treat themselves each year as everyone else in the federal government, civilian and military, is treated.

Fifth, it is not true that Ralph Nader, in his bitter opposition to the proposed raises, was the only voice speaking "in the public interest." Common Cause supported and defended them just as strongly — although a good deal more civilly.

Finally, no one argues that the salaries of those at the highest levels of public service ought to match those that can be earned by the most talented people in private life. But surely there ought to be a reasonable differential between the two. And that proportional difference ought to be maintained over time, not allowed to widen to such a point that even the most public-spirited of lawyers will not contemplate a lifetime of service in the federal judiciary, and the best of doctors and scientists will no longer lead the fight against cancer and AIDS at the National Institutes of Health.

This really is the vitally important public policy question on which we should have had a rational debate. Instead, the Congress—pelted with tea bags and abuse—simply fled the scene.

In conclusion, let me say that if I had a magic wand to wave in these matters, in addition to implementing the President's recommendations with respect to the salaries in question, I would enact legislation which would:

1) require that any future pay raises exceeding an annual cost of living adjustment take effect only in the next Congress following that in which they were enacted;

2) prohibit outside earned income in the form of honoraria;

3) repeal the "grandfather" provision in existing law whereby Members of Congress elected prior to 1980 may convert unused campaign funds to personal use; and

4) perhaps most important of all, provide for a system of public financing of Congressional campaigns in an effort to make the pursuit of public office a genuinely competitive undertaking.

This will be my agenda in the coming Congress.

Why Congress should not be granted this pay raise

By Robert J. Flavell

(Robert J. Flavell is executive editor of Mariner Newspapers)

Congressman Gerry Studds really took the heat on the 50 percent congressional payraise, so much so that he devoted the bulk of his taxpayer-financed "Weekly Report to the People" to self-justifying his support for the raise.

In a 1,300-word essay on the subject, Studds alternately feels hurt at the scorn heaped upon public officials, and outraged that his colleagues didn't have the gumption to defy public opinion and pass the payraise.

And what are the "key elements" of his support for the raise?

- First of all, it was recommended by President Reagan with the support of President Bush;
- Second, some 80 percent of the federal officials who would get the raise are not members of congress, but federal appointees;
- Third, the fact that the raise was to take effect without a vote of Congress has "historical and logical justification" -- historical because the public has been outraged whenever Congress gives itself a raise, and logical because voting on one's own pay is an obvious conflict of interest and violates the House Rules;
- Fourth, the raise is justified because Congress is too frightened to simply tie its pay to the small annual cost-of-living raises that most federal employees get;
- Fifth, Common Cause supported the raise, and did so "a good deal more civilly" than Ralph Nader opposed it; and
- Finally, while public officials should not be paid as much as "talented people in private life," there ought to be a "reasonable differential" between the two pay scales, and that difference should be maintained "not allowed to widen to such a point that even the most public-spirited of lawyers will not contemplate a lifetime of service in the federal judiciary... ."

We think the talented people in Studds' office could have done better than this whining rationalization.

To the fact that Reagan and Bush supported the raise, we say: So what? Presidents always support legislative pay hikes, if they know what's good for them and their programs.

To the fact that federal appointees would get 50 percent raises, too, we say: All the more reason not to vote for it. To justify a management raise by pointing to poor working stiffs is a shallow, hypocritical ploy usually reserved for the Massachusetts Legislature.

To the fact that the public is outraged whenever Congress jacks up its pay, we say: Naturally. Congress has been horsing around with acid rain and solid waste and campaign reform and a panoply of other issues for years. Why not accomplish something, and then ask for a raise, based on merit?

To the suggestion that the attempt to sneak the raise through was proper because a public vote would have been a conflict of interest, we say: Get thee to an ethics course.

To the cry that Congress is too scared of public opinion to link its pay to ordinary cost-of-living raises, we say: Tough. Either do it the right way, or don't get a raise at all.

To the assertion that Common Cause was more "civil" than Ralph Nader, we say: So what? Debate of public issues is supposed to be robust. Besides, the taxpayers don't pay the salaries at Common Cause or Nader's office.

To the suggestion that the pay of elected officials ought to be linked somehow to pay in the private sector, we say: Nonsense. Should we link Bush's salary to Lee Iacocca's? Hardly. Most people think congressional pay is pretty good now, especially when you include all the perks and privileges. And we don't notice any shortage of applicants for federal judgeships. To paraphrase Harry Truman, if you don't like the pay, get a private sector job.

The good congressman finally reaches the point of his treatise: Congressional compensation should be permanently legislated, taking into account outside income derived from speech fees, the "grandfather" provision which allows congressmen to convert campaign funds to personal use, and so forth. Studds would also ban Congress from raising its own pay by making raises effective only after the next election, and establish a system of public financing for congressional political campaigns. He plans to file legislation to accomplish these goals.

Why didn't he just say so?

Future Writers of Second Grade

Mrs. DiBenedetto's second grade students wrote the following stories about themselves. They all did a great job!

Mark Caristi: When I was little I fell down the stairs because I just woke up and I was going to get breakfast. I fell down the stairs because I could barely see, because when you're little when you're born you can't fully see but as you get older you start to see better.

Michael Murray: One time I got lost and I started to cry. Some one said why are you crying? I can't find my Mom. I will help you find her. Yay! Thank you very much I'd like that a lot. While we looked for my Mom I looked at the toys. I said I wish I had some money.

Keri Dinsmore: I liked the time I got to take care of Sangrid. It was very fun. I love her very much. But she is dead now. I still love her very much. I remember when I put on her leash. I'd give her a bone than take her for a walk. I think she liked going for a walk.

Alexandra D'Urso: Once I went to see the Mayflower in Plymouth Plantation with Caroline. We went in all of the rooms. We saw how all of the Pilgrims set-sail on the ocean for 100 years. While we were there, a man was lowering one of the flags. I had a wonderful time there.

John Young: Once I got lost in the woods. I was scared to run because I was afraid that I would run the wrong way. I finally got out of the woods. Then I went straight home.

Greg Connolly: Once when I was little I went down stairs and my Mom was not there. And she was not upstairs. I wondered where she could be. Suddenly I remembered she was in the cellar.

Hunt Pile: I went to Florida to see a space ship go up. The earth shaked and I lost my tooth. It was bright. I had to cover my eyes.

Kara Petrocelly: When I first lost a tooth I was so excited. When I went to bed I was thinking what the tooth fairy would bring me. Then I went to sleep. I was dreaming. Then I woke up and I looked under my pillow and there was a dollar.

Nicole Reid: When I turned seven I got a stuffed dog. I named him Mutzy. Once my brother dropped Mutzy in a pool. I started to cry. I'm eight now, so Mutzy is one year old.

Caroline DeRosa: On May 30 my mother is getting married. I am going to be a flower girl. I am very happy. The boy she is getting married to is very nice. He gave me a bean bag chair.

Ronnie Nicynski: I was in a play. I was Junior. I felt great. My mom cried. My Dad said I was great. I was the best. It was a cinch. It was a favorite play. I loved it. If I cried, I would ruin the whole play.

Carl Dean: When I was little I liked to jump on the jolly jumper. I liked to crawl around the house. And my best time of all was when I got to go to Battleship Cove when I was 7. Then I went to go see the Constitution. I also got a four F.T. crystal. I don't know what's going to happen in my life.

Karyn Gray: Once there was a blackout. I was very scared because I thought that it would last forever but it didn't but it lasted for two days. The next day I was brushing my teeth by candle light because it was a blackout again.

Courtney Kissane: When I was little, I had a dog. Her name was Smatha. Now she lives on a farm because she gave me fleas. She had to sleep in the garage because she went to the bathroom on my bed.

Raheem Shepard: One day I went to Edaville Railroad, and I went to the toy store in Edaville Railroad and went on a train. And it was fun.

Justin Maitland: When I was two I got lost in Sears. I hate my sister because she broke my toy radio. I fell off my motor boat when I was five. Once, I sprained my ankle outside in my backyard.

Joshlyn Carruth: When I was little I used to take soap and put it all over the walls. Then when my Mom woke up she said to me what happened on the walls and I said I'm sorry, Mom. I did it and she said that's O.K. and she put me back to sleep. Then when I woke up I had a nice time.

What An Arm!

Once there was a boy named Phil. He had a family of nine. Phil's family was very poor. They lived in a cottage just about one mile from the baseball field. Phil had a twin sister named Nancy. Since Phil and Nancy were so close in age they always played games together. One day in March, Phil went to baseball tryouts. Nancy came along to cheer him on. Phil saw some mean kids from school that were also trying out. After an hour passed they announced the kids that made it. Phil made it, but so did the bullies. When Phil got home he told everyone, and they congratulated him.

That next Saturday Phil's team had to play the team of the bullies. That next Saturday Phil and Nancy walked to the ball park. It was the ninth inning, two outs, full count, the bases were loaded, with a tie score. Phil's coach called time out and brought Phil in to pitch. Phil threw a couple of warm up pitches. Then he was ready. He did the wind up and threw will all his might. It went over the backboard and broke a car window. All of the bullies started to laugh, so Phil left. On his way home he stopped by a creek and picked up a rock. Phil pretended that he was back in the game again. He did the wind up and he threw with all his might; the stone came skipping back. Maybe baseball isn't my sport.

The Departure of Friends

She knew it was time to send them back. The caterpillars softly wiggled in her hand, spelling out "good-bye." Sarah thought how can I let them go we've been together for almost a year now. Tears filled her eyes as she thought of the day she found them. She remembered being out in the woods with Jessica looking for butterflies when she stumbled across them. How they had spelled out "hello" in her hand. But how could they want to go. She had fed them, given them attention, even walked with them. She was hurt and didn't understand. Her loyal pets, her best friends were leaving her. Suddenly to Sarah's surprise they started wiggling in her hand again this time spelling out "we must go." She started to cry again and shouted, "why, why must you leave me!" Again she was surprised when the caterpillars started wiggling in her hand. This time simply spelling out, "mating." Now she understood they were going to mate. "Will you be back?" she asked. They pleased her by wiggling again to say "we'll try." "That's good enough for me," she exclaimed happily. She brought them to the brook near which she had found them. It was a sad moment of departure but they all lived through it.

The Potato Plan

Once upon a time in a land called Idaho there lived a lot of potatoes. The one I'm going to tell you about is Henry.

He and a lot of other potatoes didn't want to become chips, so they made plans to get out of the factory and then out of town. When their plan was finished they all ran out. Every potato seemed to go a different way.

Henry decided to go to New York, where he knew he wouldn't become a chip. When he almost got hit by a car, he began to think he didn't like the city so much. So he walked and walked for days trying to find a nice town. Up ahead he saw a beautiful town.

There he lived in a beautiful land of flowers, trees, and birds. He was so caught up in flowers, he forgot about friends. Until one day he noticed he was lonely. He went to bed still thinking about friends.

That night he heard a noise that scared him. He thought it was the chip guys coming back to get him. So he hid in the bushes and listened. All of a sudden someone grabbed him. He turned around quickly to find all of his friends and a beautiful girl named Lisa. There they all lived together away from factories. He wasn't lonely since he was married to Lisa and every Friday night they'd eat fish fries and tomato salad.

Resident wins teaching award

Cohasset resident Mary Wenmark, a special needs reading teacher at the Jeremiah E. Burke High School in Dorchester was one of 15 teachers in the Boston Public Schools selected by the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce and the Citywide Education Coalition for the "Golden Apple" award for outstanding teaching.

According to the "Golden Apple" program, "For the last six years, Mrs. Wenmark has been an exemplary master teacher, offering sensitivity and caring to her special needs students. Her energy and commitment have contributed to the positive atmosphere that has transformed Burke into one of the city's more progressive high schools. Always a willing volunteer, she has chaired the School Site Council for two years and has been largely responsible for developing and finding funding for an attendance and achievement program providing rewards for student improvement. A student said of her work with the Student Leadership program, "Mrs. Wenmark has helped me learn to take pride in myself and my ideals."

Obituaries

Helen S. Ketcham

Helen S. (Schmid) Ketcham, an author and active participant in dramatic presentations in Cohasset and the South Shore, died of cancer Feb. 26 at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

In 1970, as part of the Cohasset's 200th birthday celebration, Mrs. Ketcham, at the request of the Bicentennial Committee, wrote and directed an original play, "Town Meeting 1770," depicting Cohasset's first Town Meeting. In a 1970 note to Mrs. Ketcham, Bicentennial Committee Chairman and current Selectman Burt Pratt noted: "You have done a masterful job of creating this piece with very little factual information on which to build, and yet you have managed to convey a ring of authenticity. Yours is a rare talent, and I envy you."

Mrs. Ketcham's creative writing talents produced the historical novel, "Mistress of Wynds," which was published by Dell Publishing in 1981 under the pen name Meg Haviland. At the time of her death, she had just completed the manuscript of a children's book with iullustrations by her son Scott.

On the stage, Mrs. Ketcham applied her considerable skills as a director, actress and dramatist. For the Cohasset Dramatic Club she directed a number of shows including "Angel Street," "Death of a Salesman," and "Uncle Harry." Major acting roles for the Dramatic Club included Joan in "Joan of Lorraine," Miss. Prism in "The Importance of Being Earnest," Constance in "Autumn Garden," and Joan in "Chamber Music."

For the Cohasset Community Center, Mrs. Ketcham directed several benefit shows, "Guys and Dolls" and "The Pajama Game," which played to packed houses at the High School. In 1977, the Cohasset Boosters asked her to write and direct an original musical show to raise funds. The result was the fun-filled spoof, "Wagons Ho!," of a group of caravanners from Kansas visiting New York City for the first time.

Mrs. Ketcham's many interests included: a love of the land, particularly the countryside of the Berkshires; walking in Wheelwright Park; listening to music ranging from Brahms to rock; and helping and protecting animals of all shapes and sizes.

As a long time member of the Cohasset Arts Council, Mrs. Ketcham championed awards to the individual artist rather than those where the participation was passive.

Mrs. Ketcham was a graduate of Wellesley College and the Bown Adams Dramatic School in New York City. Immediately following graduation from the later, she performed in summer stock shows in the Catskills and New Jersey.

The date and time of a memorial service will be announced later.

It is requested that donations in memory of Helen Ketcham be made to one of the following: Standish Humane Society, Box 824, Scituate, MA 02066; or The American Cancer Society, 247 Commonwealth Ave., Boston, MA.

Sheleaves her husband, Burk, of Cohasset; two sons, Scott of Cohasset and Christopher of Mosinee, Wisconsin; a sister, Kay Maxon of Montville, New Jersey, and a brother, Jack Schmid of Montclair, New Jersey.

Eric G. Pearson

A funeral was held at Emmaus Moravian Church on St. John, U.S. Virgin Islands, for Eric G. Pearson, 60, of St. John, formerly of Cohasset, who died of a heart attack at his home Feb. 9.

Mr. Pearson was former owner of Highway Motor Sales on Route 3A in Cohasset.

He sold the firm two and a half years ago after 30 years in the business.

Mr. Pearson moved to St. John where he had built a home over several years.

A resident of Cohasset for 35 years, he was a former chairman of the Republican Town Committee.

For many years, he played violin with the Hingham Civic Orchestra.

An enthusiastic boater, he also enjoyed tinkering and repairing things in the shop at his home.

Mr. Pearson was a past president of AFS and of the Rotary Club in Cohasset.

Past chairman of the Wompatuck State Park Advisory Board, he was active in Boy Scouts and was a member of the Konohassett Lodge, Pentalpha Chapter, a Knight Templar, a member of the Aleppo Temple, and the South Shore Shriner's Club.

Mr. Pearson was also a member of the Stenkil Lodge, Independent of Vikings, and the Lions on St. John.

He leaves his wife, Evelyn Pearson; a son, Eric Pearson Jr.; two daughters, Margit L. Pearson and Carla Marshall; and five grandchildren.

Donations in his memory may be made to the Shriner's Burn Institute, 51 Blossom St., Boston, 02100.

Division tournament action

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

At the Division Two State Wrestling Championships held at Wayland High School last weekend, Paul Froio became the first Cohasset wrestler ever to reach the state finals. Unfortunately, Froio was defeated by Norwell's Ron Depasa in the 160-pound title match.

Depasa, who last week beat Froio in the South Sectional championship final, won it with a fall in the third period. Coincidentally, the Norwell senior had a feeling he would face Froio again in the finals.

"I know how good he (Froio) is because I had never beaten him until the sectionals. We tied once this season, but he had beaten me in the finals of the Marshfield tournament for two years. This weight class belonged to the South Shore," Depasa said.

In his semi-final match, Froio faced Tewksbury's defending champion Tom Alyward, who proved to be no contest for the stronger Skipper, 5-3. Froio was also a force in his two matches prior to the semi-finals, beating Jim Bisal of Gardner, 15-0, and Bob Lally of Wakefield, 17-4.

Coach Torin Sweeney nervously anticipates the outcome of a recent team match.

Norwell coach Gary Ross assessed the Depsas-Froio matchup.

"Ron was 18-0-1 this year and I think Paul was 20-0-1 before last weekend," Ross said. "There is no question these are the two best 160's in the state and they are very much alike."

In the end, it was a change of tactics that decided the only state final between two athletes from the south section. The first period was scoreless and the second period with Depasa getting a single point for an escape.

The top three finishers of each weight class qualify for the New England Tournament (held in Connecticut) March 3.

Cohasset's Jim Donohue also excelled at the state championships, finishing fifth at the 152-pound weight class.

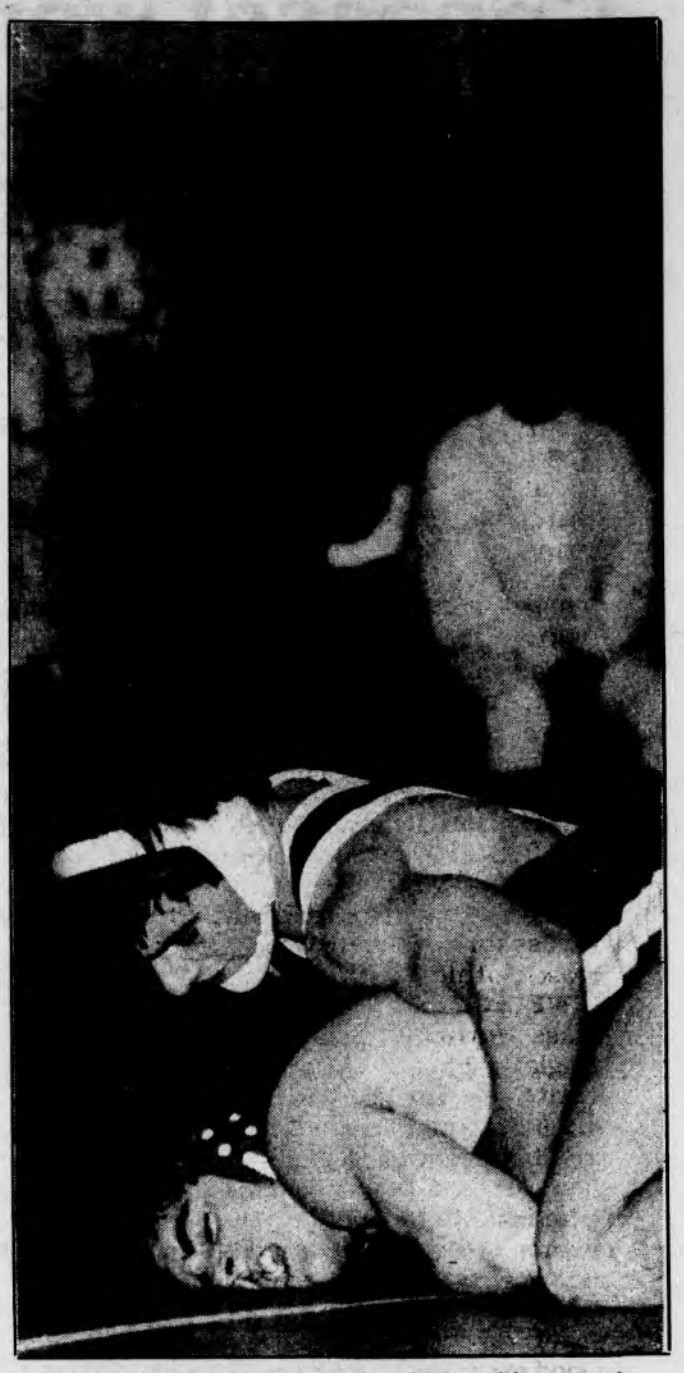
Other Cohasset wrestlers who were invited to the state meet but did not place were Gregg Nourie (he was the 103-pound champion in the South Sectionals); John Rhodes (fourth in the sectionals at 119); Tim Pierotti (fifth in the sectionals at 125); Dennis Mulligan (fourth in the sectionals at 135); and Chris Froio, Paul's twin brother (second in the sectionals at 171.)

"It was a fantastic year for Cohasset," said Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney, whose club finished the season at 10-5-1. "Over half of our club (seven out of 13) made it to the states. The seniors had an excellent campaign as well as the underclassmen. If you can bring half of your team to a tournament, you are definitely a strong team."

Girls' basketball

There will be a new Division Three Girls' State Basketball champion this year. Moreover, that champion will not come from Cohasset.

As a result of a season-ending loss to Hingham, 69-50, in the consolation game of the Hall-of-Fame Classic (played at Massasoit Community College-Brockton), the Lady Skippers were eliminated from any post-season action and, therefore, will not defend its 1988 state crown.



Ironically, Hingham earned a spot in the EMass tournament with the victory.

Cohasset hung tough after the first quarter, trailing by two points, 11-9. Then, Hingham started to hit their outside shots, outscoring Cohasset, 24-9, in the second to take a 35-18 lead into the locker room.

The Skippers managed to cut the deficit down to 10 points, 46-36, but it was the closest Cohasset would climb within as Hingham began to utilize their offensive weapons again in the fourth. Hingham outscored Cohasset, 23-14, in the fourth, to seal the tournament berth.

Skip Mortimer, coach of Hingham and chairman of the Hall-of-Fame tournament committee, had three girls in double figures. Kristine White had 21 points, Tricia Aylward 20 and Mandy Chisolm 16. Cohasset was paced by Sara Bishop's 18.

Kristin Ellinger, who missed the opener versus Bridgewater-Raynham due to a sprained ankle, added eight points, while Nancy Riley had 11.

Boys' Basketball

Cohasset took a 29-25 lead entering into the final quarter, but Brendan Kenney and David Richardson combined for 13 fourth-quarter points to help Hopkinton defeat Cohasset, 40-38, in the opening-round game of the Millis Tournament Feb. 22.

After Hopkinton surged ahead in the final quarter, Cohasset's Jeff Bryant (13 points) hit a three-pointer with 1:30 remaining to pull the Skippers within two points. However, Bryant's last-second, three-point attempt failed.

Linc Marsac scored a team-high 15 points for Cohasset.

Ashland will play Hopkinton in the title game. Ashland defeated host Millis, 62-54, to advance to the finals.

Chris Froio was a tough match against Scituate's Mike Leary during a recent wrestling meet at SHS.

One less liquor license, but there's a rush for it

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

There is one less liquor license in Cohasset this week, but that hasn't stopped a steady stream of businessmen who still want it.

Selectmen voted Monday night to revoke an all-alcoholic liquor license at the Central Market which is currently owned by James Finucane of Marshfield.

Finucane advised the board that moments before the meeting began, Cohasset businessman Donald Staszko signed an agreement to purchase the Cohasset Village business.

And to further confuse the matter, minutes after selectmen revoked the license, James Hoban, owner of Cohasset Meat and Produce, asked selectmen to give the license to him. Although advised by town counsel that "there's nothing there" to give, the majority of selectmen decided to "leave the door open" and voted to take Hoban's request under advisement.

Local businessman Robert Davenport later asked to have a license application hearing scheduled next week for his request to obtain the license for a business at 132 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. After renewed discussion with town counsel, selectmen agreed there is no license to grant.

Next week they will make a final determination on Hoban's request for the non-existent license.

The discussion about this liquor license began several months ago when Finucane signed a purchase agreement with James McManus of Scituate. Although the store was closed, selectmen decided last summer to transfer the license to the perspective new owner.

The deal was not consummated and the ABCC is expected to reject the license transfer approval this week.

For the past several weeks, selectmen have been wrestling with the status of that license. They were considering three options: to suspend the license, to revoke it, or to transfer the license to another town business. Officials from Cohasset Savings Bank, owners of the building in which Central Market is located, requested by telephone several weeks ago that selectmen delay a decision on the license until a deal to sell the property is finalized.

Hoban appeared before selectmen two weeks ago, requesting the transfer of the package store license to his store at Cushing Plaza.

Finucane, who owns the Central Market business, told selectmen Monday night that Staszko signed a contract to buy the store with the license. He asked that selectmen keep the license valid. "He's buying the business primarily for the inventory and the license," Finucane stated. "Mr. Staszko will work out the best deal with Cohasset Savings to keep the license there."

But Town Counsel Richard Henderson warned selectmen that the town has two licenses more than the statutory limit based on population. He said selectmen had the option of transferring the license, but if it was to be transferred to another location, there would have to be another hearing held on that request.

Hoban's attorney, Robert Georges, had previously argued that selectmen could vote to cancel the license, and later vote to reissue it to another applicant. But attorney Henderson disagreed with that argument, saying it could not be re-issued because the town is over the statutory license limit. With its current population, Cohasset should have two package store licenses and there are currently four (including the Central Market license), Henderson noted.

The only time the board could vote to suspend a license is for a violation of that license. He noted that selectmen have the option of extending time to make a decision on the application, while the business owner completes the sale of the business.

Speaking as a Cohasset Village businessman, Henderson noted that "something has to be done" to revitalize that business district. "The village is in serious trouble if someone doesn't move into that vacant block soon. I've never seen so many stores vacant. I don't know if a liquor license would help, but we need some kind of kick in there."

Selectman Cliff Mitman said he was concerned with the economic viability of downtown Cohasset, but he doubted whether a liquor license would "make a big difference" in determining the success of the area.

"I think whatever is economically viable down there will work its way out. We've gone this long without a license in operation. I don't think we need it - it's been shown that a license is not a necessary thing," he added.

Selectman Burt Pratt asked Staszko if he wanted to buy the entire block of buildings from Cohasset Savings Bank. "I'd have to sit down and talk with someone," Staszko answered.

Selectman James Gallagher asked the board to revoke the license - "get rid of it completely. My feeling is that the downtown can run without it. I'd like to see some other business go in there."

At this point in the meeting, heated words were exchanged between Selectman Gallagher and

Cancer fundraiser

Barbara Sullivan of Braintee and Diane Mackie of Weymouth have been named co-chairs of this year's DAFFODIL DAYS committee of the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society.

They will lead a host of South Shore volunteers who will sell daffodils to support cancer research.

The fundraising supports cancer treatment and service to patients carried in the towns of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth.

Volunteers are now contacting schools, businesses, professional offices, hospitals, nursing homes and the like, taking orders for the daffodils by the deadline of March 6. The field-grown daffodils will be flown in from the West Coast and distributed to purchasers on March 21.

A "Unique Unicorn" concert

In a re-creation of the distinctive piece with which they made their debut 10 years ago, the Unicorn Singers, directed by Margo Euler, will present Menotti's "The Unicorn," "The Gorgon and The Manticore," a madrigal-ballet for chamber chorus, small orchestra and dancers.

Fanciful masks, colorful costumes, a memorable tale told through singing, acting and dancing, and a companion work especially appealing to children, entitled "The Reluctant Dragon," should make for an event which is particularly appropriate for families with school-aged children.

The Menotti piece is usually performed by dancers only, with the chorus out of sight, or in the pit with the orchestra. In Ms. Euler's conception, the chorus is costumed and performs on the stage as the townsfolk of the story. They are at first appalled, then intrigued, as the mysterious Man in the Castle is seen promenading a unicorn, then a gorgon, and finally a manticore. Soon "every respectable couple" follows his lead, with most remarkable consequences.

The performances of "The Unicorn Meets The Dragon" will take place at the Cushing Center in Norwell center March 11 and 12. Saturday performances are at 4:30 and 8 p.m. Sunday's will be at 4:30 p.m.

Tickets ($9 adults, $6 children) are available from members of the unicorn Singers at Nobles Camera Shops (Hingham Square and Cohasset), at Dwyers' Cleaning Spot in Norwell center, or by calling 749-0162.

Cast members from Cohasset include Stephen Tooker, Scott Ketcham, and Kate deLima.

Professor at Scituate library

The Friends of the Scituate Town Library cordially invite area residents to hear Catherine B. Shannon, Professor of History at Westfield State College and author of Arthur J. Balfour and Ireland.

She will speak about the importance of Balfour's involvement in Ireland in relation to the shaping of modern Ireland. The lecture will be held in the meeting room of the Scituate Town Library, 85 Branch Street, Scituate, at 2 p.m. on Sunday, March 5. Tickets are $4 and will be available at the door.

This lecture series is supported, in part, by the Massachusetts Arts Lottery, as administered by the Scituate Arts Council.

Residents in theatre production

Quincy Center Dinner Theatre, featuring Cohasset residents Molly Hochkeppel and Nilla Kingston, will present the British farce "No Sex Please, We're British" at the Masonic Temple, 1170 Hancock St. in Quincy, on March 18, 19, 24, 25, 31 and April 1.

Presented by Darling Productions in association with rural lodge AF and AM, the comedy is directed by George Stevens of Braintree and features Gordon Teague and Skip Maloney of Weymouth, Christopher Pattigrew and Phyllis Walters of Boston, Lisa Holzemer of Middleboro, Greg Bazaz of Stoughton, Mike Kelly of Watertown and Nicholas Stevens of Braintree.

The ticket price of $22.50 includes the show and a full course dinner with a choice of two entrees. Cocktail hour is at 6:30 p.m., dinner at 7:30, and the show begins at 8:45.

For more information and reservations, call 843-5862.

One-woman show March 19

Actress Robin Lane will perform "Ladies First," a one-woman show on the lives of some of America's First Ladies, on March 19 at 3 p.m. in the Whiton Room of the Hingham Public Library.

There will be a champagne reception at 2 p.m. Admission is $8. Proceeds will benefit the Library.

"Ladies First," which was extensively researched and written by Lane, portrays the lives of five of America's First Ladies: Jacqueline Kennedy, Eleanor Roosevelt, Mary Todd Lincoln, Julia Tyler and Rachel Jackson. Through the use of a few costumed accessories and her considerable talent, Robin Lane captures the spirit of each woman, revealing the woman behind the image of First Lady. She presents the first wives as they really were: thoughtful, caring human beings, whose lives were profoundly affected by their husbands' calling. In a production that is entertaining and humorous, as well as historically accurate, Lane creates the illusion of becoming five individual women whose lives cover a time span of almost 200 years.

Selectmen decide to reduce liquor licenses

Selectmen Pratt and Rocco Laugelle. Selectman Gallagher called Chairman Pratt "Kruschev" in reference to Gallagher's remarks last week that some board members were akin to Communists by voting against waiving the police department rules so that Sgt. Richard Barrow can run for office without taking a leave of absence.

"Now you've just insulted the board again," Selectman Laugelle stated.

Matters calmed down moments later and Selectman Pratt asked Staszko how long it would take to put together a deal with Finucane. Staszko replied, 45 to 60 days.

Attorney Georges asked selectmen to consider cancelling the license not revoking it, so the license could be transferred to an eligible applicant in the future.

Selectman Laugelle motioned to have the license cancelled, but there was not a second to that motion.

They then voted 3-2 to revoke the license, with Laugelle and Pratt objecting to that decision.

The board then considered Hoban's application for the license. After lengthy debate, the board voted 3-2 to take the matter under advisement.

"You can't take something under advisement without any intention of doing something," town counsel warned.

That advice was not heeded until moments later when Davenport asked selectmen to schedule a hearing on his application for the license. After lengthy debate, selectmen decided to reconsider their vote regarding Hoban's application.

"We should put the matter back on the agenda for next week and make a decision on Hoban's request. Then we'll be putting Bob (Davenport) in the same position. We should not treat the two applications differently," Mitman suggested.

The issue will be resolved next week when selectmen make a final determination on the license request by Hoban.

Recreation programs . . .

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for beginner and intermediate dog training classes to be taught by Laurie Cleveland.

Classes will be held Wednesday evenings at the GAR Hall in Scituate, starting Wednesday, March 15.

Beginner classes will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and the intermediate/advanced class will be from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. on Wednesday evenings. The fee for the eight-week program will be $25. Checks should be made payable to the Town of Cohasset. Dogs should be a minimum of three months of age.

Owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches — no spike collars. It is suggested that the handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for this session.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size and pre-registration will be accepted on a space available basis. Registrations close Saturday, March 11, at noon.

NAC Basketball Game

The Cohasset Recreation Department has 42 tickets for the Saturday, March 4, NAC basketball game between Boston University and Northeastern University. It will be held at 1 p.m., at BU's Walter Brown arena.

The cost for a ticket and bus transportation to and from Boston from Cohasset Town Hall is $5 per person. You may register by calling the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791.

This event is ideal for families and eliminates the drive to Boston. Tickets are for good seats, all of which are section 9, rows A, B and C.

The bus will leave from Cohasset Town Hall at 11:45 a.m. Saturday, March 4, and return at about 4 p.m.

kitchen • design

by Gail Mag

IF TWO IS A CROWD

It used to be that the kitchen was solely a woman's domain. However, a survey by the National Kitchen and Bath Association indicates that nearly 80 percent of today's kitchen installations are designed for two cooks. In order that two people may work simultaneously in the kitchen area, it is necessary to establish two work triangles. This may be accomplished by installing a second, smaller sink to expand the work space. The designer may elect to separate the cooktop from the oven or grill for more versatile cooking ability. The homeowner may even choose to establish a separate refrigerator/microwave oven work area for expanded capability. Whatever the final choice, the two-person kitchen requires careful analysis of a family's actual food preparation habits.

The two-person kitchen doesn't always mean husband and wife but may involve children or grandparents. Different types of food and cooking utensils may be needed to suit these various cooking styles. To solve all our cooking and kitchen problems come to KITCHEN DESIGN ASSOCIATES. We thrive on coming up with answers to difficult design problems. Rearranging your present layout will probably be essential. Whatever is required will result in a totally beautiful and functional room. See us for the newest ideas at 962 Washington St., Rt. 53, Hanover. Telephone 617-826-4121.

HINT: U-shaped and L-shaped kitchens lend themselves most aptly to a second work triangle.

Sgt. Barrow will take leave while he campaigns

"I'm going to go all the way. I want the people of this town to make the decision, not selectmen."

Richard Barrow
Selectman candidate

Threatened with suspension from the police department, Sgt. Richard Barrow has opted to take a leave of absence while he campaigns for the office of selectman.

Sgt. Barrow has been advised by the attorney for the Cohasset Police Association to request a leave of absence from the department during the four remaining weeks before the April 8 election. The association will also file a grievance with the town, requesting that Sgt. Barrow be paid for the time he spends away from the department.

"It amounts to a couple of thousand dollars," Sgt. Barrow explained.

Selectmen voted two weeks ago not to waive the police department rules and regulations which prohibit an officer from campaigning for paid political office. Those rules stipulate that an officer can not be employed by the department during the campaign, although he will be reinstated once the election is over, win or lose.

Four days prior to that last vote, selectmen had voted 2-to-1 to waive the regulations which allow the police sergeant to wage a campaign for selectman. In the time between that vote and their final decision on February 24, Sgt. Barrow filed nomination papers certifying him as a candidate for selectman.

Since that time, Sgt. Barrow has been trying to determine whether he could remain in the race.

Police Chief Joseph Kealey said he would be forced to suspend the police sergeant if Barrow decided not to take a leave from the department.

"This has gone on too long," he said this week. "It's disrupting the department. Either he tells me he's going to take a leave, or I'll be forced to suspend him. He's giving me no alternative."

The police chief said Sgt. Barrow "has had enough time to decide what he's going to do.

"I've given him every opportunity to decide. I spoke to him on Monday and he gave me no indication what he was going to do. That's when I told him that unless he took a leave from the department, I'd be forced to suspend him.

"I work under the rules and regulations of this department, too," the chief continued. "Those rules don't say he can't run for office. He has

It's override time

Budget override set at about $ 1 million

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Town officials may not know exactly how much, or when it will occur, but there will be a request to override the tax levy limit of Proposition 2 1/2.

Right now, according to figures provided last week by the advisory committee, the town's operating budget will fall short by about $663,000. That deficit could rise to almost $1 million if voters approve a number of requests, including appropriations for a new police department contract, $150,000 for a reserve fund, and a five percent salary increase for non union town employees.

"It will leave us a little less than one million dollars short just for the basic operation of the town," warned Jane Goedecke, chairman of the advisory committee.

A meeting of the advisory committee and selectmen was called last week to determine how many questions will be contained in an override election, and when that election will take place. It had originally been determined that the override election would be part of the April 8 local election ballot.

But some town officials, including Selectman

Pratt says state is 'singling us out'

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Despite previous expressions of concern, state officials assured selectmen this week that they "appreciate" the efforts made by the town to support affordable housing projects.

In a January letter to selectmen, Joseph Flatley, assistant secretary of the Executive Office of Communities and Development, noted his concern "about the town's overall commitment to the availability of affordable housing."

But at a Tuesday night meeting with selectmen, EOCD official Clark Ziegler said the state was aware of the "long way" Cohasset has traveled in the past couple of years to provide affordable housing within the community.

"We acknowledge your steps and applaud a lot of the steps you have taken," he stated. "We only expect you to move forward in a reasonable way."

His attempt to smooth over any division between the state and town was not easily accepted by at least one selectman.

"We dispute everything he (Flatley) said (on page 2 of the letter)," Pratt replied. He noted that EOCD had been waging a "South Shore-bashing" in the media, singling out Cohasset as a community which has not attempted to provide affordable housing.

"This town is not far behind the parade," Pratt added.

The EOCD assistant secretary wrote the letter to selectmen following the board's vote to oppose the proposed Crystal Woods housing project. By a

Selectmen wonder when override will be held

Selectman chairman Burt Pratt said he hopes the board will vote next week on when the override election should be held and what should be on the ballot.

Board members had a brief discussion on the topic following a review of the warrant articles March 6.

"By scheduling it on the day of the regular election (April 8)" said executive secretary Greg Doyon, "we would be able to conduct the election at no extra cost."

He said that if articles were voted down or amended at town meeting April 1, it would allow some leeway.

Selectman James Gallagher said townspeople will have to better understand the affect on their taxes if the override is approved.

He said that there is room for substantial cuts in department budgets.

"There's going to be a little more opposition (to the override) this year than last year," said Gallagher.

Pratt said that if the override election were to take place April 8, the board "would have to start the machinery now."

Doyon noted that it takes about 30 days to set up a special election.

He suggested that town meeting be adjourned until after the override vote.

School Committee chairman Diana Kornet, who was at the meeting, said April 8 would allow more time if the override needed more money.

Kornet said she didn't think the town would sit still for a cut in services.

"For me, it's a question of how much of an override," she said.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said there is a big difference putting the override on the ballot and at town meeting.

"It's very easy to go in and say no on the ballot," said Laugelle.

"You have a chance to explain at town meeting."

"People are more likely to vote if they have a concrete figure," said Selectman Martha Giesteby.

Becker named to state group

The Massachusetts Association of Health Boards announced today that at its latest Executive Committee meeting Sharon Becker, Chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health, was appointed to fill a vacancy on the Nominating Committee of the Association.

The association is an umbrella group representing appointed and elected Boards of Health across the state. The association provides a library service, a legal and technical advisory council, educatonal seminars and workshops for board of health members.

Resident objects to lights

A Nichols Road resident has added her objections to the Chamber of Commerce proposal to pay the cost of installing underground wiring around the duckpond to light the common for the holiday season.

In a letter to selectmen, Mrs. Edward B. Long of 31 Nichols Rd., suggested that nothing be done this year.

She also proposed that an article be placed in the warrant for the next general town meeting to allow citizens to vote on the proposal.

"For some time, I have been disturbed about the lighting of the small deciduous trees around the common pond at Christmas time," said Long.

"It has struck me as commercial in tone and certainly not in keeping with the tradition of an old, colonial town in New England.

"My feelings were substantiated by a family member recently returning from the west after several years to spend the holidays here.

"Her comment was, 'What has happened to our common! It looks like a shopping mall. How sad!'"

Long noted that a number of other residents are against the idea and have written to selectmen with their objections.

"As I know that you have received other similar comments and reactions from residents in this matter, it is apparent that lighting the common does not have universal appeal," she said.

Long suggested that if the town should approve the proposal, lighting be provided for one traditional Christmas evergreen tree to be planted in a spot that would not hinder common activities.

"Perhaps a town-wide fund raising (schools, churches, clubs, etc.) effort could purchase such a tree with the lighting to take place at the time of the Christmas church fair," she said.

"As a resident who has lived all her life in this town, I have seen many, many changes and some are truly saddening," said Long.

"Please give the townspeople every opportunity to keep the common as it has always been !"

Concern about town records

The chairman of the Cohasset Historical Commission has written to selectmen expressing his concern for the vulnerability of the new town archive records vaults.

According to Noel Ripley, the vaults are located in the cellar of the town hall addition and are susceptible to damage by flooding of water.

"Among town records which will be stored for preservation in the vaults are Cohasset's most historical documents and books, some dating back to the early 19th century," said Ripley.

"These would be most vulnerable to damage by water should flooding of the cellar occur.

"Of particular concern to the commission is the lack of any general drainage system in the cellar of the new addition, and the lack of any means of preventing water from flowing from the main part of the cellar into the vaults via their doorway.

"Lack of an adequate, reliable and large capacity drainage system presents a hazard the correction of which, we feel, should be of the highest priority in the present effort to preserve and protect Cohasset's historical public records."

Ripley also suggested that a water-tight barrier wall be constructed in front of the vault door to prevent general flooding from reaching the vaults.

He said that was done in the case of the old cellar vault in the original part of the building.

"Please keep in mind that serious damage to town records stored in the public vaults could bring action from state authorities, and loss of vital public records could badly impact the town's ability to protect its interests in courts of law," added Ripley.

"The Historical Commission hopes that the Board of Selectmen shares our concern for the protection of Cohasset's valuable public records and can act quickly to eliminate the present danger posed by the lack of proper drainage of adjacent areas."

Travel budget approved

Selectmen voted Monday night, March 6, to support $810 in the council on aging budget for out of state travel.

The money will pay for a trip to the national convention in Washington, D.C., next year for senior center director Kathy Bryanton.

Last month, the board had voted to allow Bryanton to attend this year's National Council on Aging Conference March 29-April 1 in New Orleans.

When board members said the town could not afford to pay the $765 cost of the trip, Bryanton said she would pay her own way.

They suggested that Bryanton find out how much next year's conference will cost and submit that in the budget for next year.

At this week's meeting, members noted that School Supt. Stephen Hart attended a conference last year in Los Angeles.

"We have no control over what the school committee does," noted selectmen Rocco Laugelle.

Laugelle asked executive secretary Greg Doyon to research how the board has handled out of state travel in the past.

"She (Bryanton) is not able to find out what's going on at the national level except at her own expense," noted selectman Burt Pratt.

Resident Robert Davenport said,"It sounded (last time) like you told her you will help her out next year.

"Now the lady isn't here (at the meeting)."

"I don't think we meant to leave that impression, but maybe we did," said Pratt.

The board voted unanimously to support the appropriation.

Another week of liquor license debate

"To me, it seems like an exercise in futility," town counsel Richard Henderson told selectmen Monday night, March 6.

"We have nothing to give away," he said, referring to two requests for all alcoholic licenses which the town does not have.

The licenses are allotted to towns according to population, and Cohasset has three such licenses, all of which are taken.

A fourth license, which the town received after special legislation, was revoked last week.

It had been held by Central Market which closed its doors last June.

Nonetheless, selectmen continued to next week a request from James Hoban of Cohasset Meat and Produce for an all alcoholic package store license.

The board also postponed until next Monday setting a hearing date for Robert Davenport's request for such a license for 3A Liquors.

Davenport has asked that his application be treated in the same manner as Hoban's.

Hoban had requested a two week continuance because his attorney could not attend this week's meeting.

"We don't have a license to offer," said Selectman Cliff Mitman.

"This ties in with the next one (Davenport's application)" he said.

"I don't think we should consider either one."

Mitman made a motion to turn down both applications.

Hoban again requested the continuance, and noted that the Central Market license had been "stagnant" for nine months before action was taken.

Executive secretary Greg Doyon said Hoban's lawyer, Michael Georges, told him he was concerned about his client's application for a beer and wine application being affected if the other license request was denied.

"He's afraid it could hurt the other license if it is denied," explained Henderson ,who had also spoken to Georges."

"I didn't think it would prejudice his client.

"Frankly, it's not uncommon to request a continuance," Henderson said.

"There is nothing to grant, but he might want the opportunity to withdraw the request."

After researching the law on the matter, Henderson said that an applicant can't file for the same type of license for the same premises for a year.

"The attorney asked for a continuance for personal reasons," said Henderson.

"I don't know if he has anything else on his mind."

Selectman Martha Giesteby said that a one week continuance was enough.

"We've all bent over backwards," she said.

Mitman withdrew his motion to deny the licenses.

New detectors for the town

Old Town Hall will soon have new fire alarms.

Selectmen voted March 6 to ask for a transfer of $1,320 from the advisory committee for new fire alarms for the old building.

Executive secretary Greg Doyon said that a small fire in a waste basket in an upstairs room failed to set off the alarms.

Doyon said that wire inspector Steve Wigmore tested the alarms and they were all operational.

"He said these are 12-years-old, and recommended that they be replaced," said Doyon.

"We should definitely do something about this," said Selectman Rocco Laugelle.

"If it has to be done, we can't wait."

Price of the detectors is $60 each, according to Doyon.

Duckpond repairs discussed

Selectmen have asked the town engineering consultant to discuss at next week's meeting work he suggests should be done to repair the common pond.

Tree and park superintendent Peter Laugelle will also be asked to talk about a tree near the pond which may cause a problem.

Selectman chairman Burt Pratt said John Modzelewski suggested spending $16,000 to restore and line the bottom of the common pond.

Pratt said the town has $38,000 for the work, and has spent $7,000 to $8,000 so far.

"I believe we have to discuss it further with him (Modzelewski)," said Pratt.

"He should come in and make a recommendation and go into detail," he said.

Date for override

Pratt said the problem was getting the override ballot in the back of the warrant.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said there is a concern about putting the ballot in the warrant because the budget could change on the town meeting floor.

Laugelle noted that "last year, everybody worked so hard to educate the public.

"Many people thought it was a one year deal," he said.

Squabble about town's housing progress . . .

4-to-1 margin, selectmen voted to oppose the plan which will be constructed through the state comprehensive permit process using funds obtained through the Home Ownership Program. Those funds were awarded by EOCD in a special Tuesday afternoon ceremony in Scituate.

In the January letter to selectmen Flatley noted, "This action by the selectmen raises very serious questions regarding the town's promotion of affordable housing."

Pratt said the majority of Cohasset selectmen oppose the comprehensive permit process, saying it takes the development's municipal review process from the town. "We prefer other ways" to provide the housing, Pratt said, adding that the board voted to support an article in the April 1 town meeting warrant which would waive the density clause in the zoning bylaw for developers who include a percentage of affordable units in their proposals.

Regarding the Crystal Woods development, Pratt said the majority of selectmen indicated their concerns and opposition. "The gist of it is, we don't like it," he said. But noting that it has just received funding from the state, he added, "we'll turn ourselves to the wheel and make it work out. We were simply out-gunned and out-voted."

Ziegler indicated that Pratt's concerns were legitimate, and assured the board that "nothing is pre-determined" in the continuing review process.

Selectman James Gallagher said he recently talked with Crystal Woods developer Jack Hurley about the proposed development. Hurley assured the selectman he would address all the concerns of the Ledgewood area neighbors.

"He said the only reason there was such a hassle with the neighbors was because Scituate received 75 percent of his time and concern," Gallagher reported. "In trying to get his application in for funding, Cohasset has not received ample time from him.

"I think the residents have very legitimate concerns," Gallagher added, "and I'm sure Jim will adress them.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby noted she was not opposed to the comprehensive permit process. She voted against supporting Crystal Woods because of the concerns expressed by the abutters. But Gjesteby stated that comprehensive permits are a way of providing affordable housing for "our children who are being forced out of this housing market."

Pratt said the majority of selectmen favor constructing affordable housing 'in smaller bites." He cited their support of a 12-unit affordable family development off Rte. 3A approved by town meeting last December, the town's efforts to gain control of the Curtis Estate, and the housing authority's state - approved plan to provide housing for the retarded on Elm Street.

"But do you honestly feel we can accomplish ten percent or 250 units of housing stock (for affordable housing)?" he asked the EOCD officials.

Ziegler noted the ten percent mark used by the state is a "threshold" which can be used by developers if a community rejects a comprehensive permit proposal. If the number of affordable housing units is less than ten percent of the town's total housing units, the developer can appeal the permit rejection to the state.

"We are the smallest town on the South Shore," Pratt responded, noting that a majority of the unused land in Cohasset is unbuildable. "Please bear that in mind."

Israel Sanchez, chairman of the Cohasset Housing Partnership, asked Ziegler how local communities monitor the development of comprehensive permit projects, and how local residents receive preference once the projects are constructed.

Ziegler noted that as long as town officials do not impede the progress of the development, local preference will be given to the residents of the community in which the development is located. Local boards and the state will retain control over the construction of the project, to ensure that the developer is meeting the permit requirements. The town's building inspector will make the final determination on whether the building is ready for occupancy, he added.

"It seems like the town boards are busting their necks and then they find that local people are not getting in these units," Selectman James Gallagher stated. "That's what I'm scared of. I want to see local people getting in."

"There's no reason why with Crystal Woods that it couldn't be worked out to be very favorable to Cohasset," Ziegler noted.

Sanchez recommended that the zoning boards in Cohasset and Scituate might want to hold combined hearings regarding the Crystal Woods project. "It would make sense - all the issues would be hammered out by the same people," he noted.

Regarding the efforts by Cohasset to gain control of the former Curtis Estate for various community housing needs, the EOCD officials said the state is in support of the town's plans. Ana Perez noted that the attorney general, who must make a final determination on how the 55 acres will be used, will likely support a plan supported by both the town and the trustees of the property.

March designated Red Cross month

"Somewhere, somebody needs help" is this year's theme as more than nearly 3,000 chapters and units kick off March Red Cross Month.

Volunteerism and community support will take center stage during celebrations held across the country.

"Here in the Plymouth region of the Southeastern Massachusetts Chapter, American Red Cross, we have 50 Red Cross volunteers assisting their neighbors in Plymouth, Carver, Kingston, Duxbury, Plympton and Marshfield." said Otto Fehlow, regional chairman. "The volunteers are part of a national and international movement that cares for and responds to people in need every day.

March Red Cross Month is a chance for us to salute our volunteers and to thank our community for their support as well."

During the last fiscal year, American Red Cross volunteers responded nationally to 49,000 disasters, including thousands of single family fires and larger relief operations such as Hurricane Gilbert and the devastating Raleigh, N.C. tornadoes.

Hundreds of Red Cross volunteers worked around the clock coordinating relief supplies air lifted into Armenia following the massive Dec. 7 earthquake.

"We also continue to fulfill our responsibility providing service to the military," continued Fehlow.

"During the past year, our Red Cross handled numerous emergency communications between American military personnel and their families. Often, it's the Red Cross that helps deliver news to the service person about a birth, illness, or death in his or her family.

"Volunteers make all of the Red Cross programs and services available," Fehlow said. "Without the commitment of these people, the mission of the Red Cross would be impossible.

"THIS RATE MAKES IT SMART TO HAVE YOUR IRA HERE. I'LL MAKE IT EASY."

"A lot of people settle for a lower IRA rate simply because they don't know how easy it is to open or transfer their account here. And I think that's a shame.

"Because at Rockland Trust, one visit is all it takes. We take care of all the paperwork and notifications for you. And we give you a full 9.00% annual rate on a 4-year IRA CD—for an effective yield of 9.55%.

Officials agree override approaches $ 1 million

Burt Pratt felt that the override questions would only serve to confuse voters. He suggested a second special election be held after the April 1 town meeting to better prepare voters for the override questions, and to include accurate figures for the ballot.

"I think you're in for a wild town meeting," Pratt predicted. "I see people in town - the mood is not good. They don't understand what Proposition 2 1/2 is all about and what the mechanics of an override are."

"Education is so important. People do not understand. They voted last year against a truck (for the highway department) but they got it anyway," advisory member Jill O'Donnell noted. "I'm hearing a lot of negatives from people in town." O'Donnell was referring to the purchase of a front end loader for the highway department which was defeated in last May's override election. Selectmen later determined the truck could be purchased from available funds.

In preparation for last week's meeting, advisory chairman Goedecke outlined a number of articles which will be included in a general override request this year. A general override will permently affect the town's tax rate. Included in the general override will be the town department budgets and unpaid bills amounting to a total of $663,000. Several other items could be included in the general override request, including the non union pay raise, a reserve fund appropriation, mosquito control, a $5,000 septic system for the town housing on Government Island, an estimated $50,000 for a police union contract, and an unestimated amount for sludge removal.

Still more items which could be added to the general override amount are: $30,000 for repair of the roof on the old section of town hall, $15,500 for a town hall paint job, $27,000 for a consultant's study of the town's computer system, $10,000 to computerize the town's maps, for an approximate total of another $100,000.

Although it is up to selectmen to decide what form the override questions will take, Goedecke noted that it was important not to create "an all or nothing situation" for the voters. If the appropriation requests are all lumped together in one question, it could unintentionally lead to the defeat of the entire budget package.

Goedecke opposed reopening the town's operating budget for a line-by-line review at town meeting. "We've feel we've done our job," she said, referring to the lengthy budget review by the advisory committee. "I don't feel it's necessary for to reinvent the wheel and through the line items. I'd be against that."

She wondered if the override election should be delayed until the exact figures as voted by the April 1 town meeting could be specified on the override ballot. "I'd hate to spend more money (on a special election), but is it worth it?" she asked the town officials.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon warned that a special town meeting would have to be scheduled after an election, if voters defeat article previously passed by the April 1 town meeting. A second town meeting would bring the town dangerously close to not concluding its fiscal matters by the close of the current fiscal year.

Goedecke asked selectmen to make their decision on the format and date of the override election as quickly as possible.

The advisory committee and selectmen also discussed several of the items which will be included in debt exclusion override questions, and in capital outlay overrides.

The town will be asked to pay $148,630 for an unpaid town hall renovation bill. If that debt exclusion question in approved, that amount will be taken from the total in the general override question. Debt exclusion overrides only affect the tax rate for the length of the loan. Other debt exclusion questions include $87,000 for school buses and $75,000 for repair of the Osgood School roof.

Voters will also be asked to exclude $300,000 from the levy limit for a leachate control system at the town landfill, and unspecified amount for renovations to Milliken Field.

The largest single override request will be about $700,000 for the proposed renovations to the police and fire station. Advisory committee members noted that the tax rate will not be affected by debt exclusions in that first year because the loans will not take effect until the following fiscal year.

Capital outlay override questions will include about $136,035 in various department requests, including a new animal control van, a new ladder truck for the fire department at $60,000, and a new Tree and Park Dept. mower for $17,735.

Selectmen's action

Selectmen took the following action at their meeting Monday night, March 6, at town Hall:

*Voted 4 to 1 to grant two all alcoholic beverage licenses to the Cohasset Community Center.

Chairman Burt Pratt was opposed.

The first license was for a fundraising auction Saturday, March 18, 6 p.m. to midnight for the PSO.

The second was for a South Shore Art Center fundraiser June 24, 8 p.m. to 1 a.m.

*Granted requests by Robert's Food Mart, 130 King St., for common victualer and Sunday licenses.

*Approved the reappointment of Terrence Farrell as a member, and Ed Lubitz as an alternate, to the Zoning Board of Appeals.

*Agreed to make appointments next week to the Cox Estate Planning Committee.

*Approved town counsel's professional statement of $6,847.

Selectmen review warrant articles

Selectmen voted 3 to 1 Monday night, March 6, not to support a warrant article which would reduce the board from five to three members .

Selectmen Rocco Laugelle was in favor.

The board also voted 3 to 1 to support an article which would effectively repeal a 4 percent tax on hotel, lodging house or motel rooms in town.

Selectmen Martha Gjesteby was against the proposal.

The board's actions came during a review of the 69 articles for the town meeting warrant.

Selectmen considered non-money articles.

The article to reduce the number of selectmen was submitted by Sohier St. resident Robert Davenport.

Davenport said he thought a smaller board would be more efficient.

Selectman James Gallagher said that the larger board is needed because members are liaisons to about 15 other town committees and boards.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby agreed that board members have an expanded role as liaisons.

"I go to quite a few meetings, and Jim does, too," said Gjesteby.

Chairman Burt Pratt said, tongue- in -cheek, that he would be in favor of reducing the board "only if we knocked out the executive secretary and got back to the good old days when people ran the town."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said the board needs an executive secretary for the day to day activities.

"We can't expect every chairman to put the time in you have," said Laugelle.

Laugelle said the board accomplished more when there were only three members.

Daniel Leahy of Kimballs-By-The-Sea, a proponent of the room tax article, said that reducing the tax from 4 percent to 0 percent would not affect the town's state aid.

He said that the tax, adopted by the town last year, has been accepted in only 36 percent of communities in the state.

"We're the only business in the whole town that is taxed differently than everyone else," said Leahy.

"It has an enormous and detrimental affect on our town."

He said the tax artificially inflates his prices.

Selectmen also voted 3 to 1 not to support an article which would prohibit the operation of jet skis more than 12 miles per hour in Little Harbor.

Board members said the prohibition would be difficult to enforce.

Gjesteby abstained because she wanted more information.

Selectmen also voted:

*By 3 to 1, to support transfer of school department land off Smith Place to the selectmen for use as a cemetery.

Deadline for cancer fundraiser

Volunteer solicitors are working toward this week's deadline for receiving orders for the American Cancer Society's "Daffodil Days" from March 21-23.

The Cohasset workers, headed by Al Odermatt, are part of a task force enlisted by the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society to cover the towns of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth.

Proceeds from the sale of daffodils are used to support a program of education, information and service to cancer patients and their families.

For information on ordering the daffodils, call the American Cancer Society office at 341-4210.

While these courses are offered separately, together they comprise a two-hour block of delightful fun. Tiny Tot Chefs experiment with simple recipes and learn kitchen safety; in Science and Nature they will take discovery walks on nice days and work on nature projects and crafts indoors during inclement weather.

The Center's Gym Dandy program is also taking new sign-ups. Gym Dandy offers learning experience through play, utilizing a variety of creative, tot-sized apparatus to develop gross motor skills, social, skills, and creativity. The course is offered on Wednesday mornings for 10 weeks to children ages three months to four years and is divided into four age groups.

□ Happy birthday to Jen McKenna, with love from Patty and Meg!!

□ Another happy birthday to report, although it has already gone by . . . we are talking about John Douglas Campbell, born on January 19 of this year. His mom, Janet, and his Dad, William, are so pleased and proud! They report that all is well, and they are both enjoying motherhood. Janet was a Cohasset resident all through her childhood, and now resides in Pembroke with William and John. Her mom and dad, Mary and Murray Campbell, are pleased as punch with their grandson, John. Congratulations to you all.

□ Congratulations go to Sasha Bubanja, Theodore Michael Jones and Mark F. Rattenbury, all of our fair town. These three students were named to the dean's list for Scholastic Achievement during the first semester at Wentworth Institute of Technology.

□ Don't forget the Arts Lottery Council's deadline for the next distribution cycle is Friday, March 31. The applications are available at the Selectmen's office at the Town Hall. Don't use the old application that you have hanging around, they have new ones now. Once completed, send it to the Selectmen's office or Karen Bartow, Chairman, Cohasset Arts Lottery Council, 48 Sohier Street, Cohasset. If you have any questions, give her a call at 383-0572.

□ Just ask a busy lady . . . Martha K. Gjesteby has returned from her Washington Policy Conference, the annual event sponsored by the National Association of Regional Councils. Martha is a member of this association with Long-range Transportation Task Force and the Human Services Committee. She has been the Cohasset representative to MAPC for more than 10 years. She is a member of the Council's 25-member Executive Committee and MAPC's Transporation, Legislative, and Land Use Technical Advisory Committees. Imagine all of that as well as being selectman? Didn't know there were enough hours in the week to get all of that done. Hats off to you, Martha!! We all thank you for your efforts on our behalf.

□ Here's hoping that everyone heeded the call sent to us by the Social Service League, and sent a donation to themn. They do so much for our town, meals on wheels, the New Friends Program, flu shots, clinics, checkups, etc., now that they need us, respond! Send your check to the Social Service League, 14 Highland Ave., Cohasset.

Glastonbury auction March 18

The sixth annual auction to benefit Glastonbury Abbey will be held on March 18, once again at the Hingham Armory on Central Street in Hingham.

The friends of the Abbey who formed themselves into an ongoing Auction Committee, and the monks themselves have collected many treasures.

Armory doors will open at 1 p.m. for the preview and afternoon auction. At 7 p.m. auctioneer David Glynn will take over the microphone and conduct a grand live auction. During the evening a 13" color TV and VCR will be given away to one ticket holder. Refreshments will be available throughout the day and evening. Admission and catalogs are free.

LWV presents a spring musical

Saturday and Sunday, April 8 and 9, the elegant music room of historic Broad Cove House on Lincoln Street in Hingham will ring with the rich voices of the Broad Cove Chorale and Unicorn Singers.

Hostesses stylishly attired in period costumes, and fine wines, sweets and savories will add to the delight of guests who gather for an evening of fun and music.

The Leagues of Women Voters of Hingham and Braintree are cooperating to present this joint fundraiser entitled "Certainly Spring: A Musical Celebration." Everyone who enjoyed "Night in Old Vienna" last year will be delighted with this opportunity for another evening of fun and music provided by the League of Women Voters.

Under the direction of Margo Euler, the Broad Cove Chorale and Unicorn Singers will perform music from their acclaimed Fall '88 Gala. The program features a wide range of selections — from grand opera to swing —and is certain to please a broad range of musical taste. The evening's lyrical, lighthearted mood will be enhanced by League members who will be modeling vintage fashions provided by Sally Rossi of Serafina's Serendipity Clothing in Scituate.

The performance Saturday, April 8, begins at 8 p.m. while the Sunday, April 9 performance begins at 7 p.m.

Tickets, which include a full evening of music and refreshments, are on sale for $15 at the Hingham Public Library or by calling 749-6069.

Arthritis fundraiser

The Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home, Route 3A in COhasset, is planning an Arthritis Foundation fund raiser March 11, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Little League news

The 1989 Cohasset Little League preparations are well underway with the major league holding its organizational meeting.

This year all 10, 11, and 12 year olds are eligible for the major league and copies of birth certificates should be presented at the try-outs. No child will be assigned to a team roster until a birth certificate copy is provided.

Major league try-outs will be held on Saturday April 8 and Sunday April 9. Candidates will be evaluated by the major league coaches in their ability at batting, throwing, catching and fielding.

Because of increased interest in Little League baseball, the major league division has expanded to include two new teams for a total of six teams.

The farm league, minor league and pony league will soon be holding their organizational meeting for 1989.

The season starts Saturday, April 29 with the Annual Little League Parade.

Fair warning

It's difficult to beleive that some people in this town, some homeowners, are unaware that they are facing a Proposition 2 1/2 override at town meeting, a second vote at the ballot box, an increase in taxes if its is successful, or a decrease in town services if it fails.

It seems that no matter how hard town officials try, not everyone in this town is aware that Cohasset, like many other communities in this state, is facing severe fiscal problems.

Last year's budget deficit was discovered at the end, nearly too late. But it was uncovered and the town dealt with the problem.

That budget was approved last year with the ominous warning that it was not going to be the last override request on Cohasset. Town officials warned at that time that the good financial news was over in our town, and we would be facing a series of overrides in the future.

Right now, town officials are trying to determine who big the override will be. It appears the town will need at least a $663,000 override to cover the town's operating expenses in the next fiscal year. Other items may add $300,000 to that figure, which could mean almost two more dollars to the tax rate.

Debt exclusion overrides, which only affect the tax rate for the life of the loan, could include requests for police and fire station renovations, a state-mandated leachate control system at the town landfill, school buses, Osgood School roof repairs and Milliken Field renovations.

Capital outlay exclusions, which affect the tax rate only for the year in which the purchase was made, could include a fire department ladder truck, a new mower for the Tree and Park Dept., and $7,000 for a new animal control van.

Individual deartment heads can argue endlessly about the necessity of all these items. Perhaps they are right, but the final determination must be made by the voter and taxpayer of this town.

It would be heresy to walk into town meeting on April 1 without an inkling of what the budget will look like, and what will be included in the various override requests.

Town officials have reviewed these budgets repeatedly. Their comments and recommendations have been publicized. A few hundred people will attend town meeting, as they do year after year, and they will decide how the town budget will utlimately appear.

And then a few hundred more residents will cast their vote at a subsequent town election, deciding to approve or reject the decisions made by the smaller portion of the population at town meeting.

And, depending on their decisions, the town departments will proceed to their business. There may be a reduction in services if the overrides are not successful.

And believe it or not, there will be many people who will be unaware of the override effects until they witness a cut in town services - or until they receive the tax bill in the mail.

We give fair warning to those who will listen - be prepared to make some difficult decisions. But we must realize that despite all the warnings, very few will take the time to listen.

Ed Bartholomew of Hingham does his best as the 'Reluctant Dragon' against Rich Jensen as St. George as Cohasset's Kate deLima, the Shepherd youth, coaches him. Scott Ketcham of Cohasset (center) lays down the rules for a good fight as the Unicorn Singers prepare for their anniversary production to be held March 11 and 12.

Unicorn Singers present musical

The Unicorn Singers are hard at work on a very special production to celebrate the tenth anniversary of their founding.

Two charming fairy tales with fantastical beasts, a count and countess, a mysterious Man in the Castle and a singing dragon who writes poetry are the lead parts in Menotti's "The Unicorn, the Gorgon and the Manticore" and Butter's "The Reluctant Dragon" which will be performed with full staging by the 24 Unicorn Singers, 12 children, four dancers and an eight-piece orchestra on Saturday and Sunday March 11 and 12 at Norwell's Cushing Center.

Children who attend with their parents will especially enjoy the antics of Ed Bartholomew of Hingham as the "Reluctant Dragon" who doesn't want to fight St. George (Rich Jensen of Canton), but when coached by the shepherd youth (Kate deLima of Cohasset) in a 50's style rock'n'roll number, manages a thrilling duel with a surprising outcome!

A favorite with The Unicorn Singers is Menotti's "The Unicorn, the Gorgon and the Manticore", with which the group made its debut (and took its name) in 1979. The piece is a series of 12 madrigals, sung a cappella and interspersed with orchestral interludes danced by 12 of the Singers and the four professional dances as the 3 beasts and the Man in the Castle. Witty dialogue between the scheming Countess and her husband (played by Jeanne Scammell of Norwell and Norman Shaw of Weymouth); the charming contribution of 12 third-grade dances from Nantasket's Children's Dance Center (Caryl Brayton Toole, director); and the story-book set by Scott Ketcham of Cohasset, transporting the audience to the "pink promenade by the sea" outside the Man's Castle will enrich the charming story told through song and dance.

Children attending the program (suitable for ages 6 and up) might wish to bring crayons; while waiting for the 1 1/4 hour show to start they will enjoy coloring in a special "Castle Coloring Book" being created by artist Kate Dickerson of Hingham for the occasion, with scenes from the production. The booklet will be sold at the door.

"The Unicorn Meets the Dragon" will be performed Saturday, March 11 at 4:30 and 8 p.m. and Sunday, March 12 at 4:30 p.m. Tickets ($9 adults, $6 children) are available at Nobles Camera Shop (Hingham and Cohasset) and Dwyer's Cleaning Spot (Norwell) or by calling 749-0162. The Cushing Center is in Norwell on Rte. 123 with limited seating. Advanced ticket purchase is suggested.

Selectman's accusations are unwarranted

Letters

To The Editor:

I am writing this letter not so much in response to Mr. Mitman's accusations but to give him an opportunity to reconsider his feelings.

I know from years of watching him that he is fair and that he maintains a high level of standards when handling matters. I hope that he will at least take this time to examine his accusations.

At the start of the February 21 meeting, it was stated that Mr. Mitman might be at the meeting about 9:30 and that Mr. Laugelle might also attend but that he was working. If this was "the most deceptive, scheming thing that went on with this Board since he'd been on it," I ask why it was not brought up until about 10:30? Why it was not brought up until after Mr. Pratt had asked Mr. Peter Laugelle, of the Tree and Park Department, if the regulations he had in his hand for the cemetery had even been recorded with the Town Clerk's Office and, if not, they were not enforceable? Fact: The regulations for the Police Department had never been recorded. The same regulations that the Selectmen were using to stop Mr. Barrow from running for office. Now if Mr. Mitman had arrived at the meeting at 9:30 or anywhere within the next hour or had Mr. Laugelle come to the meeting after work, that "big" deceptive scheme would have been nothing more than another two-to-two tie vote, with one abstaining vote, as had happened the first time it was voted. The matter might even have reached the voting stage at that time.

Thank you, Cliff, for your reconsideration on this subject.

Sincerely,
Robert Davenport

Health board seeks program volunteers

The Cohasset Board of Health is seeking volunteers to staff the annual American Cancer Society's "Eating Smart" program at the Stop & Shop superstore during the week of April 9-15, between the hours of 10 to 5 p.m.

A training session is scheduled for March 13 from 4 to 6 p.m. in Sandwich. Volunteers will be asked to spend three or four hours or more, according to their availability, so the store is manned for at least one entire day.

Material handouts are part of the program and the training session will acquaint you with the information. It is not necessary to be a dietician or specialist in the field.

Interested persons are invited to call the Board of Health offices at 383-1664 for further information, possible coordination of transportation for the training session and other specifics you may need to know. Ask for Dr. Godzik or Carol Puffer.

Volunteers provide health information to seniors

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

A new training session is about to begin, and community volunteers are needed.

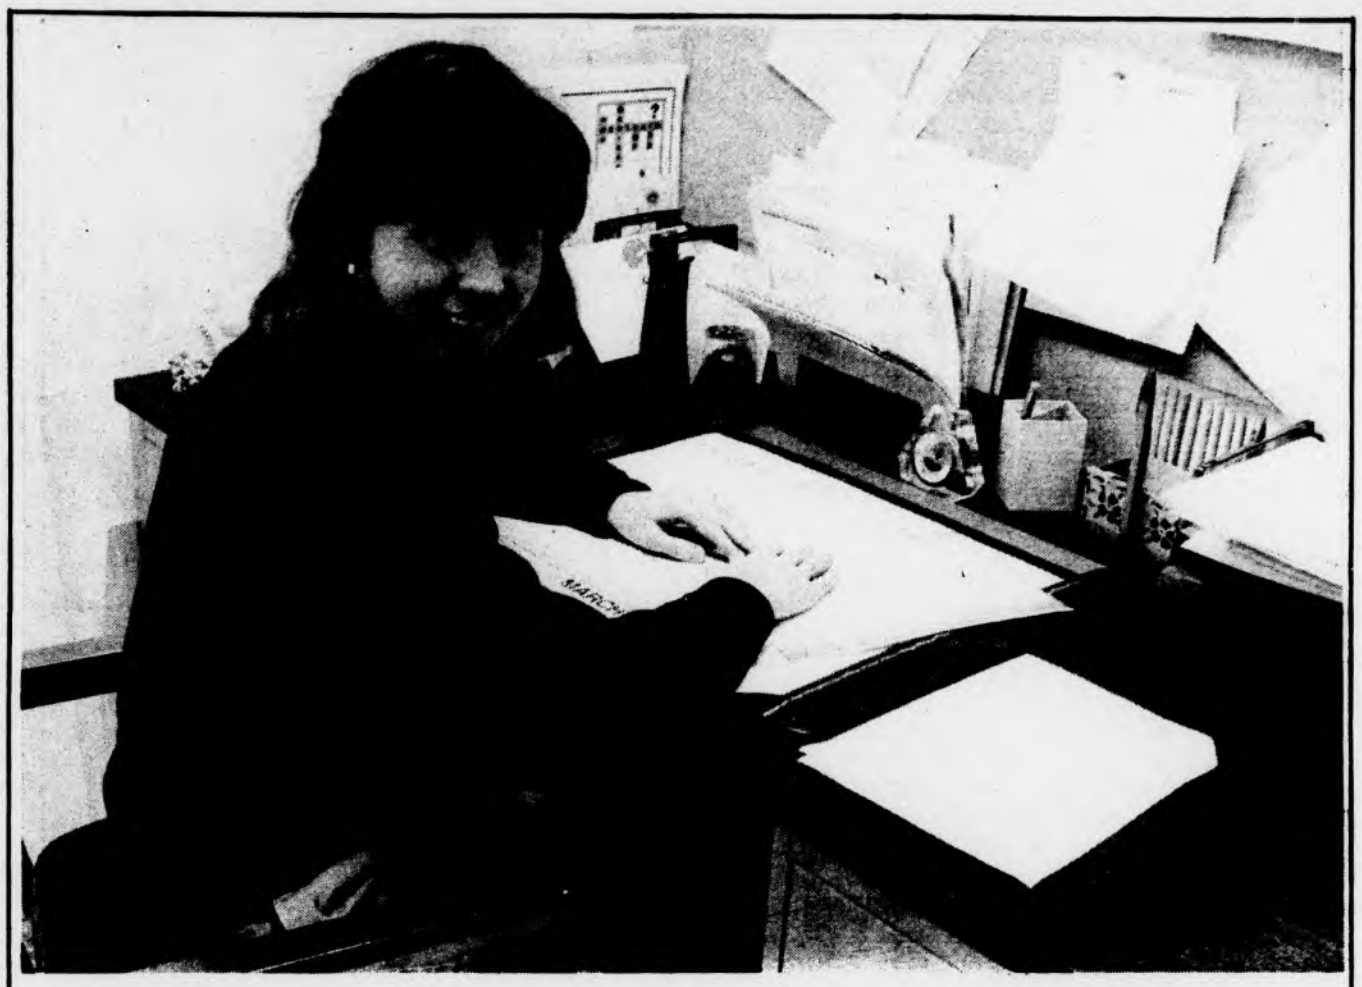
The program is called SHINE - serving the health information needs of elders. The state-funded program is in need of more counselors who will provide elderly residents of the South Shore with current health insurance information.

Pat Ryan, the SHINE coordinator based at the Cohasset Senior Center, said there are currently eight counselors serving six towns. She would like to see the program expanded into 14 communities with three counselors in each town.

To meet the increasing health information needs for a growing population of elders, Ryan has scheduled an intensive counselor training session in April.

Volunteers in the SHINE program need not be elderly, Ryan explained. "What would be ideal," she explained, "is to have people who are familiar with insurance, although its not a requirement. A background in personnel, business management and insurance would be helpful, but it's certainly not mandatory. Anyone who is interested in problem solving is welcome to attend the training session."

The training will be held from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon at the Super Stop and Shop conference room on Rte. 3A in Cohasset. The class days are April 3, 5, 7, 11 and 13. The only other commitment to the program, Ryan explained, is a quarterly review of insurance information reviewed by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs.



"It's really no big commitment of time for the SHINE counselor," she noted. "It averages out to be about four hours per week. And even that's on a flexible schedule."

Once the counselors are trained and certified by the state EOEA, they are available on an appointment-basis to serve the elders within their community. Currently, Ryan explained, there are three SHINE counselors in Cohasset, with another three registered to take the April training course.

The real need, she said, is in the towns of Hanover, Milton, Holbrook, Randolph and Norwell.

The trainees will receive information on the various forms of health insurance, including Medicaid, Medex, Blue Cross/Blue Shield. The objective is to provide the counselors with updated and accurate information which they can bring to elder residents throughout the South Shore.

"Once they are back in their communities, the SHINE counselors will be knowledgeable and available to serve the insurance needs of their peers," Ryan stated. That information will be provided when elderly residents call their local senior center. That message will be relayed to the SHINE counselor who will set up an appointment to meet with the senior citizen.

"The way it usually works," Ryan said, "is that the local Council on Aging takes the names of people who request the information and they give those names to the SHINE counselor. The counselor is then free to make an appointment with the person requesting assistance."

A common insurance-related problem is a question regarding prescription drug reimbursements.

"There's a lot of paperwork involved in some of these matters. The SHINE volunteers help to sort out that paperwork - they can figure out what costs are covered by insurance, and what coverage the person should have. Some seniors are overinsured. Some are underinsured. The SHINE counselor can help out with that common problem," Ryan stated.

"Insurance matters are overwhelming problems for a lot of people."

The help is provided at no cost to the seniors.

According to Ryan, the state realized many years ago that seniors were not being provided accurate information, especially in light of the rapidly changing health insurance industry.

"So even with all the threatened budget cuts, the state has promised to keep the money in this program. They feel it's a top priority for many seniors," Ryan stated.

As part of the SHINE training program, volunteers will be given a lot of information and a lot of names - people to contact for further and more detailed information. "We give them access to a lot of information - but there's always someone who will be there to help the counselors," she noted.

The counselors will participate in a questionnaire at the end of the training session. They will be certified by the state and can begin immediately to provide assistance to senior residents of their community.

Anyone who is interesting in participating in the SHINE counselor training program should contact Ryan at the Cohasset Senior Center, 383-9112.

Anniversary of visit to Cohasset by Capt. Smith

By David Wadsworth
Special to the Mariner

This year marks the 375th anniversary of the English adventurer and explorer Capt. John Smith's visit to Cohasset Harbor in the summer of 1614.

In his Generall Historie of Virginia, New England and Summer Isles, published in 1626, Capt. Smith described his brief stop at a small harbor called by nearby Indians "Quonahassit." The visit apparently was brief, for an altercation broke out causing the English to board their small vessel and put to sea hurridly. "We found the people in those parts very kinde but in their fury no less valiant and at Quonahassit falling out there with but one of them he with three others crossed the harbour in a canow to certaine rockes whereby wee must passe and there left fie there arrowes for our shot till we were out of danger yet one of them was slaine and another shot through his thigh." Today this extract from General Historie graces a memorial tablet at our harbor's historic Lawrence Wharf, to honor that brief visit three and three quarter centuries ago.

The setting for Capt. Smith's stop at Quonahassit in 1614 was a fishing and trading voyage from London, westward across the Atlantic to coastal waters of "North Virginia," as the New England and Middle Atlantic shores were called at that time. Thus it was that in April 1614 and a small company of seventeen men set sail from London docks in two ships bound for fishing grounds off the coast of Maine. The goal of their voyage was to fish, to trade for furs, to do some whaling, and to seek out sources of the precious metals thought to abound in unexplored lands. Whales were not to be found, apparently neither were the lodes of valuable metal, but furs and fish were plentiful. Ship's holds soon were packed with some sixty thousand codfish. Trading with coastal Indian villages produced ten thousand beaver, otter and marten skins. After a month of fishing Capt. Smith and eight other men took one of their ship's small, open boats and travelled along the coastline of North Virginia, visiting small, isolated Indian villages from which valuable furs might be obtained in trade for items put aboard for that purpose.

As the small boat progressed along the rugged coast Capt. Smith drew a map of the shores. It would be the first reasonably accurate and detailed map of the New England coastline. Clearly shown were details of the Massachusets shore seen or visited by the traders. The great bay of Charlton with its River Charles and its islands called "Claiborn's Isl." today is known as Boston. Just to the south "Point Saltonstale" with its indication of many rocky ledges and islets can be identified as the Cohasset Rocks; and the adjacent land area called "London" is the present location of the towns of Cohasset and Scituate. London would have been the site of the Indians' "Quonahassit" visited by Smith and his small crew; and a few miles further along, "Oxford" is today's Marshfield. Place names on the new map were assigned by Prince Charles, later to be King Charles the First of England, to whom Smith presented his map when he returned home. It was Capt. Smith himself who gave the entire coastline the name "New England." After receiving the new map Prince Charles honored Smith by bestowing upon him the title "Admiral of New England."

The fishing and trading voyage to the coast of North Virginia lasted for six months during mid-1614. In late summer Smith's vessel pointed its bow toward England, while the second vessel headed for Spain seeking other markets for its cargo. Not known to Smith, the other ship, having as its Master a Capt. Hunt, also carried twenty New England Indians lured aboard after Smith's departure. The Indians were to be sold as slaves at Malaga.

Capt. John Smith (whose title of Captain was a military title dating from an active career as a soldier, not a seafaring title) carried the Indian name Quonahassit to England and perpetuated it in his Generall Historie. A quarter of a century later the first English settlers of the town of Hingham in Massachusetts Bay Colony called the forested uplands and salt meadows and marshes of the town's easternmost part "Conyhafset" which their descendants of the 18th century shortened to "Cohasset." On the north side of the entrance channel leading to Cohasset Harbor, some yards east of the Yacht Club, an outcropping of granite ledge today carries the name "Smith's Rocks." Historians believe this is the "certaine rockes whereby wee must passe" mentioned in Generall Historie." The name "Quonahassit", Indian name for the immediate area, has been traced to the Algonquin language to mean "long, rocky place", a highly accurate description of Cohasset's shores.

The 1614 visit to Cohasset's harbor by Capt. John Smith and his crew is the earliest known visit to our shores by European adventurers and traders seeking to explore the great uncharted land on the western side of the Atlantic Ocean.

Smith himself had been born in Lincolnshire, England in 1579, had served as a soldier against the Spanish in the Netherlands and the Turks in Romania and Transylvania, had been a leader in the settlement of the new colony at Jamestown, Virginia, and before his New England trip had served as President of that struggling colony.

After the 1614 trip to our shores Smith became an advocate of colonial settlement in New England, writing extensively of his travels and generally extolling the virtues of the newly explored lands across the Atlantic.

Laughter Reigns at CHS

Saturday, March 11, two comedy productions will take the stage of the Cohasset High School auditorium.

Cohasset will present the last performance of its award-winning play "This is a Test" before moving on to the state drama festival finals in Boston.

The local group will be joined by Improv 40, an improvisational comedy troupe from Mill River Union High School in North Clarendon, Vermont.

Improvisational theatre companies have dotted the landscape of the American theatre for the past 25 years. Mill River is making its first venture into creating a full-fledged improvisational company. The work began last spring, when the company was cast and began work on improvisational situations. This fall work began in earnest when the current cast was named and traveled to New York City to see "Chicago City Limits."

The scenes Mill River will present are not written but follow, instead a structure that has been highly rehearsed. The direction that each scene takes will depend upon audience input and responses.

The evening of comedy will begin at 8 p.m. sharp. Tickets are to be sold at the door for $3.

"Friendship" at Osgood

During February the second graders at the Joseph Osgood School are working on the theme of "Friendship." Posters entitled "Respect Each Other" were made by Luke Caldwell, Ben Smoot, Jordan Fiore, and Nicholas Herzog.

A mural, "Second Graders Get Along," is displayed at the front of the school. A friendship ring hangs near the display, and on each ring the children wrote what a friend means to them.

The following is a list of some of their ideas:

A friend is someone who helps you when you are hurt. Sara Eaton-Bruce

A friend is someone I like to be with. Shaun Galvin

A good friend is someone who cares and loves you from your heart. Jamie Watts

A friend is someone who plays with you. Andrew Laney

A friend is someone who tells jokes. Ryan Story

A friend is a pal. Timothy Herzog

A friend is someone who doesn't call you names. Megan Waal

A friend is a nice person. Kim Welby

A good friend is someone who does stuff with you. Jordan Fiore

A friend is friendly. Nicholas Mincolla

A friend is someone who is kind. Nicholas Herzog.

A good friend is a good kid. Pat Murphy

To make a friend, you have to be nice to them. Jamie DeMichele

A friend is someone who sleeps over. Megan Connolly

It takes respect to be a friend. Justin Golden

The kind of friend I like is one that will help me build things. Adrian Greenbaum

A friend is someone who you can count on. Keri Dinsmore

A friend is someone who plays with other people. Raheem Shepard

My friend lets me use his toys. John Young

A friend is someone who helps you when you are sad or in trouble. Caroline DeRose

A good friend is someone that doesn't tease. Ronnie Nicynski

My friend always cheers me up when I'm sad! Mark Caristi

A friend understands you. Karyn Gray

A good friend doesn't grab. Phoebe MacPhail

A friend is someone who doesn't fight with you. Hunt Pile

A friend is someone who does not lie. Nicole Reid

A friend is someone who writes a story with you. Kara Petrocelly

In addition, a group of randomly selected second graders have been working with Mr. Leonard in the development of a video tape on friendship. Those students are Alex Schwerin, Alissa Conley, Greg Parkinson, Lauren Genovese, Megan Waal, Jim Hoban, Hunt Pile and Caroline DeRose.

The video will include skits, magic circles and other examples of boys and girls discussing or demonstrating friendship. The project is expected to be completed by the end of February.

Artist of the Month

Most recently, the Artist of the Month program at Deer Hill studied quilting as an art form. Nancy Connolly, a local artist, visited the school with her "quilt drawings" and explained to students how they were made.

First she makes a drawing on cardboard, sketching on both color and design. Then she goes to work with pieces of cloth of varying shapes, sizes, and colors and creates her beautiful quilted works of art.

Students then made quilt drawings of their own on paper using some of the techniques they learned from Nancy.

Next month, the Artist of the Month will be Goya whose works are currently on display at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. Students and parents who are interested might wish to visit the museum during this exhibit.

The CHS Artist of the Month for March is Felicia Bartow. Her art work is on display in the art room at the high school.

CHS ski team members capture E. Mass. crown

The conditions this winter haven't been the best for outdoor sports, but that hasn't stopped two members of the Cohasset High School ski team from having winning seasons.

Seniors Katie Lord and Michael Suhrbier both qualified for the Eastern US High School championships to be held this weekend at Mt. Snow, Vermont.

They had participated in the state finals last Wednesday, March 1, in two events, the giant slalom and the slalom.

In the young women's competition, Lord, 17, won the giant slalom and came in third in the slalom.

She also placed second in the combined events among 110 participants.

Suhrbier, who also competed against 110 other young men, finished 11th in the giant slalom, ninth in the slalom.

He came in 10th overall.

Both had earlier won the South Shore League comprised of 10 towns.

Each received a large trophy.

"It was made up of a series of races held every Monday after school at Prospect Hill in Waltham," said Lord, daughter of David and Irene Lord of Cohasset.

The races were held from the beginning of January until just before February school vacation, Suhrbier said.

Both had participated in the league for a number of years.

Lord also won in the ninth and 11th grades.

Suhrbier came in second last year.

Both have skied since they were youngsters ,and have escaped serious injuries.

"It's fun," said Lord.

"You travel a lot, and you meet a lot of people."

Lord admitted she was a little nervous at the state finals last week.

"I just thought about going as fast as I could," she said.

"I just hoped everything I had practiced would come together."

Senior ski champs Michael Suhrbier and Katie Lord. (Staff photo/J. Paul MacDonald)

"I don't really get nervous," Suhrbier said.

"You get used to it after a while."

Both were pretty happy with their performances.

"I felt good," said Lord.

"I just would've wanted to go one tenth faster than the girl who was ahead of me."

"I was pretty happy with how I did," agreed Suhrbier.

In the off-season, both enjoy soccer as a good way to stay in shape.

Lord also plays tennis for the high school.

Both said they intend to keep racing when they go to college next year.

Lord is still determining which college she will attend.

Suhrbier will go to St. Michael's, Vermont, or the University of New Hampshire.

"Why Should I Advertise in the Mariner?"
Ask Terry Gannon, Owner
"The Toy Box"
Pembroke
also in Mattapoisett and Falmouth

The Toy Box is a specialty toy store in Pembroke Crossing, located on Route 53 in Pembroke, and open since May of 1988. The store carries quality toys, and the "typical" customers are parents of young children.
Mrs. Gannon says, "We have an advertising budget that we can use in any ad vehicle, but the Mariner is my first choice for this area. I can select the coverage I want with the Mariner. I can hand-pick the towns in which I want to advertise."
She advertises The Toy Box in the Pembroke, Hanover, Norwell, Marshfield, Cohasset, and Hingham Mariners.
"I believe strongly in local advertising. The chances of the ad being seen is better in a weekly, because the paper stays in the home so much longer than a daily".
What about Terry Gannon's results? She says, "These ads have been a great contributor to our recognition.
"We're drawing from all over. It seems word of mouth from Mariner readers brings in their friends from other towns!"
So why advertise in the Mariner? For the same reason The Toy Box does: it works.

LDS women's lesson March 12

The Sunday lesson for the women of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will deal with ways of "controlling anger and avoiding contention."

This lesson is one in a series of Relief Society (womens') lessons given throughout the church worldwide that pertains to the Home and the Family.

Mrs. Nancy Garrison of Hingham, a mother of six, and member of the congregation, has been invited to teach the lesson which will give gospel ways for managing contention.

Relief Society meetings are held at 11:10 a.m. each Sunday at the Mormon chapel, 37 Gardner Street in Hingham, following the 9 a.m. Sacrament meeting and Sunday School classes and are open to the public.

Special Shabbat service

Shabbat services will be held at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom Friday, March 10 at 8 p.m. Rabbi Stephen Karol and Cantor Isaac Kriger will lead a "Learning About Shabbat" service experience.

Prayers will be explained and the Rabbi will suggest ways to enrich the Shabbat observance at home.

Rt. Rev. Barbara Harris to Confirm

Prayer course

A five-session course on Centering Prayer led by the Rev. Richard Martin is being held each Wednesday in Lent through March 15.

All are invited. If you were unable to get to the first session but still want to join us, please don't hesitate to come. Classes meet in the Bartow Room from 7:30 to 9 p.m. The following is a quote by the Rev. Basil Pennington which talks of what centering prayer can do for you.

"Centering Prayer is for those who want more - infinitely more. It is for those who dare to believe that they are made to be intimate with God and the bearers of His life and love in this world. It is for those who truly love themselves, love themselves enough to put first things first: to give God his time, to give themselves this time in God, so that they can give to others quality time that is loving and creative."

New Members' Sunday

Sunday, March 12 is New Members' Sunday. It is a great day to bring a friend to church. There will be a special reception following the service in Walton Rodgers Hall.

Also, the New Members' Committee has asked us all to sit toward the center of the pews in order to leave space for new members to come in. It is wonderful to contemplate our need to sit more people in the church.

Quiet Day

Curtis Almquist of the Society of St. John the Evangelist has agreed to lead our Lenten quiet day on Saturday, March 11 from 9 a.m to noon. In the busy lives we lead, it is so important to find opportunities for quiet. Most of us do not know what to do with a large block of silence. That is why we have asked Curtis Almquist, whose vocation as a monastic is to "befriend" silence. He can help us use quiet in our lives to draw near to God and ourselves, to keep our balance and our life in proportion. Don't miss this special quiet day on March 11.

Church School news

A special program in church school on the Philippines and world mission will take place on Sunday, March 12. Each child will receive a Mite box to be gathered in on Rogation Sunday, April 30. Mite Boxes contain our church school offering which will go to the Philippines this year.

Also, on April 30, the Intermediate Church School class will present a play on the "Creation" for the other church school classes and the church. Watch for this exciting production - the world in six days!

Church School brings canned goods March 5. Sunday, March 5, the Church School will bring canned goods to church to support the work of the Quincy Crisis Center with those who are hungry in this winter season. All parishioners are invited to bring canned goods in this compassionate appeal.

Charles Kane

Kane stresses experience

Stating that he believes this is an opportunity to make a contribution and become more involved in the town of Cohasset, Charles M. Kane of 265 Fair Oaks Lane, has announced that he is running for the office of Selectman.

Kane has been a resident of Cohasset for the last four years.

For the past ten years, Kane has owned and operated a family run restaurant in Quincy, Mass. and has recently purchased "Page's" Restaurant in Hingham with his two sons who will run and operate it as "Stars on Hingham Harbor." Because his children now run and operate the family businesses, Kane said "I am able to devote the time and the effort to community activities and my pursuit of becoming a Cohasset Selectman."

Kane said "As a local businessman, I have had experience with budget and personnel problems. I have developed management plans and funded capital improvement projects in my own business. My own background in these matters will enable me to carry over my experiences to town government and issues."

Kane believes that the town of Cohasset should begin to develop a long range budget to plan for capital improvements and needs. The town should also begin to focus their attention on the local business district to improve availability of downtown stores and shopping and attracting new and viable business.

"I believe that my background and experience will be an asset that will allow me to work with the community groups, public employees, and the business community. I hope that you will consider voting for Charlie Kane on Saturday, April 8, 1989," added Kane.

Tebbetts on spending

At a series of recent meetings with Cohasset voters, Selectman Candidate Ned Tebbetts, as "the Taxpayer's Advocate," continued to express serious concerns over the significant number and amount of large capital outlay requests that are included among the sixty-nine, or more, warrant articles that will be considered at the Town Meeting to begin on April 1, 1989.

As Chairman of the Capital Budget Committee for the past four years, Tebbetts has frequently suggested spreading capital outlays over a longer period of years, so that the Town would have much less need to consider Proposition 2½ override votes.

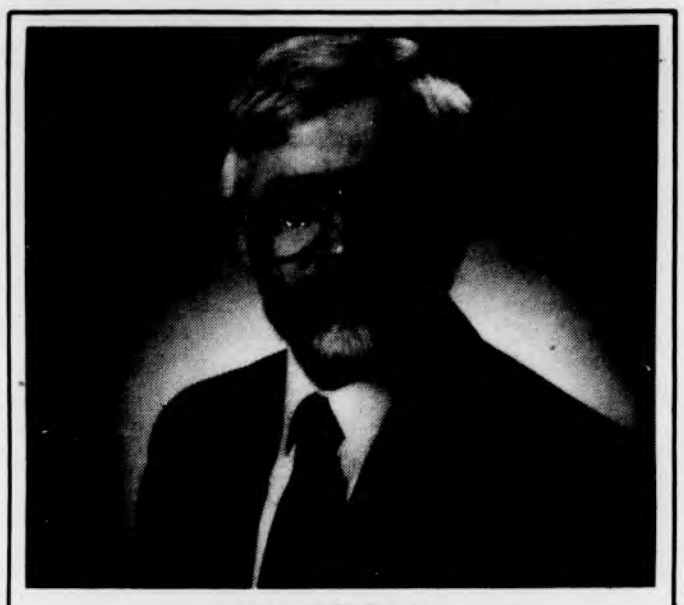
At the April 1 Town Meeting, Tebbetts' Capital Budget Committee expects to recommend delaying action on many capital outlay requests. Without such delays, there is a possibility that Cohasset would need to have as many as eight Proposition 2½ overrides again this year, Tebbetts said.

Coffee hour for Kidder

A coffee hour in support of the candidacy of Ralph Kidder for the Cohasset School Committee was held this week.

It was sponsored by Karen Kirkendall and Claudia Story.

The campaign committee plans to sponsor a coffee each week until the election. Dates and times will be announced.



Anyone interested in attending a coffee, or in supporting Kidder's campaign, should contact Linda Keller, 383-6873.

Kidder, 42, is a resident of 2 Cushing Road.

He is employed as corporate controller for Wedgestone Financial.

Kidder served on the Cohasset Public Schools Strategic Planning Committee, and was fundraising chairman of the Cohasset Parent School Organization for three years,.

In addition, he has been a member of the board of directors of the Cohasset Community Center Nursery School and treasurer of Project Playground.

Recreation programs

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct the 13th annual Easter Egg Hunt, for children 3 through 11 years of age, Saturday, March 25, at noon at the Deer Hill School field.

This year there is the distinct possibility that the Easter Bunny and helpers will be on hand. There also will be live animals at this year's hunt, as well as the other attractions.

Children will be divided into three separate chronological groups: Group 1. Ages 3 and 4 (with parent), younger than 3 year olds may also attend, but with at least one parent with them at all times; Group 2. Ages 5-7; Group 3. Ages 8-11.

Please gather around your designated area sign before noon. Bring a small paper bag or container for your candy.

Individually-wrapped chocolate eggs will be scattered about the designated areas. In each group some of the eggs will be wrapped with masking tape that will have a number on the tape. Should you find one of the numbered eggs, hold on to it because you will receive a prize from the Easter Bunny.

This year's program sponsors are: Cohasset Rotary Club, Veteran's of Foreign Wars-Post 9146, American Legion Post #118, the Cohasset Police Association, and the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

Rain date will be Saturday, April 1, at noon at the Deer Hill School field.

In the past, the Easter Bunny and Helpers have visited Cohasset residents who are hospitalized or homebound, during the Easter season.

If you know of anyone who would benefit from a visit by the Easter Bunny and helpers, call either the recreation department office at, 383-6791, or you may call Mrs. Manuel Salvador, and arrangements will be made.

FURNITURE REFINISHING

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a furniture refinishing course to be taught by Kenneth Sargent.

Classes will meet from 9 to 11 a.m. on Thursday mornings. The fee for the four-week, eight-hour program will be $35 per participant. Classes will be limited in size; each person will receive as much individual attention as necessary.

Participants should bring along a piece of furniture to refinish (ideally a chair or small table).

Sgt. Barrow takes leave during campaign . . .

every right to run for office. He can't campaign while he's a member of the department. Right or wrong, those are the rules. And if he can't abide by them, then under the Civil Service law, I'll be forced to suspend him."

The police chief said he would suspend the sergeant if Barrow did not immediately decide to take a leave of absence.

Referring to a request for an injunction which Sgt. Barrow sought against the town, Chief Kealey noted, "it took the judge fifteen minues to decide against that. This department has a set of rules and I'm going to go by them. Until they change, those are the rules of this department."

Last month, Sgt. Barrow requested that the court issue an injunction barring the enforcement of the police department rules. The injunction was not obtained.

Since that time, the police department association has asked the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission to make a determination about the regulations. The police union has argued that the rules, which were approved in 1983 by the board of selectmen, were never approved by the union. Therefore, they believe, the regulation prohibiting Barrows' campaign for office is invalid.

Sgt. Barrow was undecided about his course of action until he was advised Tuesday by Atty. Michael Manning of the International Bortherhood of Police Officers to take the leave. He was always determined, however, to remain a candidate for selectman.

"I'm going to go all the way," he said this week. "I want the people of this town to make the decision, not selectmen."

Sgt. Barrow was referring to a letter written last week by the selectmen in which Barrow was warned that disciplinary action would be taken against him if he continued to campaign without a leave.

"I feel that the rules and regulations are not ours (the police union's). They are being contested before the labor relations commission," he stated. "But this is a Democracy and I want Democracy to decide this issue, not a couple of people. The people of this town should make the final decision."

Despite the hassles he has encountered in his attempt to campaign, Sgt. Barrow said, "I can't see bailing out now. It's not fair that something like this happens. There are too many if's.

"I don't blame Joe (Kealey). he has to do what selectmen tell him to do. It's the regulations of this department I question," the sergeant stated.

Registration at new nursery school

Registrations are currently being accepted for a new nursery school in Cohasset which will open in September.

The Spring Tree Nursery School, which will be operated by Julie Hassan in her home on Beechwood Street, is now accepting registrations for the fall.

The school will accept three, four and five year-old students. There will be programs for two and three-day sessions, although arrangements can be made for a full five-day schedule. The class will be limited to 24 students.

"We're going to try to fit the class schedule with the needs of the parents," Hassan explained. "Depending on how many students are enrolled, we hope to offer a five-day schedule."

One teacher, Ann Gallagher of Cohasset, has already been hired for the fall term.

The school day at Spring Tree will begin at 9 a.m. and run until 1 p.m. Children will bring their lunches to school each day.

Hassan is the mother of three children, and has a "knack for talking and communicating with children of all ages."

Deck Point is denied again

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

After receiving the town's first comprehensive permit, Deck Point Inc. lost its fight for funding to construct condominiums on Cohasset Hill.

This is the second time in a year the state has denied money to the development planned for Rte. 3A.

Atty. Robert Devin, representing Deck Point Inc., said project representatives will meet the end of this month to discuss whether they will appeal the recent decision to withhold Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency monies.

That meeting, according to Deck Point consultant Tony Dugenik, will take place March 24 with state officials.

Deck Point Inc. had planned to construct the 108 condominium units using state Homeownership Opportunity Program funding. But last week the state announced a number of projects which received HOP funds, and Deck Point was not among the recipients.

"I haven't seen any information as to why we were rejected," Devin stated. "So until we know the reasons, we can't say what our next step will be."

The bottom line, according to Ana Perez of the state Housing Partnership, is that other projects were deemed more worthy of state financing than Deck Point.

"It's a competitive process for projects throughout the state," Perez explained. "Approval of financing depends on the quality of the project. We evaluate things such as quality of the site,

Veronica deVos is facing her biggest challenge.

By her own choice, she is thousands of miles away from her home in Cohasset. She is among strangers in a foreign land, in a school surrounded by a country teeming with turmoil and hatred.

Veronica is learning firsthand the realities of the world as she watches life in Southern Africa.

She is 17 years old.

Since her birth, Veronica has truly been "a citizen of the world," according to her mother, Merilyn. Veronica's father, Garrett, is a diplomat for the United Nations. The family has travelled extensively as his assignments took them to South America, Switzerland, and Holland. For her 16th birthday the young traveller met her father in India for a week, and then toured the country by herself by plane, train and car.

"We had our doubts and concerns," her mother stated. "But it was a growth experience for Veronica because she felt she could take on the world after that."

Merilyn recalled that her daughter's first words were in Spanish, although Veronica slowly lost the language from non-useage as the family moved from their homes in Nicaragua and Mexico.

"I think Veronica has really developed a sense of the world without prejudice because she's been exposed to both black and white-skinned people since she was born. The influence of her father has been considerable," she noted.

In 1981 the family selected Cohasset as their home "base." Veronica made many friends as she attended public school here. But those close friendships did not lessen her wanderlust and her enthusiasm to meet new cultures and form new relationships.

It was her decision, Merilyn explained, to complete her secondary education at the Waterford Kamhlaba, a United World College in Mbabane, Swaziland in Southern Africa. It is a small school surrounded on three sides by South Africa and its apartheid government.

Selectmen support station renovations

Plans for the addition and renovation of the Cohasset Police and Fire Station received the support of selectmen Monday night, March 13.

The board also voted to support a warrant article at town meeting appropriating funds for the work.

Renovation committee chairman Barbara Moore told selectmen that the proposed budget for the work is $666,500.

Moore said that includes construction, fees, expenses, furnishings/equipment, clerk of the works, and contingency.

However, the total could reach $714,000 if additional items are added, she said.

They include air conditioning for the mens' detention cells, new communications equipment for the police station, and new furniture for the police and fire stations.

Moore said that the committee has been advised

Appalachia to welcome Cohasset youth this summer

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"It's an eye opening, and possibly life changing, experience," said the Rev. Gary Ritts, minister of Second Congregational Church.

"It's an opportunity to see a part of life you just don't see around here."

Rev. Ritts was talking about the Appalachia Service Project, a summer work project which the church's Senior High Youth Fellowship is planning to participate in this summer.

It is open to Cohasset teenagers in the ninth grade or older. There are openings for 12 teens and six adults.

An informational meeting on the project will be held Sunday, March 19, 7 to 8 p.m. at the church, 43 Highland Ave.

Rev. Ritts explained that the group will travel to Leslie County, Kentucky, June 26, to do home repair and upgrading - to make needy families warmer, drier and more comfortable.

The group will return Sunday evening, July 2.

"There is poverty," continued Rev. Ritts, "but the people are proud of who they are.

"They are very conservative and religious people.

"They don't know Cohasset from any other community.

"But they welcome people.

"We are the lucky ones to be in God's green acre - their part of the world.

"Wealth doesn't mean happiness, and poverty doesn't mean the absence of happiness."

Rev. Ritts and his wife, Judy, have participated in the Appalachia Project four times.

At the time, he was serving as youth minister at Greenfield Hill Congregational Church, Fairfield, Conn.

When the couple came to Second Congregational, they suggested the project to the local church.

"My concern was to give kids a different experience," said Rev. Ritts.

But it was decided to try a project a little closer to home the first time.

So, last summer, a group of seven teens and two adults went to Maine to repair homes for the Micmac Indians.

"The Indians were very warm, friendly and happy," said Rev. Ritts at the time.

"They gave us more than we gave them."

The Appalachia Service Project, started in 1969,

Cohasset's week . . .

Barrow granted leave

"This is the final vote to be taken on the matter," commented selectman chairman Burt Pratt as the board moved to allow Police Sgt. Richard P. Barrow to take an unpaid leave of absence.

Barrow is taking the leave until April 8 to campaign for the office of selectman.

Selectmen voted recently not to waive the police department rules and regulations which prohibit an officer from campaigning for paid political office.

Those rules stipulate that an officer cannot be employed by the department during the campaign, although he will be reinstated once the election is over, win or lose.

Four days prior to that last vote, selectmen had voted 2 to 1 to waive the regulations which allow the police sergeant to wage a campaign for selectman.

In the time between that vote and their final decision Feb. 24, Sgt. Barrow filed nomination papers certifying him as a candidate for selectman.

He estimated that the leave of absence will cost him a few thousand dollars in salary.

The Cohasset Police Association notified selectmen that it voted unanimously at a special meeting March 10 to approve Barrow's request for a leave without pay.

The letter, from police association president Richard B. Abbadessa, noted that Sgt. Barrow is to be reinstated to his regular shift when the leave expires April 8.

Selectman James Gallagher asked how the police department will cover Sgt. Barrow's absence.

By paying time and a half in overtime, answered selectman Rocco Laugelle.

Gallagher said the action will put a financial burden on the town.

"I wish you had voted with me a long time ago," Gallagher told Laugelle.

Gallagher had voted to waive the police regulation prohibiting running for office.

"Any time you grant a leave of absence, it costs money," answered Laugelle.

"Everything we do costs money."

Voting to grant the leave were Pratt, Laugelle and Martha Gjesteby.

Gallagher was opposed.

Cliff Mitman was not present.

Override set for May 6

Selectmen voted this week to schedule the Proposition 2 1/2 override election for Saturday, May 6.

Board members had thought last week that the override election might be held April 8, the same day as the regular election.

But executive secretary Greg Doyon told selectmen Monday night, March 13, that the advisory committee recommended May 6 for the override election.

"Then citizens will know what action has been taken at town meeting," Doyon said.

He said it will be a fairly extensive ballot with seven to eight questions.

The town clerk recommended May 6, he said.

"It would be very confusing if the items on the ballot aren't voted that way at town meeting," agreed selectman chairman Burt Pratt.

Later during the meeting, the board continued its review of warrant articles for town meeting.

Selectmen said they would like to hear presentations by a representative of the sewer commission on the proposed user fee increase.

Members also said they would like the fire chief to discuss warrant articles regarding his department, and the health board to talk about a leachate control system.

Selectmen voted to support warrant articles regarding:

*Appropriation of $22,625 and $44,763 to resurface certain streets in town.

*Addition and renovation to the police and fire station.

*Appropriation of $3,680 to re-lay the brick walkway in front of the new wing of town hall.

*Appropriation of $100,000 to replace and repair the flat, tar and gravel roof at the Osgood School.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby abstained.

*Appropriation of funds to provide professional services to help in the selection of a computer land use mapping system.

Gjesteby abstained.

*Appropriation of $16,735 to purchase and equip a ride-on lawn mower with four-wheel drive.

Another illegal session

The town clerk has informed selectmen that they posted another illegal meeting.

According to town clerk Frances Marks, a meeting was posted in her office Tuesday, March 7, at 9 a.m. for a meeting Tuesday, March 7, at 7:30 p.m.

"This is in violation of the open meeting law and upholding them is part of my job which is becoming very frustrating," said Marks in a March 7 letter.

Marks asked selectmen to review the open meeting laws, and adhere to the guidelines.

According to the laws, every meeting posting must be received and filed with the town clerk 48 hours before each meeting.

New planning secretary

The planning board recently notified selectmen that Joseph Salorio has been hired as the new secretary.

He replaces Nanci Cushing who left to take another position.

Planning board chairman Robert Sturdy also thanked selectmen for moving the board's office to town hall before Cushing left.

"The office is large enough that most of our meetings will be held there without having to reserve a separate meeting room," said Sturdy in a letter to the board.

"If the meetings generate more public interest, there should be sufficient space to use the room next to the office if available."

CHS set for drama festival finals

Once again, those remarkable thespians of Cohasset High School are marching off to the John Hancock Hall in Boston for their performance in the final round of competition at The Boston Globe Drama Festival.

The public is invited to the final performance of "This is a Test" performed by Cohasset High School Friday, March 17 at 2 p.m. The winner of the state competition will be announced Saturday night.

Cohasset is one of 15 schools from throughout the state to win the preliminary and semi-final rounds of competition. Two plays will be selected from the finals to represent Massachusetts at the New England Drama Festival in April.

Directed by Ron Emmons, the one-act play is by Stephen Gregg. It deals with a nightmarish encounter with a test in a social studies class. The pressures of test-taking are carried to an extreme in this original new comedy.

Featured in the Cohasset production are seniors Dan Farwell and Jay Stainton, who have alternated in the lead role of Allan. Allan's teacher is played by senior Jack Beddows, and his mother is played by Pam Hasse. Students in the class include senior Erin Monaghan and Paul Froio, and sophomores Jen Plante and Doug Moe.

An ensemble of characters include senior Brian Ormiston, junior Jason Cameron, sophomore Melissa Christoffel and freshman Lynda Hague.

The production staff includes stage manager Laura Gagliano, lighting operator Sophie Redfield, and sound technician Dan Farwell. Art teacher Colleen Lucas helped with the prop designs and music teacher Colleen Foley assisted with the creation of sound effects.

Cohasset teen doesn't commute to school

"Her humanitarian impulse motivates her," Veronica's mother noted. "She wanted to witness apartheid firsthand."

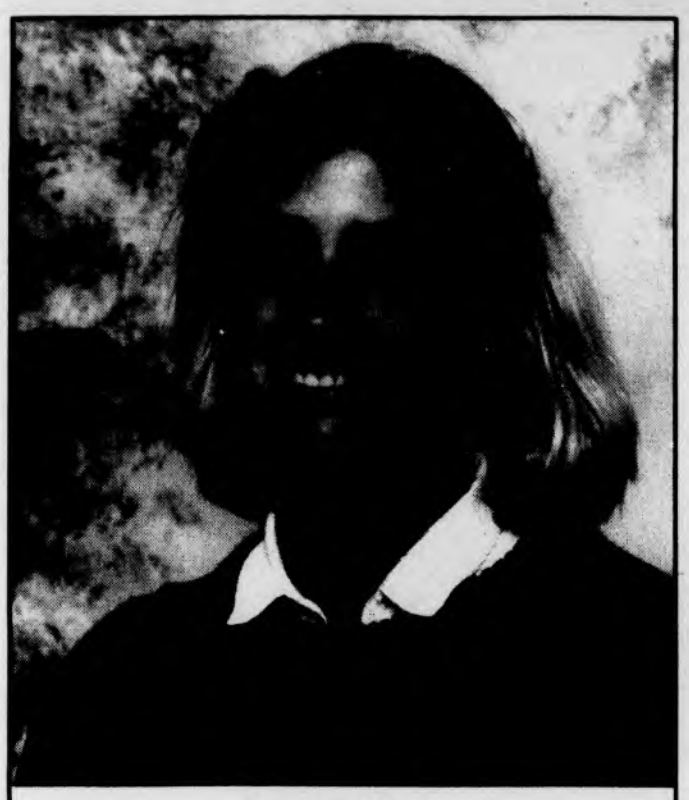
The school in Southern Africa was formed 25 years ago in opposition to that system of government. Waterford accepts students regardless of color or ability to pay the high tuition rate. Although the 425 students currently attending Waterford represent 46 nationalities, half of them are black residents of South Africa. Their sole task is to earn a degree and return to the homeland, armed with a powerful education with which they will fight for their civil rights.

The vast majority of students have been at this school since the seventh grade. Veronica is only one of three new students who began the baccalaureate program this year. When she completes the program in January, 1991, she will be eligible to enter into the sophomore year of college. Merilyn predicts that her daughter will proceed to a British university where she will study international law.

Veronica has been at Waterford since January. Since that time, her mother has talked to her twice by telephone. The cost is $3 a minute, and the student may make no outgoing calls from the school.

Merilyn described the school as an academic "Peace Corps" where students are encouraged to participate in community service projects. The aim of Waterford, she noted, is to promote international understanding and peace through education.

Her second day in Southern Africa Veronica began volunteer work at a hospital and orphanage in Mbabane. That is in addition to a full plate of academics, including three advanced level courses and three subsidiary courses.



Her mother said Veronica is a good student "if she likes the course - then she's highly motivated." Merilyn said this school will severely test her daughter's intellect, as well as her motivation.

"I think her only reservation at this point," Merilyn said, "is that being on her own may be too hard."

That did not deter the persistent American teenager from convincing the headmaster at Waterford that she was indeed up to the challenge. She wrote to him last year, stating that Waterford would give her the educational focus for which she was searching.

He wrote back, Merilyn remembered, saying the school did not have good experiences with American students. Good intentions aside, they could not withstand the political and economic conditions of this vastly different country.

Merilyn agreed, noting that dormitory conditions there are considered "adequate" by first-world standards - "luxurious" by third world guidelines. Although it usually does not get as cold there in winter as it does back on Nichols Road, there is no heat in the dormitories.

Veronica deVos

"Veronica said she really won't mind because she spends very little time there - she's usually in class, doing community service or at required study time in the library. It's heated there," her mother noted.

Veronica would not be deterred by the headmaster's warnings. She wrote again about her lifetime of travel, and the years she lived among the poor civilizations of the world. "I do not need a lot," Veronica said in her letter of reply. "I want to direct my life to helping people."

They corresponded twice more. As Merilyn explained, "she literally talked her way into the school."

Now it was Merilyn who needed encouragement.

"I was not a whole-hearted believer," she explained. "I thought it was one step below my daughter going off to the moon.

"But now, after educating myself about the school and the country in which it is located, I would be extraordinarily disappointed if it didn't work out for her.

"I feel like the world is gaining a world citizen."

Merilyn recalled the fun her daughter had in Cohasset, but parties and boyfriends in her local community paled quickly for the young traveller. "I think this school will help her to define what direction she would like her life to take."

She believes that Waterford will blend her young daughter's idealism with the realities of world politics. "It brings them down to a human level," she said.

Although their lives have been enriched through travel, Merilyn admitted it was not always an ideal way to raise a child.

"We gave up a lot. What we were always missing until Cohasset was our 'base.' I have to say I gave a lot. I was always coping with the mechanics of adjusting to a new life," Merilyn said. "There were repairs to deal with in a new home, new doctors, new friends, and sometimes a new language. And once you settle down, it was wrenching to leave when the assignment was over. Although it was personally enriching, this is what Veronica has coped with all her life.

"She's excited about this world. But now she is dealing with a whole new set of people. It will make every day involved and motivated, but it is also isolating. She knows that.

"Let's see what happens."

Beach sticker fee rises to $7

It will cost Cohasset residents a little bit more to go to the beach this summer.

Selectmen voted 4 to 0 Monday night to increase the beach sticker fee from $6 to $7 a car.

The fee increase was suggested by selectmen James Gallagher.

"If we raise it, we should make it meaningful," said selectmen chairman Burt Pratt, who suggested a $10 fee.

"Jane Goedecke (advisory committee chairman) said the current fee is very, very cheap," said Pratt.

"It should go up."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he understood why the advisory committee would want the fee to increase.

"They work with the (town's) finances," he said.

"But to raise it to $10 is outrageous."

Laugelle suggested compromising with $7.

Cohasset resident Charles Kane, a candidate for selectmen, asked how many cars are registered in town, and how many pay the fee.

Pratt said there are about 2,500 housing units in town, and there could be as many as 8,000 automobiles.

Some families have as many as three to four cars, noted Gallagher.

Deck Point denied money once again

experience of the development team, the financial stability of the development team, and the design of the site."

And if all things are considered equal, Perez said geographic distribution is also a consideration for state funding. At the same time Deck Point was rejected, the state decided to finance the Crystal Woods project on the Cohasset/Scituate border.

Perez noted that Deck Point Inc. may reapply for financing in the next round of funding which will be held in the fall.

"Simply, we felt at this time, with the limited amount of funds we had, there were better projects than Deck Point," she explained. "We have standards these projects have to meet, and we can not fund everything."

Deck Point Inc. planned to construct a number of moderate income housing units which would sell for about $75,000 to $85,000 each. Low-income units would be rented through the Cohasset Housing Authority or Deck Point Inc. The remaining market-rate units would be sold for about $200,000 each.

Many residents, including the board of selectmen, objected to the proposed project, saying that family housing should not be located along a state highway, surrounded by commercial businesses and a landfill. The Chamber of Commerce voted to oppose the project, noting that the residences would swallow up 16 acres of the town's dwindling supply of business-zoned property.

The Cohasset Housing Partnership also opposed the project. Chairman Israel Sanchez recalled "a lot of problems" with the project, primarily its location along the highway.

"It was to be located on a dramatic incline and it was so close to Rte. 3A," Sanchez noted. "Although the zoning board of appeals ordered the installation of a traffic light, the state would not allow a light at that point. Just that condition alone would have been a killer."

"We had concerns about safety for families living there," he noted. "And we didn't like the fact that these families would be surrounded by Norfolk-Conveyor, the landfill, an office building and Rte. 3A. All four sides were to be bordered by something that is not conducive to a peaceful family community."

Sanchez noted that Deck Point went into this fight for state funding with two significant stumbling blocks - opposition by the local housing partnership and selectmen.

"Right away, they started off with zero points because we didn't endorse their plan, and neither did the selectmen," he stated. "And although they did get the conditional approval of the zoning board, the state never saw that approval because it came after the application deadline."

Sanchez has not seen the state's rejection letter to Deck Point officials, so he is unaware whether the company will appeal the funding decision.

"The state makes these funds available on a semi-annual basis," according to Sanchez. "But within that letter, they might have encouraged Deck Point to reapply for funding, or they may have been more discouraging. Until we see a copy of their letter, we won't know."

Boat excise taxes due

The Fiscal 1989 Boat Excise Tax bills were mailed Feb. 28, 1989.

These bills are due and payable by 4:30 p.m. on May 1st at the office of the Collector of Taxes, Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., P. O. Box 296, Cohasset.

If the boat you are being billed for has been sold, traded, stolen, declared a total loss or registered out of state you must contact the Assessor's Office at (617) 383-9900, ext. 124 and inquire about an abatement.

If the boat excise tax remains unpaid after May 1 there will be a penalty of $20 or 20% of the tax, whichever is greater, plus interest added to the tax.

For those boat owners who moor their boats in Cohasset Harbor both the mooring fee, which is due April 1, and the boat excise tax must be paid before you will be issued a boat decal for the 1989 season.

On or after May 15 the decals will be available for pick up at the Harbor Master's Office, located at Government Island on Cohasset Harbor.

Landfill closed March 26

The Cohasset Board of Health reminds residents and trash haulers that the Cedar Street Municipal Landfill will be closed on Easter Sunday, March 26. The landfill is closed on Tuesdays and Thursdays and announced holidays.

Cohasset youth to visit Appalachia in summer . . .

is affiliated with the United Methodist Church, according to Rev. Ritts, but other churches are welcome.

"It adds to the experience by meeting other faiths," he said.

Those who would like to participate must sign up by April 1, said Rev. Ritts.

"They (Appalachia Project) have an enormous number of applications," he said.

"They usually have to turn some away."

Cost is about $280 per person, he said.

"But we hope to have fundraisers to help augment that," said Rev. Ritts.

"We usually have each individual person pay room and board, $72, and perhaps some of the transportation, but none of that is fixed."

Rev. Ritts said he has not yet worked out the logistics for getting the group to Kentucky.

They may take a bus half way, and then rent three vehicles to take them the rest of the way.

Or they may rent the vehicles here, and drive all the way, stopping at a church to rest two-thirds of the way there.

"It's a good two-day trip," he said. "It's close to 20 hours on the road."

The groups usually stay at a school or church, and bring their own sleeping bags, Rev. Ritts explained.

Patience and tolerance for a challenging situation help, he added.

"It's not the Ramada Inn," said Rev. Ritts.

Each day, the group will be out of the building by about 8 a.m. and at one of three work sites by 9 a.m.

Work, which continues until about 4 p.m., includes such things as roofing and painting.

The conditions of the houses vary, he said.

"Some are one room, with a stove outside, and no toilet," said Rev. Ritts.

"Others are mobile homes."

Some of the residents apply to the Appalachia Project for help with their homes, while others are selected by outreach workers.

Rev. Ritts said it is sometimes a shock to see some of the homes.

"Yet the people are happy," he said.

"They are connected with their family."

Before the Cohasset group goes to Kentucky, members will participate in workshops to help them relate to people with different lifestyles.

"For example," said Rev. Ritts. "They tell us to be very careful to ask people what they want us to do.

"It's their home, not ours."

There will also be training sessions on basic skills such as hammering and sawing wood.

"There will be guide books at the work sites," he added.

"We won't do any licensed work like plumbing.

"We'll do repairs, basically."

After work each night, the group will participate in activities to learn about the culture of the area.

"One time we heard a story teller," said Rev. Ritts.

"Another time, we toured a coal mine."

The group will bring some tools and materials to the work site and others will be provided, he said.

Donations of materials and money are welcome.

Though the ride home will be a long one, it also serves as a sort of debriefing, or reentry time, he said.

"During 20 hours on the road, you talk about the week," said Rev. Ritts.

"So when you come back you are not as shocked.

"In the past, some have come back appalled at the wealth here.

"But it doesn't last too long," he laughed.

Rev. Ritts said the experience builds community for the teens who participate.

"In those kinds of situations, some of the walls which separate us come down ," he said.

The participants also see people who learned to band together, said Rev. Ritts.

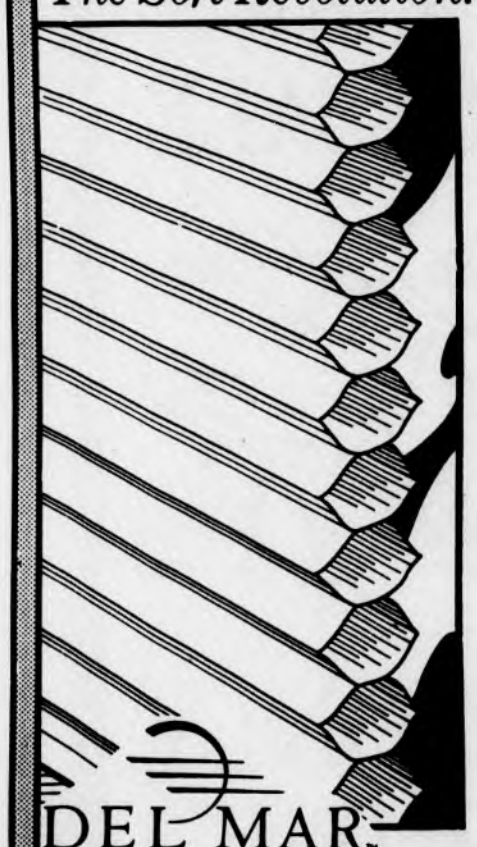
"It's good for the kids to see it," he said.

"It's a lesson you really can't preach about," he said.

"You can't get it by hearing - but by experiencing."

"You'll have fun at Disneyworld," he said.

"But you'll have the experience of a lifetime in Appalachia."



Rev. Gary Ritts and members of the South Congregational Church youth group relaxed last year with Micmac Indians Wolf and Lovett Sanipas after working on Wolf's brother's home.

Selectmen decide fate of license–there is none

Selectmen voted Monday night, March 13, to deny a request from Cohasset Meat and Produce Centre, Inc., for an all alcoholic beverage license because the town has no such license to give.

But the story. which has continued for several weeks, may not end there.

During the hearing, selectman Burt Pratt noted that the board had taken the application under advisement.

Atty. Michael Georges, who represented applicant James Hoban, said that he had nothing to tell the board that members hadn't heard before.

Cohasset has three all alcoholic licenses, all of which are taken.

A fourth license, which the town received after special legislation, was recently revoked.

It had been held by Central Market which closed its doors last June.

However, Hoban applied for such a license.

Robert Davenport of Sohier St. also applied for such a license for 3A Liquors.

Georges said he has submitted a petition with over 500 signatures in support of his client's application.

He noted that the Central Market license had been in existence since 1909.

"If Cohasset Meat and Produce is not awarded this license, my client thinks it would be a disservice to the town," said Georges.

"We really have no license to give," said selectmen chairman Burt Pratt.

"Why are you asking this at this time?" asked selectman Rocco Laugelle.

"Is it a route you have to go?"

"Yes," replied Georges. "It is a route we have to pursue.

"If we say we will withdraw it, or no longer want it, we are precluded from doing that."

"We can't vote for it if we have no license," said Laugelle.

After the vote, Georges said that the matter could be appealed to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission.

He was asked if that is what he will do.

"I don't know," replied Georges.

Davenport later withdrew his application.

A round of applause goes to all of you together for the production.

□ Had a nice chat with Julie Hassan last week, and she certainly is excited about her latest project! She is going to be running a nursery school next fall, called the Spring Tree Nursery School. It will be for 3 and 4 year olds, and the good news is that she still has some space available. The hours will be 9-1, she will be opening in September, and one of the teachers that she has lined up is Ann Gallagher. She is located on Beechwood Street in our fair town, and if you are interested in more details or signing up your youngster, call Julie at 383-1354.

□ Sharon Becker will certainly by a busy lady from now on, she was just appointed to fill a vacancy on the Nominating Committee of the Massachusetts Association of Health Boards. As everyone knows she is the Chairman of our Board of Health. Sure proves she knows a lot about the Health Boards, all through the State!

□ One of the questions that keep cropping up around town is when the duck pond will look presentable again. With spring popping in soon, that should inspire our town management to get it underway, pronto!

□ This Saturday (March 18) will be a special one, they can eat their lunch with the Easter Bunny at the Cohasset Community Center. It will run from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. with the cost being $4 for adults and $3 for children. Call in advance for your tickets, 383-0088.

□ If you see a lot of daffodils around town, it is due in large part to the efforts of Al Odermatt. He is heading the volunteer solicitors that are working for the American Cancer Society's Daffodil Days. Proceeds from the sale of the flowers are used to support a program of education, information and service to cancer patients and their families. We'll bet there will be hundreds around, we all know what a hard worker Al is.

□ Congratulations go to the CHS Ski Team, who really had a fine season despite Mother Nature's lack of snow! Katie Lord and Michael Suhrbier both qualified for the Eastern US High School championships held this weekend at Mt. Snow in Vermont. Last week Katie won the giant slalom and came in third in the slalom, and placed second in the combined events among 110 participants. Mike came in 11th in the giant slalom, ninth in the slalom and 10th overall. We cannot wait to hear the results of the events at Mt. Snow, here's hoping they call in the results before press time!!

Patrick Swanson makes the best of some early spring weather during a day at Sandy Beach. (Staff photo/Buzz Wadsworth)

□ Ross D. MacLeod, son of Mr. and Mrs. MacLeod of Cedar Acres Lane, received high honors for the second term at Boston College High School. He is a member of the clas of 1992.

□ Kimberly Zaslow of Black Rock Road, has been named to the Dean's List at Simmons College in Boston for the fall semester. She is a senior majoring in international business at Simmons.

□ The following Cohasset students were named to the dean's list during the first semester at Wentworth Institute: Sasha Bubanja, 44 Hillside Drive; Theodore Michael Jones, 164 Sohier St., and Mark F. Rottenburg of 1 Briarwood Lane.

□ Troy Haase of Cohasset recently completed a 12-hour training program in drug and alcohol awareness education. The training was part of a peer leadership program at South Shore Vocational High School.

□ Remember Paul and Doris Remes, the wonderful couple that used to own Village Fabrics? I heard from Gail last week, and they are still living in Florida, though she didn't have their address. Paul has been quite ill recently, so you go out and buy your card, and I will concentrate on getting the address for next week's Around Town. They had a lot of dear friends around here, it will give them pleasure to hear from all of us.

That's the news for this week, please call me with your event!

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg

EATING YOUR WAY TO HEALTH

Different cells in the body require different nutrition. Their funtions are specialized and so are their diets. The thyroid gland, for instance, needs iodine to function. Nerve tissue is hungry for B vitamins. All these must be supplied by proper nutrition. If a patient's diet does not include the nutrients requested by the body cells in the quantities they are using, some of the cells will suffer from malnutrition and may weaken. They may become vulnerable and their resistance to invaders can be lessened. Doctors of chiropractic direct their efforts to restoring balance to the function of body system, ultimately restoring health. Their efforts are better tolerated in bodies that have received good nutrition. After injury, healthy cells recover more quickly than do cells that are missing nutrients.

The restoration of your total state of well-being is our concern. We suggest a routine of periodic chiropractic exams that will serve to deal with existing problems as well as head off developing situations. Call SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC today and let us discuss how chiropractic may best serve you. Located at 80 Front St., Scituate Harbor. Tel. 545-7388. By appt. Early morning and late evening appts. Editorial

Let the race begin

Have we given overwhelming coverage to the campaign of selectman candidate Richard Barrow? Yes we have.

Has it been biased and unfair? Not in our estimation.

Police Sgt. Barrow's attempts to run for political office have overshadowed his reasons for seeking the position. That we admit. And that was newsworthy.

This police officer has been attempting for two months to become a candidate, was foiled in his efforts, and ultimately decided to clear the way for a campaign.

He is now a candidate for selectman, not unlike the other three candidates, James Gallagher, Diana Kornet and Edwin Tebbetts.

And finally, we are as relieved as you to say, the campaign can begin without more front page headlines about the sergeant's plight and his fight against the board of selectmen.

From now on, this will be a campaign waged by the candidates, not the press.

We certainly didn't intend to have a local political campaign grab everyone's attention for the past several weeks. Generally, these things command far less interest and enthusiasm.

But the fact that a sergeant in the local police department was seeking political office was newsworthy, and as his fight to pursue that objective gathered steam, the interest escalated as well.

Someone mentioned that Barrow had to run for office after the $2 million in free publicity that was gifted to him by the local newspapers. Well, perhaps we inadvertently added to his public relations effort, but it is for the voter to determine whether that was to his credit or not.

We certainly never intended to imply that someone should vote for Sgt. Barrow because he fought vigorously to get his name on the ballot. All we attempted was to update the public on the status of their candidates. We never voiced an opinion on who should be elected.

This newspaper has never endorsed a candidate for local office, and that policy remains in effect. We applaud every resident who offers his name for a candidacy, and no one should be deterred from that estimable endeavor. Far be it from us to determine who from this local citizenry would make the best civic leader.

To run for public office is often a thankless, tiresome responsibility. Rather than offering our condemnation to one who turns his back on local government, we often wonder in amazement why anyone would accept the challenge.

We're delighted that Sgt. Barrow has finally settled into a campaign for a position he earnestly wants to win. We're even more delighted that he's facing serious competition by three qualified candidates.

We never meant to give undo public credit to one candidate. He may have been singled out against his opponents, but we never intended to offer him as the best qualified candidate.

That choice is for you to make. No amount of headlines or newspaper print should alter your opinion and the vote you make on April 8.

Catch-22 for animal control officer

By Laurie Ubben
For the Hingham Animal Shelter Committee

Last week, Hingham Animal Control Officer (ACO) Paul Murphy boarded his van to find two adult cats safely locked in a sky kennel awaiting his attention.

The cats had been provided with food, water and blankets but there was no note as to each animal's age, sex or medical history.

In that same week, Murphy responded to several calls from High Street residents concerned about a litter of eight-week-old Golden Retriever puppies that had been dumped on the roadside. He also fielded no less than five inquiries about procedure for lost and stray cats.

In each case, Murphy's creativity won out over procedure simply because the lack of a holding facility for stray, lost abandoned or injured animals insures that our ACO's routine cannot approach the meaning of the word. So what happened to the puppies? Two of the callers were persuaded (quite easily) that Golden's make great pets and the third caller successfully made the same appeal to a friend in Scituate.

As for the cats, the ones in the sky kennel were reluctantly accepted by Marie Anderson in Norwell, a woman whose feline adoption facility is overflowing. The five other displaced cats either remain with the callers or have found their way home.

This hands-off policy is one that the ACO has had to adopt because no state statutes exist addressing the holding laws on cats. Murphy can only encourage the caller to leave the animal alone, hope it returns home and in the meantime, try to match phone calls to cats. If the creature continues to hang on, the caller can then sign a release form authorizing the cat's removal to its humane destruction.

The moral of the story for the time being is that careful attention to one's pets will safeguard against loss and pain for both owner and animal. Outdoor cats should wear expandable collars with identification. All family animals should be documented with a snapshot that can be surrendered to the Animal Control Officer if lost. Dogs must be licensed with the town. And because animals cannot distinquish between Hingham, Hull and Cohasset, alert all ACO's when a pet has been missing for more than 24 hours. Paul Murphy of Hingham can be reached at 749-5610, contact Ken Conway of Hull at 925-4718 and Bill Quigley in Cohasset at 383-0228.

The Catch 22 in animal control on the South Shore is that once an animal is touched by an officer of the town, that animal is the town's responsibility. If it bites someone or causes property damage, the town is liable. If the animal itself is injured, the town is also liable. And yet if the town does not take responsibility for its wandering four footers who should be held accountable for disease control, citizen safety and outdoor maintenance?

A regional shelter carefully designed with the help of architect Roger Hoit and the Humane Society of the United States awaits approval and land but would certainly provide a place for the care and holding of stray dogs and cats. The Hingham Animal League* is working to raise funds for its construction. A shelter would be an obvious first place to look for distraught pet owners, an educational center for potential pet owners, parents and children and an environment in which disease could be detected and quarantined, noise could be controlled and records could be kept. Finally, a shelter serving Cohasset, Hingham and Hull would mean a second chance for the growing number of animals who for one reason or another find themselves homeless.

*The Hingham Animal League is a non-profit organization formed in 1988 to assist the towns of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull in establishing their animal shelter and to continue to educate the general public as to the proper care and treatment of animals and to provide assistance in the prevention of cruelty to animals.

Cohasset volunteers help staff agency

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"Guard your heart because it is the wellspring of life."
Book of Proverbs

Wellspring, a community-based outreach and advocacy center in Hull, is a place where residents of surrounding communities like Cohasset can go for help.

But now the center needs help itself to finish paying for renovations to its new offices.

"The renovations cost $40,000," said Joan Cellini, Wellspring director since 1987.

"We have raised $27,000 so far," she said. "But we are short $13,000."

Cohasset has been generous in offering assistance, according to Cellini.

"I'm grateful to the people in Cohasset who welcome me to their church and civic groups to tell them about us," said Cellini.

"I've been overwhelmed by their generosity in giving their time and donations.

"Anywhere I go to speak, people have been very gracious to me."

Local churches such as St. Stephen's and First Parish have all helped Wellspring do its job, she said.

"Our goal is to help people to help themselves because we realize many problems are a result of lack of opportunity or education," explained Cellini.

Wellspring serves hundreds of people from Hull, Cohasset, and Hingham as well as Quincy and Weymouth.

It has a food pantry and thrift shop, and offers counseling and support groups.

Wellspring was founded in 1985 by the Rev. Diane Edson of Hingham who, at the time , was studying to be ordained as an Episcopal minister.

Her husband, Robert, is pastor of St. John's Episcopal Church in Hingham.

Wellspring first opened as a thrift shop, which Rev. Diane Edson expected to last about a year, according to Cellini.

It functioned as a mission project of the Episcopal Church, according to Cellini, and offered such things as clothes and household items.

But because there was such a need, the thrift shop grew, according to Cellini.

A "drop-in" site for people who were lonely and isolated also developed, with counseling and referral services.

Instituted as well were a children's program and food pantry.

When Rev. Edson was ordained, she founded St. Nicholas Church, Hull,where she became pastor.

As her responsibilities at the church grew to full time, Rev. Edson started a search for a new director of Wellspring.

Cellini, who has a degree in pastoral care and community planning and human services management, was selected.

A lifelong Hull resident, she started Nov. 1, 1987, as director of the center, which is now no longer under the umbrella of the Episcopal Church.

Wellspring was then located in one small store at 754 Nantasket Ave.

"The board of directors knew it was too small," said Cellini. "And I realized the need immediately.

"I realized it was much too small, and began to look for larger space," she said.

"I also saw that many social service programs were having problems with affordable rent.

"So, we decided to get large enough space for the thrift shop, a community room and six other agencies.

"We decided to rent two stores side by side (at 814 Nantasket Ave.) which we are renovating."

"By sharing expenses, we have affordable rent," she said.

Wellspring's clients have tripled since Cellini became director, she said.

Luckily, the donations have tripled as well, but more money is always needed.

In addition to Cellini and another paid employee, there are about 30 area residents who volunteer their time on a regular basis.

One of them is Janna Oddleifson of Hingham, who teaches adult literacy on a one-to-one basis.

"It's my field," said Oddleifson, a member of Wellspring's board of directors and a teacher at Curry College.

"I've been working for a long time with students with reading problems and learning difficulties," she said.

Her involvement with Wellspring grew out of her concern for the large number of adults with literacy problems.

"I was aware of Wellspring, and realized a community-based center was an ideal setting for that kind of work,"she said.

Oddleifson went to Cellini about a year ago, and did a literacy needs assessment.

"We decided there probably were people who could benefit from something life this," said Oddleifson.

"We try to work with what people's needs are. It's not a class per se."

The people in the program have a mixture of needs, she said.

"One woman has only lived in this country for 10 years; two other people were educated but didn't learn to read well enough," said Oddleifson.

Oddleifson noted that another Hingham resident, Allan Viden, a high school English teacher in Hull, is also involved in the literacy program.

She said the center would like to start a training program for more teachers, but there is no money for materials .

Participants in the literacy program are asked to pay if they can.

"If they have a job, we ask them to contribute. If not, they help out in other ways.

"That's nice - then they are involved."

Oddleifson said she is involved because she feels people should use their expertise to address these kind of problems.

"It would be nice to be paid, but I really enjoy working with these people, too," she said.

"It's kind of inspiring to see how they cope with life in such unique ways.

"I really enjoy it. I've enjoyed every person I've worked with.

"There's a tremendous need also , and I think that motivates everyone involved in literacy work.

"You get rewards seeing people get better and improve."

She added that Noble's Camera in Hingham helps the program by providing free developing for photographs taken as teaching materials for the literacy program.

Oddleifson describes Wellspring as "very genuine."

"Joan Cellini has tried to make it something that is growing from within, not just imposed, " she said.

"People go in and can get immediate response if they are having difficulty. There is not a lot of red tape."

"It 's a place deserving of support."

Oddleifson feels many more people in Hingham would like to support a program like Wellspring, but they aren't aware of the center.

"People have been supportive of these kind of efforts if they know about them," she said.

"And we really need the support."

Donations may be sent to 754 Nantasket Ave., Hull.

Community Garden Club wins award in flower show

For the first time in eight years, the Community Garden Club of Cohasset entered the Amateur Horticulture Section of the New England Spring Flower Show and was delighted to receive a second award red ribbon.

The theme, "A Visit to Grandmother's Greenhouse," was staged in an 8' x 6' east facing Plant Room with 25 plants from members' windowsills and greenhouses. It featured antique accessories, a brass birdcage with two parakeets, and antique toys evidencing the presence of a grandchild.

Only one plant, a topiary English ivy, was purchased for the exhibit (three months in advance, as required). The balance were on loan from members which gave evidence of their horticultural skills and also kept total costs under $100. Even the brick flooring was kindly loaned by Plymouth Quarries in Quincy.

Although the club has won many awards for entries in previous New England Spring Flower Shows, none of the present committee had ever worked on one before. They found the experience to be great fun, lots of hard work and most rewarding.

A large committee labored many weeks under the direction of President Phyllis Peck. Chairmen of the various committees included: Plant Search: Ginny Riley; Nomenclature and Dress Rehearsal: Noel Manion; Theme, Design and Properties: Janet Amiri, Didi Nicynski, Suzanne Moyer; Plant Selection: Annette Sechen, Phyllis Peck; Committee Selection: Mary Larson; Set-Up: Rosie Dole, Lee Androski, Therese D'Urso; Watering: Leslie Fallon, Mary Hickey; Dismantling: Betty O'Sullivan.

Despite late arrival, CHS gymnast ranks high in state

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

By arriving one-hour and a-half late for the Mass. State Individual gymastics' chamionships at Algonquin Regional High School (Northboro) March 4, Cohasset's Michelle Hartley had less than twenty minutes to warm up for the prestigious tournament or face a withdrawal. Two years ago, Hartley was forced to quit due to an injury she suffered during the state meet.

As a result of her quick preparation, Hartley finished as the state's seventh-best gymnast among 78 girls competing in the meet. Moreover, it was the highest ranking ever for a Cohasset High gymnast.

"I was glad to perform in the states, but, truthfully, I could have done much better," said Hartley, who explained that the school bus got lost in finding the place. "Overall, I was pleased with my effort. It definitely gives me an incentive to place higher next year."

Hartley did, however, capture third place in the uneven bars by recording a 8.6 score. Freshman Tammy Noel of Dracut took first with a 9.1, edging out Norwood's Karen Olsson (the eventual overall state champion) by five-hundredths of a point.

Other events where Hartley finished in the top ten include—floor exercise (8.7), beam (8.15) and vault (8.35).

"She did a terrific job considering she could have been a last-minute scratch due to the problems getting there," said Cohasset coach Ruthann Sargent. "It was a good meet for her, but certainly not her best. I thought she had a chance to finish fourth, fifth or sixth because she was better than them. However, she was happy as well as her parents with the performance."

Sargent added that she brought 10 members of this year's Cohasset squad along for the purpose of giving them exposure to the state-level competition. But, Sargent admitted the obvious reason they were there was to root for Hartley.

"I just want to thank the team, my parents and coach Sargent for their support at the meet. Without coach Sargent's help, I don't think I would have gotten this far. I also want to thank Tara Gallagher's (an eighth-grader on the club who is a possible heir apparent to Hartley) mom for buying me balloons and flowers," said Hartley.

At the moment, Hartley trains five days a week at the Ellis School of Gymnastics in Braintree. Now that the high school meets are over for the season, Hartley continues to compete in meets that are sponsored by the USGF (United States Gymnastics Federation), running from March to mid-May.

Even though he did not make it to the final round of the New England Wrestling Championships at Glastonbury, CT, March 4, Cohasset's Paul Froio was elated that he had fulfilled his yearlong dream of competing against the best wrestlers in New England.

"Since the state meet last year where I had won only one match, I wanted to perform at the next level," said the CHS senior. "When you arrive at this level, you then realize you are that good to compete with them. Once you compete with them, you know you have a chance to win."

In his 160-pound match with the New Hampshire state champion, Froio lost on a controversial decision. With 15 seconds left in the match, the official rewarded the N.H. wrestler a point on an illegal move made by Froio.

"I didn't want to go into overtime, so I tried to break away from his hold with my forearm. I thought the referee would give me a point for my escape, but he said I used my hand instead of the forearm to get free. I knew I couldn't use my hand, but he didn't see it that way. He ruled that I was trying to gash his face. With 10 seconds left, I didn't have any time to pick up a point," explained Froio.

Brett Janis of Essex Junction, VT was the eventual 160 champion.

Froio had qualified for the All-New England for being a finalist in the Division Two State (MA) Championships held last week. He lost to Norwell's archrival Ron Depasa, who also defeated Froio in the Div. 2 South Sectionals two weeks ago.

"After I defeated the defending state champion (Tom Aylward of Tewksbury, 5-3), I knew I was going to face him again. He (Depasa) had an easier bracket.

Froio added that he was delighted on how the season went this year.

"The whole team got together to have a fine season (10-5-1). We had seven guys make the states, which is a great accomplishment. We had a lot of guys, especially Pat O'Connor, Bill Baird and Nate Froio, who contributed to our success this year. They were instrumental in some of our key victories," said Froio, who captained the football team last fall where he rushed over 1,000 yards (1150 to be exact) on the ground, but was named to the South Shore League all-star squad as a defensive back. "Coach (Torin) Sweeney deserves a lot of credit, too. He taught me everything I know in the six years he has been my coach."

Froio plans to wrestle along with playing football in college, but realizes he will have to choose one sport if the workload becomes too hectic. "I will give it a shot to do both sports," he said.

As for now, Froio will forego a spring sport in order to relax. "I want to continue to lift weights, but, most of all, I'm going to enjoy taking a break and having some fun as well."

Soccer uniform day March 18

With 355 players, a record number, Cohasset's spring youth soccer team will kick off the 1989 season on Saturday, March 18 with the town's second annual Uniform Day. Uniform Day activities will include the taking of team pictures, and a mini-clinic with a Bolts player.

The Uniform Day clinic and photo session will begin at 10:30 in the morning at the Cohasset High School gymnasium, town coordinator Larry Shultz announced. "We'd like the coaches and players to be on time," he said, "and to either be wearing their uniforms, or to have them to change into when they get there."

Cohasset's teams, which play in the Coastal League, an association of southeastern Massachusetts towns stretching from Hingham to Plymouth, begin their seasons the weekend of April 1 and 2. Each team plays a 10-game schedule, with home games at Milliken Field.

"We're fielding 20 teams this year," said Shultz, "and we're scrambling to find enough hours in the day to fit all the games onto the one field available to us. Soccer has captured this town's imagination, and it's a pity we lack the facilities to completely capitalize on this interest."

This will be the second year that Pike, the Bolt standout, has appeared at the Cohasset spring kick-off event.

COOKING AS ENTERTAINMENT
A relatively recent phenomenon in kitchen design is the kitchen that absorbs guests into the family kitchen. The result is known as the "entertain-in" kitchen. This is a large room that is not just designed for regular meals, but for hosting dinner parties. Those who entertain frequently want to share the delights of skilled food preparation with their guests. The entertain-in kitchen allows for uninterrupted conversation between the cook in a well-appointed, spotlighted "stage" and the guests comfortably seated in the "audience." Each component and material of this type of kitchen is selected as much for its aesthetic appeal as its utilitarian potential. The end result is a kitchen that is largely undifferentiated from the living room in terms of its look, design, materials, and boundaries. It is the most gracious of kitchens.
Some kitchens can handle the expansion into an entertaining unit, while others strive for enough work space to please its cook. When you come to KITCHEN DESIGN ASSOCIATES you'll find a helpful, cooperative staff who will aim for the type of kitchen your room and your lifestyle will hold. We take a realistic look at your requests and honestly tell you what can be accomplished. We feature Poggenpohl and Millbrook fine cabinets. Come to us at 962 Washington St., Rt. 53, Hanover. Tel. 617-826-4121.
HINT: Entertain-in kitchens often use peninsulas to effectively define the cooking from the eating areas.

Open house for Tebbetts

At a recent election campaign event at the home of Sue and Galt Grant on Main Street, Ned Tebbetts, a candidate for selectman, stressed that he is uniquely qualified for one of the two selectman positions.

Tebbetts' career work has significantly involved financial management and the budget process.

He emphasized the need for understanding the long-term implications of decisions that must be made by the Board of Selectmen. Tebbetts believes that the current Cohasset budget crisis raises the liklihood of several more Proposition 2½ overrides this year. As "the Taxpayer's Advocate," he believes the constraints of Proposition 2½ give local voters important fiscal controls over the budget process. Tebbetts believes that voters need to understand the implications of Proposition 2½ votes, so that they can make informed decisions at both the town meeting and in the voting booth.

Tebbetts has served nine years on the Capital Budget Committee and this has given him an unusual opportunity to do the long-term planning so vital to the town at this time. Tebbetts, as Chairman of the Capital Budget Committee, stressed that his committee has made financial projections for several future years in order to prioritize capital needs. As a goal for the Board of Selectmen, he advocates this same kind of efficient planning and goal-setting.

Tebbetts will be speaking about his concerns for the taxpayer and the town at several events planned for the coming weeks. He hopes to learn more about citizens' concerns at a town-wide open house at the American Legion Hall Friday March 31, at 7 p.m. Everyone is invited and encouraged to attend.

Information about events can be obtained by calling Pat Laugelle at 383-1737.

Kane supports aid

Selectman candidate Charles M. Kane recently sent a letter to State Representative Mary Jeannette Murray in support of her efforts to increase state aid to our cities and towns. As debate on the fiscal year 90 budget continues, there have been several amendments to increase local aid which has been level funded by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Kane said, "the state should not balance their budget on the backs of our local communities and their programs."

The lack of increase in local aid will mean that local programs will be cut back or funded through property taxes. This will put a greater strain on the towns ability to meet its fiscal responsibilities.

Kane also supports an increase in lottery funds that will be generated by the addition of Sunday drawings for the Daily Numbers Game. "This innovative amendment is expected to increase state local aid and by 15 to 30 million dollars," said Kane.

"If cities and towns are restricted to increasing their tax levy by 2½ percent than the state should make every effort to increase local aid by at least 2½ percent this year," added Kane.

"In these tough fiscal times, we need innovative ideas and programs to balance the budget. The state should be an active participant in theese resolutions. I applaud the efforts of Rep. Murray and realize that her continued efforts will be essential to the success of Cohasset's fiscal stability," added Kane.

Coffee for candidate Kidder

The Committee to Elect Ralph Kidder as a member of the school committee announced that the second in a series of meet-the-candidate coffees will be held at the home of Sue and Jack McNamara, hosted by Sue McNamara, Donna O'Donnell and Mary Margaret Senechal.

At the coffee hosted by Karen and Rick Kirkendall, Kidder stated that he brings a unique blend of experience to the School Committee position. "I am currently employed as corporate controller of a publicly-traded company, where I am responsible for budgeting and financial reporting," he said, "but I spent more than fifteen years as an education administrator, teacher and consultant, so I bring a business as well as an educational perspective to the Committee."

Kidder has three children who range in age from four to nine years and is married to Linda Keller, a local artist and co-coordinator of Project Playground.

The Committee to Elect Ralph Kidder is currently accepting campaign contributions, which should be made payable to the Committee and forwarded to Karen Kirkendall, Treasurer, 83 Atlantic Avenue, Cohasset.

Barrow forms committee

Richard P. Barrow of 283 King Street is a candidate for the Cohasset Board of Selectmen in the April 8, 1989 Annual Town Elections.

His committee to elect chairman is Mary Deveney Reppucci; Tanna Kasperowicz, 172 South Main Street, is treasurer. Other members of the committee are Robert V. Davenport (the Sohier Street Davenport), Fred Huntwork, Tony Fasciano, and Judy Volungis. Campaign donations are always appreciated.

Barrow has a long history of involvement in town affairs through both elected and appointed town positions. He has actively pursued good government through bylaw changes. In 1981 Barrow was instrumental in expanding the Cohasset Board of Selectmen from three to five members. Also, he wrote the town towing and public drinking bylaws; and the Sandy Beach bylaws.

Elected town memberships include Town Constable, 2 years; Recreation Commission, 15 yrs., 14 years as chairman.

Additionally, Barrow has served as an appointed member of the Harbor Study Committee for 6 years, a member of the Government Island Study Committee for 10 years; member of the board of the Cohasset Swim Center, 6 years; and a member of the Boy Scouts of America Council.

A veteran of World War II, Barrow served as a Seaman in the U.S. Navy for three years. He is a member of the American Legion and a life member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

A Cohasset native, Barrow has been a member of the Cohasset Police Department for 39 years. He was promoted to sergeant in 1967, a supervisory position. He is a graduate of the Massachusetts State Police Academy, and has taken courses at Northeastern University pertaining to his police duties. In 1967 he passed the Civil Service examination for police chief.

Barrow has served as president of the Cohasset Police Association numerous times over his career, and has also acted as negotiator for contracts and as a lobbyist at the state level.

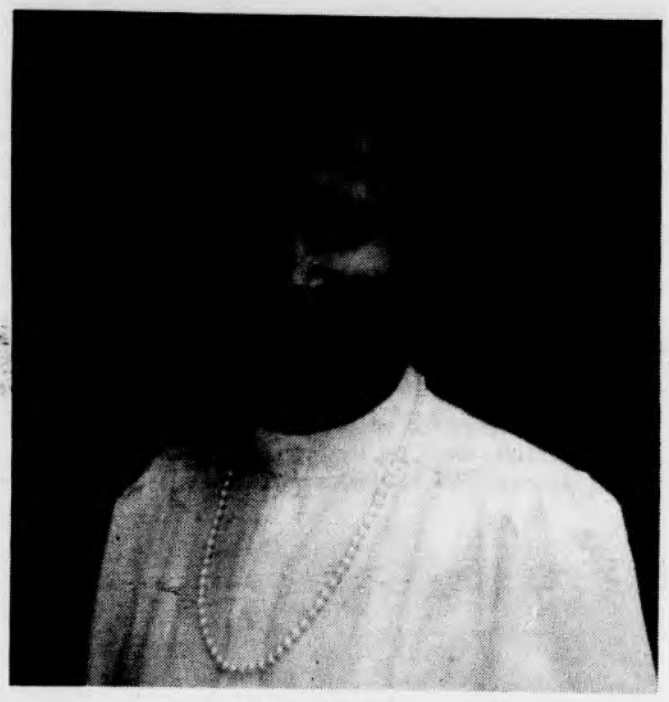
Kornet cites experience

The experience of serving ten years on the Cohasset School Committee makes Diana Kornet a strong candidate for the Board of Selectman in Cohasset according to the Campaign Committee to Elect Diana Kornet.



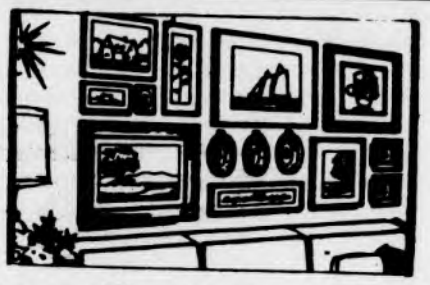
As a school committee member, and serving this year chairman of the committee, she has helped manage a budget in the $5 million range — nearly half of the town's entire budget, and she has participated in major contract negotiations and worked with various unions which are part of the school department.

Throughout the last decade, Kornet has interfaced closely with nearly every town board, including the board of selectmen, advisory committee, capital budget committee, and personnel board. She believes it is essential to develop more cooperation and improve the communication among the various town boards. "Most of these positions are filled by volunteers," she says, "and it is frustrating and non-productive for the right hand not to know what the left hand is doing."

The scope of Kornet's responsibilities as school committee member includes working knowledge of financial, legal, personnel, and environmental issues, particularly as they pertain to the town. Having been on the School Committee during the passage of Proposition 2½, as well as during its first override, she has first-hand knowledge of the impact of such decisions, as well as other timely tax and legislative developments and the complex issues they raise.

It is essential that each member who is elected to the Cohasset Board of Selectmen has thorough comprehension of such issues, for they are crucial to the sound short-term and long-term management of the town. Kornet is experienced in understanding and analyzing these issues and their consequences. Her proven competence in making recommendations and decisions in these areas would be an asset to the Board of Selectmen and ultimately to the citizens of Cohasset.

A 1966 graduate of Connecticut College with a degree in Biology, Kornet currently works part-time at The Rugged Bear, a children's clothing store in Assinippi. In addition, she is a part-time travel agent, and she has a real estate broker's license. She and her family have lived in Cohasset for 13 years. Her husband, John, owns Global Perspectives, Inc., a small financial consulting firm in Boston. They have four children: a son, 20, and three daughters, ages 18, 16 and 8.



Diana Kornet

The Campaign Committee to Elect Diana Kornet is chaired by Ruth Wilcox of 388 Beechwood St. Treasurer is Sarah Pease of 3 Sankey Rd. Other committee members include Joan and George Kovach, Jane and Chris Kyricos, Priscilla and Ed Long, Marilyn Hobson, Joanne Churchill Hubble, Sue and Jack McNamara, Barbara Meehan, Ken Wilcox and John Kornet.

Several coffees to visit the candidate are planned. The first will be held at the home of Ruth and Ken Wilcox on Sunday, March 19, at 4 p.m. The public is welcome.

PSO members voice opposition

During last Thursday's monthly meeting of the PSO, board members signed petitions urging restoration and level funding of the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities in the state budget. These petitions will be sent to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and Sen. William Golden.

Under the proposed state budget approved Wed., Feb. 22 by the House Ways and Means Comm., the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities would be completely eliminated at the end of this June. The Mass. Council on the Arts provides crucial financial assistance which enables everyone to enjoy and benefit from the arts. The arts in Mass. are essential to the cultural and economic vitality of the state and to the education of our children.

With the help of the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities, over 300,000 Mass. children each year are introduced to the arts and sciences through dance, theater, opera and music performances and visits to art and science museums. Funding from the council helps reduce the admission prices for all the arts, and partial-funds performance groups.

The Cohasset PSO requests that you join them in writing to your representatives immediately to urge the reinstatement of the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities.

Talent pool challenge

Teams of young Future Problem Solvers from Cohasset's Talent Pool Classes travelled to Brandeis University on March 4 for the first-ever Regional Bowl of the Massachusetts Future Problem Solving Program.

The youngsters who are in Grades 5 and 6 at the Deer Hill School in Cohasset joined together with some fifty other teams from throughout this region of Massachusetts to solve a problem set in the 21st Century dealing with nutrition.

Future Problem Solving is a nationwide program which encourages creative and critical thinking. Teams of four students learn a six-step problem solving process which they apply to a variety of problems facing society in the future — such as energy sources, illiteracy, and space travel.

In past years, students in Massachusetts have worked on three practice problems during the school year.

Talent pool problem solvers: (l to r) Lily Faulhaber, Megan McNamara, Danielle Nohe, Laura Siotnick, and alternate Michael Kasmeyer.

Fifth and sixth grade talent pool students: Ann Dane, Conor Magnan, Ryan Sawchuk, and Tom Lavoie.

Team problem booklets are critiqued by trained evaluators, and the highest scoring teams are invited to the State Bowl in the spring.

This year, three Regional Bowls were set up to allow students involved in the program to have an opportunity to attend a Bowl and participate in competitive problem solving. The students worked in classrooms without their team coach, and had two hours to brainstorm problems and determine a best solution to a situation involving nutrition that they have not seen before.

Ann Hoyle, Director of the Massachusetts Future Problem Solving Program, notes that at the Regional Bowls, students also had the opportunity to create a five-minute skit to "sell" their best solution. These solution selling presentations were judged on the afternoon of the Bowl.

The highest scoring teams at the Regional Bowls will be invited to the State Bowl at M.I.T. on April 29.

The Regional Bowl was open to the public at 1 p.m. Friends were invited to observe the solution selling presentations and the closing flag ceremony, at which the teams from Cohasset were introduced. The teams chosen by the Talent Pool members were: Grade 6: Ann Dane and Tom Lavoie; Grade 5: Conor Mangan and Ryan Sawchuk; Grade 5 team: Lily Faulhaber, Megan McNamara, Danielle Nohe, and Laura Siotnick.

The students would like to thank Mrs. Sawchuk and Mrs. Nohe who gave up their Saturday to drive and proctor the Future Problem Solving Bowl.

For more information on the Regional Bowl or on Future Problem Solving, contact Ann Hoyle, (508) 384-3837, or Mary McLean, Enrichment Coordinator, Deer Hill School, Cohasset, MA (383-6117), Future Problem Solving Coach.

N.E. Telephone visits CHS

For the second year in a row 9th grade Humanities students were treated to fortune cookies and the key to success. This experience was part of a two day program called "Choices" which was presented by Mrs. Pat Pizzi, a member of the New England Telephone Co. Because of their concern for the future of American students which is jeopardized by high drop out rates and poor educational choices, the telephone company chose to offer this program to improve student awareness and attitudes. Employing techniques, such as role playing, Mrs. Pizzi helped the students realize that they constantly make choices in and out of school, which affect their future. By the end of the two day session students were thinking of the choices they make for their free time and aware that self-discipline is the key to success.

Chess tournament in grade 6

Mr. Becker's Room has been a very busy place recently.

Mr. Becker, a sixth grade teacher, is holding a chess tournament after school. Interested students from the fifth and sixth grades are eligible to participate.

If a student wins, he or she advances to the winner's bracket. If a student looses, he or she retreats to the looser's bracket. After the six or seven elimination rounds, the chess player with the most victories is the winner of the tournament.

The matches are played once a week after school. It is Mr. Becker's first year having a tournament, although he has held a chess club before.

Music in schools celebrated

Cohasset celebrated National "Music in our Schools month" with a festive Osgood/Deer Hill/High School choral music concert March 8.

School Committee Chairman Diana Kornet introduced the multi-faceted components of Cohasset's music program, beginning with the Osgood Singers, a select performance group of 32 2nd and 3rd graders, who sang, under the direction of Jack MacInnis, Elementary Music Director, "Heigh-Ho" from "Snow White," "Walking in the Air" from "The Snowman," "I Don't Need Anything But You" from "Annie" and "When You Wish Upon a Star" from "Pinocchio."

Senior Celia Mullen accompanied both the Osgood Singers and the Deer Hill Concert Choir, a select 63 member group of 4th, 5th, and 6th graders, who performed "Song of the Presidents," a musical tribute to the entire list of U.S. presidents, "One Moment in Time," and "America, The Dream Goes On."

The High School Show Choir exploded into the auditorium with their original blend of music, costumes, and choreography — special thanks to Student Teacher Rachael Grabke — sparking the evening with "We Go Together" and "Hot, Hot, Hot." The Jr. Chorus, a three part harmony group, delighted the audience with its jazzy "Scat Got Your Tongue" and "Glory of Love." Mrs. Kornet announced recent honors accorded this choral group: members Meredith Hansen and Trevor Stockinger invited to participate in the Jr. District Chorus Festival, and Shongranette Burke-Holman, Meredith Hansen, Claudine Johnson, Keri Richards, Maria Kierce, Joe Andrade, and Trevor Stocking invited to the Jr. SEMSBA Chorus Festival.

The theme from "Phanton of the Opera" and "That's What Love is all About" showcased the talents of the Sr. Chorus, a four part harmony group. This chorus will also perform Handel's "Messiah" Weds., March 22nd, at Silver Lake High School in Pembroke and will travel to Washington, D.C., April 28-30 to perform with 15,000 high school singers from around the country in America Sings, a benefit for homeless children. Members Maggie Moore, Nancy Riley, Ali Welz, and Paolo Baca and accompanist Celia Mullen have been selected to participate in Sr. SEMSBA Chorus, this year directed by High School Music Director Bryan Marks.

In the finale, 170 voices on stage and the National Music Educator's theme song, "All Together Now Sing," a tribute to the spirit of togetherness and cooperation so essential in creating music. The magic of singing with the high school "stars" filled the eyes of the Osgood Singers as they paraded off stage, straight to the Arts Boosters' refreshments.

Ninth graders visit to MFA

When ninth graders study the classical world, their exposure to ancient ideas can take many forms. Recently, Mrs. Terry who is a guide at the Museum of Fine Arts presented a slide show to the ninth graders in order to prepare the students for a visit to the classical collection of the museum. By illustrating and explaining important features of Greek and Roman art and architecture she helped them to appreciate what they would see. Then on Wednesday, March 8, the students received guided tours through the classical collection and were able to apply what they had learned about mythology, Julius Caesar, and history. In addition, students have been preparing their classical projects, visuals and speeches, which will begin on the Ides of March.

Those with a first quarter Medex bill due date of Feb. 1 must have their application received by March 1, 1989, and their coverage will begin March 1, 1989.

Those with a March 1, 1989 due date must have their application received by April 1, 1989, and their coverage will begin on June 1, 1989.

Those with a March 1, 1989 due date must have their application received by April 1, 1989, and their coverage will begin on June 1, 1989. Quarterly Rates — Medex 2: $95.19, Medex Standard: $116.49, Medex 3: $159.96.

For persons who declined Medex coverage when they first became entitled to it, or dropped it, Massachusetts Blue Cross and Blue Shield with hold an enrollment for Medex through March.

Coverage for persons enrolling in the annual open enrollment period will take effect June 1, 1989. Medex is a supplement to Medicare, the Federal government's hospital and medical insurance program. Under Medex, there are three options to choose from: (1) Medex Standard does not cover the Medicare hospital calendar year deductible or the $75 deductible for in-hospital service of physicians and other providers. It will pay the 20% of Medicare allowed charges — after the deductible — for in-patient services and prescription drugs. The cost for Medex Standard is $116.49 quarterly. (2) Medex 2 covers the Medicare in-patient hospital calendar year deductible — $560 in 1989, also the $75 calendar year deductible for in-patient services and other providers' charges, and the 20% of Medicare allowed charges for physicians and other providers' inpatient services.

It does not cover prescription drugs or in-patient private duty nursing, both of which are covered by Medex Standard and Medex 3.

The cost for Medex 2 is $95.19 quarterly. (3) Medex 3 covers the Medicare hospital and in-patient doctor bill deductible and inpatient physician co-insurance amount. It also covers Part B in-patient services of other providers, prescription drugs and in-patient private duty nurse service. The cost of Medex 3 is $156.96 quarterly.

Today there are nearly 400,000 persons age 65 and over in Massachusetts who have Medex coverage, including a number of persons under the age of 65, who became entitled to Medicare in the 25th month of receiving Social Security disability benefits.

Application forms may be obtained by writing to Medex P.O. Box 840, Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Massachusetts, Boston, 02103 or submitting a coupon which will appear in several newspapers. Additional information can be obtained by calling Ms. Pat Ryan, Shine Coordinator on Fridays, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at 383-9112.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL SECURITY & MEDICARE:

Most of you have been receiving a large envelope in the mail from the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare. The lengthy letter is signed by James Roosevelt, Chairman. On television last week, one of the programs discussed this committee at length, and the opinion of those on the program was that this was a misleading committee. If any of us want to write to our Senator our our Congressman, we can do so without paying $10 a year to become a member of this organization. By using a promiment name of Roosevelt and fancy petition, it looks official. I urge all of you to do what I did and throw it in the wastebasket. Save your $10.

NEW PROGRAM:

The South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell is offering a "Magic Carpet Luncheon" to Russia — a lecture and slide show hosted by Joan Chatfield, followed by a Russian luncheon coordinated by the Junior League of Boston. Ms. Catfield will take you to see spectacular Lake Baikal, 25 million years old and 1 mile deep which holds 20% of the world's fresh water — visit cities of Moscow and Leningrad in the multi-media presentation. When: Friday, April 7, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Where: So. Shore Science Center. Cost $7.50 (members) and $9.50 (non-members). Call today at 1-659-2559. Don't miss out on this wonderful day!

Ripley Rd. nursing official honored

The year 1959 was a very good year for town of Cohasset. This was the year Walter and Thelma Harrold moved here from Ohio.

Thelma has celebrated her 77th birthday March 10 and is still active in the Cohasset and Scituate communities. She is a member of the 1st Congregational Church of Beechwood.

In August of 1959 Thelma started cooking at the Ripley Road Nursing Home. She has a talent for getting the job done and being so well at her job and taking control of situations in and out of her job description that she proved herself to be an asset to the home thus making the first step toward administration.

In 1970 Thelma became administrator. Although a new owner stepped in in 1977 she still remained. She has always done much more than her job required. When we were short staffed she filled in in just about every phase to make sure that the home was run at its best. Thelma also gave more to the residents, making their stays enjoyable and more like home.

Funds for running nursing homes are never what they should be, so to give more to the happiness of the residents Thelma has had fairs on the grounds of the home. She has raised money to buy things for the home and to take residents on outings, such as an afternoon boat cruise from Hingham Harbor.

For the 30 years of continuous dedication to the Ripley Road Nursing Home, on behalf of the residents, staff and community. Thank you!

Thelma Harrold listened to a chorus of 'Happy Birthday' during the surprise party given in her honor. (Staff photo/Buzz Wadsworth)

SCHEDULE OF HOLY WEEK AND EASTER SERVICES

Palm Sunday, March 19, Blessing of Palms and Holy Eucharist at 8 and 10 a.m. There will be a procession with palms from the courtyard to the front of the church, singing along to the carillon, at the 10 a.m. service.

Monday through Friday, March 20 through 24, there will be Morning Prayer in the chapel at 6:30 a.m.

Maundy Thursday, March 23, an instructed Eucharist will begin at 6:30 p.m. commemorating the last supper. Following the Eucharist there will be an Agape (self-giving love) meal to give expression to our call to serve ("For who is greater — the one who sits at table or the servant who waits on him? Surely the one who sits at table. Yet here am I among you like a servant" — Lk. 22:27). At the conclusion to the Agape meal we return to a darkened church for the stripping of the altar.

Good Friday, March 24, a three-hour service from noon to 3 p.m. commemorates the time that according to tradition Jessus hung upon the cross. Prayer Book worship, the reading of the Passion, meditations and periods of silence will help us reflect upon the meaning of Jesus' self-giving love for us. From 2 to 3 p.m. on this day there will be a Children's Good Friday service. Children will meet in Walton Rodgers Hall and walk though the various events of the last days of Jesus' life. Singing and crafts make the story come to life.

Holy Saturday, March 25, Morning Prayer commemorating Jesus' lying in the tomb takes place at 9 a.m.

Easter Vigil, Saturday, March 25 at 7:30 p.m., a candlelight service begins with the church in darkness. We light the Paschal Candle, celebrate a baptism and Holy Eucharist. After the Vigil Service there will be an Easter party in the Bartow Room.

Easter Morning, Sunday, March 26 at 8 and 10 a.m. Celebrations of Holy Eucharist will be held with choir and special music at both services. God in Christ has made a new beginning!

EASTER FLOWER MEMORIALS

The flowers at Easter time in the church are especially beautiful. If you would like to donate flowers in memory of a loved one you may mail or bring the contribution to the parish office along with the names you wish to have remembered. These will be printed in the Easter bulletin and remembered in the beauty of our worship that day.

REHEARSAL FOR PALM SUNDAY — Because the children will be an important part of the Palm Sunday service, it is vital that they prepare for their processional and tableaus. There will be a rehearsal with Mr. Leavitt on Saturday, March 18 from 9:30 - 10:30 a.m. to practice the song. The children will need to be at the church by 9:00 a.m. on Palm Sunday (3/19) to rehearse with the adult choir and review their positions in the tableau. Please make every effort to have your child present at these rehearsals. RBM

SPECIAL PALM SUNDARY ART SHOW — The Board of Deacons will be sponsoring an "Inspiration Through Art" Show on Palm Sunday, March 19, following the Worship Service. There will be a prior sign-up sheet in Bates Hall and we invite everyone to consider contributing a "work of art" that has inspired and strengthened their faith. This can be paintings, sculpture, poetry, music, refrigerator-art (children's art), special quotes or sayings, etc. "Curator" will be Deacon Bruce Doten. The art is to be brought in on Palm Sunday, before church and then may be taken home after the show. Please sign up this Sunday in order that we may share our inspirations with one another.

Selectmen support station renovations . . .

that it may be better to have all the items, including the air conditioning, communications equipment and furniture, done at one time.

"Psychologically, you should keep it under $700,000," advised selectmen chairman Burt Pratt.

"We'll continue to look at the figures, and see if we can bring it to $700,000 or just below," Moore said.

Moore and architect John Pinegar of Strekalovsky and Hoit, Hingham, showed the board blue prints of the plans.

The communications equipment, at a cost of $20,000, is needed, according to Moore.

She said that the current equipment is "20-some-odd years old."

Moore said the equipment would accommodate the 911 system.

Pinegar explained that a 10 percent contingency, amounting to $50,000, was included in the first cost estimate.

"There are always unforeseen contingencies, so you leave part in a contingency fund to cover yourself," he said.

"It may be that you will have no surprises.

"But remodeling an existing structure, you always need some sort of a contingency fund."

Pinegar said that 10 percent is a "good, average figure to work with."

Pratt noted that the contingency fund for the $1.9 million addition to town hall was $50,000.

"This was a new building," answered Moore. "We're dealing with a different set of circumstances."

Pinegar noted that it is very difficult to go back for more money once a project is progressing.

"So many different things can take place, even with good drawings," commented Roger Hoit.

"This is a wise move to make."

"I don't know anything that was built in the last 35 years that they didn't come back and ask for more money," said selectman Rocco Laugelle.

"I think the committee has done very well."

"I'm glad to see the 10 percent contingency. I hope to God we don't have to spend it."

In response to a question from selectman Martha Gjesteby, Moore said that a door between the police and fire stations is included in the plans.

"As we get into construction, if we find out it isn't needed, then it can be eliminated," said Moore, who set the cost at about $2500.

Also included in plans are a safety pole for the fire department at a cost of about $12,000, said Moore.

"The committee tried to work from the most efficient way to get from A to B to meet the emergency," she said.

"About 20 firemen persuaded me to support the pole," said selectman James Gallagher.

"It beats the stairs...A matter of seconds can mean life or death."

Moore said that almost all the firemen use the pole.

Gallagher said the only aspect that concerned him was liability, "the injury factor."

Pinegar said that the mechanism around the pole works like a camera aperture.

He said the only way it is activated is by pressure on the pole.

Hoit added that there is much more chance of injury using stairs, than the pole.

Laugelle suggested that if the pole has to be eliminated, the direction of the two sets of stairs in the fire station be reversed.

"This is practically going to be a new station," he said.

"I can't see the pole being cut out really."

Moore noted that the plans for the station are designed for what the departments have now, according to the charge of the committee.

"We haven't planned for the future," she said.

Laugelle said that if the town grows in the future, another small station might be a possibility.

"My vote would never go to an addition to this building," he said.

"It's crowded there now."

Moore said the advisory committee requested a more accurate figure for the plans.

She said the capital budget committee recommended including the new furniture and communication system.

"We'll let you know our final figure," she told selectmen.

How the schools will fare . . .

Teacher, program cutbacks if override fails

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Defeat of a Proposition 2 1/2 override will mean the loss of 13 teachers in the school system, leaving elementary classrooms that average 30 students and more.

At least one school bus route will be eliminated.

In his report to the school committee Monday night, the superintendent said another option, closing the Osgood School, would only save about $90,000 for one year.

Calculating that an override defeat would mean a $400,000 cut in the school budget, Supt. Hart noted that even if a school was closed, "we'd still have $310,000 to go after we take that first disastrous step."

"Think about our teachers," committee member Barbara Bliss said," and what our students require with classes of 30 to 35 students. I hope the community understands how absolutely devastating it would be."

Nancy Sandell, a member of the committee, agreed. "The public needs to know that what was alright 30 years ago, is not alright now. Our childrens' learning needs are different - they need more individual attention. You can't do education justice by packing them into a classroom."

The superintendent said he was attempting to present an objective look at how a $400,000 cut would affect the proposed school budget for 1989-90. If a $680,000 town operating budget override does not succeed, he told the committee, it would impact the schools by 45 percent of that total.

In other words, he explained, if the override fails, the school budget will be limited to a one percent increase over this year's budget, or $167,000 more.

Supt. Hart would not identify teachers who would be cut from the system, but he noted that reductions would be made across the system. Supplies would be reduced by $20,000 and $15,000 would be taken from the athletic budget which would impact the number of coaches.

"It would also mean the reduction of at least one bus route," he said, "so that we'd have to

. . . in the future

Schools looking at the next five years

The process that began more than a year ago has resulted in a five-year plan of action for Cohasset's public school system.

The strategic plan is a comprehensive look into the future of Cohasset schools.

The school committee and administrators felt it was time to explore the strengths and weaknesses of the system and to establish a plan which addresses those concerns over a five-year period, Supt. Stephen Hart explained. A group of 40 administrators, school committee members, teachers, parents, students and community leaders met during a two-day session last summer to discuss those concerns and to implement a timetable in which the goals of the plan would be completed.

Included in the school's plan are six goals, including the best use of the school facilities, curriculum review and revitalization, developing local support for the public schools, and educating the public about the costs of providing public education. Methods for implementing those goals are contained in the study.

"Hopefully we will achieve all our objectives within a five-year period," committee member Barbara Bliss stated during Monday night's meeting. "The school committee has made a real commitment to this strategic plan."

The committee welcomes public comment on the plan. Copies are available at the superintendent's office and at the library. In addition, the Cohasset PSO will be sponsoring a school committee candidates' night March 28, during which Supt. Hart will outline the plan and answer questions from the audience.

Candidates debate override, etc.

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Candidates for selectmen, health board and sewer commission answered questions ranging from overrides to lights on the common to sewerage systems during a candidate's night March 15 at Kimball's-By-The-Sea.

The fourth annual event, sponsored by the chamber of commerce, was filmed by Continental Cablevision. It will be cablecast the evening of April 6 on Ch. 3.

Moderator Wig Pierson began the debate with opening statements by selectman candidates James Gallagher, Diana Kornet, Richard Barrow, Ned Tebbetts, and Charles Kane.

Barrow told the audience of about 50 people that he is a lifelong Cohasset resident who has been a member of the town's police department for 39 years.

A police sergeant, he said his strengths include drafting public bylaws on such things as towing and public drinking.

Barrow also said he has "a good, common sense approach to issues."

Tebbetts, a self-employed investment advisor, said his career has been focused on financial planning and budgetary processes.

"As chairman of the capital budget committee for five years, I've been concerned about careless

Advisors debate harbor mooring proposals

Advisory committee members said they will vote Thursday night, March 23, on whether or not to support three citizens petitions for town meeting, one of which would restore harbor moorings lost to residents last summer.

The articles would also restore lost places on the mooring waiting list, and provide a 30-day grace period for paying harbor fees and reaffirming places on the waiting list.

"The main reason we are here has more to do with fairness than it does with harbor policy," said proponent Al Moore.

"There was a great deal of confusion about the how the harbor lists were handled," said Moore, also a member of the planning board.

Moore said there were conflicting harbor regulations and town bylaws on such things as deadlines. One specified April 1, the other, June 1.

He also noted that a new harbor master came on board with a stricter style of enforcement.

"Out of the blue, there were efforts to step up enforcement, when half of the players didn't know what the rules were," he said.

"Even the harbor master and selectmen didn't know.

"There was total confusion.

"When the selectmen denied a grace period, I took great offense," continued Moore.

He was among some 58 people who lost their places on the mooring waiting list. Eight lost their moorings.

Some appealed the action to the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering. They have been allowed to use their moorings while the matter is being appealed.

"It was a very substantial number of people affected," said Moore.

"Why are we regulating ourselves to death?

Cohasset's week . . .

Arts lottery grant deadline

The Cohasset Arts Lottery Council announces that the deadline for the next distribution cycle is Friday, March 31.

Applications for grants are available at the Selectman's office at Town Hall. New application forms have been issued, so prior applicants should not use the old forms.

Completed applications should be returned to the Selectmens office, or to Karin Bartow, Chairman, Cohasset Arts Lottery Council, 48 Sohier Street.

Arts Lottery funds support individuals or organizations dedicated to the arts and humanities. However, funds may be awarded to non-profit, tax-exempt organizations or public agencies whose purpose does not include the arts if they embark on an arts activity. Applications from public agencies, such as a public school, library or municipality, must demostrate a new need, be a one-time expenditure, and be matched by other funds one-to-one. Projects must demonstrate benefit to the local community.

Funding will also be distributed under the PASS (Performing Arts Student Series) program. The purpose of this program is to fund tickets to performing arts events for public school children at the regular ticket price, or $5, whichever is less.

Schools may buy tickets from participating arts organizations and then apply to the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council for reimbursement. PASS rosters are available in each of the three Cohasset public schools.

For further information or questions, call Karin Bartow at 383-0572.

Use of town fields

The Tree & Park Department advises all groups using the town-owned fields that they will be closed for spring sports and practices until they are properly prepared.

A future announcement will be made on their progress, according to Peter Laugelle, superintendent of the tree and park department.

Tree trimming along streets

The Eastern Utility Company has contracted the Ashlund Tree Company to trim trees on Forest Avenue to North Main Street to the Cove Area for high tension wires.

The Tree Department is working with the utility company.

Questions regarding trees in front of your house may be forwarded to the Tree & Park Department at 383-6709.

New planning hours

Effective immediately, the new office hours for the Planning Department are as follows: Monday 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.; Tuesday 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.; Wednesday 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The telephone number is (617) 383-9900 Ext. 118.

Sgt. Noonan praised

Two Forestside Drive residents have written to selectmen calling Police Sgt. Brian Noonan a "good cop."

"As human tendencies would have it, most of us are quick to complain and hesitant to take the time to praise," said Charles and Geraldine Henry.

"Falling into this mold ourselves, we realize that this letter is long overdue," they said.

"We would like to call to your attention a member of the Cohasset Police Department who over the past few years has demonstrated to us what "good cop" should be like.

"Although the events and circumstances that called for his services need not be detailed here, we do want it to be known that Sgt. Brian Noonan is a person whose manner can give us cause for pride in our police force.

"On numerous occasions, his professionalism and concern has left us with admiration.

"We would request that our thoughts be conveyed to him and that this letter be entered into his service record."

A copy of the letter was also sent to the police chief.

Tree Dept. praised, too

The health agent has written to selectmen praising members of the tree and park department who helped the health board move into its offices recently.

"The board of health would like to inform you as to the excellence of service, consideration and cooperation and just 'darn' hard work that the tree and park department rendered in moving our offices," said Joseph R. Godzik.

"The young men involved really deserve a round of applause for their efforts," he said.

"It appeared that their attitude was to get the job done and do whatever is asked with no complaints.

"Although it was no easy task, our offices were completely moved in one day.

"And at the end of that time, as tired as they were, they were still pleasant and willing to put in an extra effort.

"Please extend our compliments to Supervisor Peter Laugelle and his crew for a job well done, and a sincere thank you."

Workshop, not meeting

The March 7 selectmen meeting did not constitute a violation of the open meeting law, according to Town Counsel Richard Henderson.

Henderson's opinion was stated in a letter in answer to town clerk Frances Marks.

"At the board of selectmen's meeting on March 6, the selectmen publicly announced the failure to post a separate meeting with certain state officials concerning low income housing and the awkwardness of having to cancel the meeting at such a late date," Henderson said.

"Accordingly, the selectmen agreed in public to treat the meeting as a workshop and to neither deliberate on any subject nor take any formal vote at the March 7 meeting.

"Additionally, because the board of selectmen discussed the following evening's meeting at the regular meeting of March 6, the meeting of March 7 was almost in the nature of an adjourned session."

CHS survives 'marathon' festival

For Cohasset High School's Ron Emmons, last weekend's Boston Globe Drama Festival was "a wonderful marathon."

And although Cohasset did not return home with the top prize, that was never really their intent.

"The kids love doing this," Emmon said this week, rested after a hectic schedule of rehearsals before the final performance. "It's an honor to be there in Boston, so we never go there with the attitude, 'we have to win.' It's just fun being there."

The 'fun' Emmons decribed began last Friday when the Cohasset cast and crew from "This is a Test," departed from Cohasset at 5:45 a.m. for a 7 a.m. technical rehearsal at the John Hancock Hall in Boston. Their actual performance was at two that afternoon, and the group stayed in Boston until the last show ended at 10:15 that night.

"It's not exactly a spring - it's more like a marathon," Emmons recalled. The director of the Cohasset Drama Workshop also noted that the cast gave their best performance in Boston.

"We also had the best audience reaction. I think they were really pleased with their work," he said.

The director never gave much thought to winning first place. Although Cohasset was chosen last year as an alternate in the state finals, it is an extremely grueling competition against much larger high schools.

"We really can't match other schools for funds or numbers of students," he said. "The schools that won (Newton South and Cambridge Rindge and Latin) have technical directors and full time drama departments."

He admitted that although the numbers aren't as large in Cohasset, "I have to face it, I'm dealing with an extremely intelligent population in this town. That helps a great deal. We have established a tradition of excellence where there is no separation of arts and athletics. I think I'm an example of that."

Indeed, two days after returning from the drama festival, Emmons took to the field as coach of the high school girls' track team. In addition, his casts often reflect a mix of talent - with student athletes performing on stage in drama workshop productions. Former student athlete Phil Mahoney is one example, Emmons noted, as well as a current member of the cast, Jay Staunton. He is also a member of the soccer and basketball teams at Cohasset High.

Staunton was honored after last weekend's performance when he was selected by the judges to the all star cast in the final competition.

Emmons believes that students should become involved in a variety of activities within the school. "That's why I hold rehearsals at night, so the kids can participate in other things after school," he said.

The director was pleased with this year's drama festival entry. An original play by Stephen Gregg, Cohasset's production was showered with critical praise as it advanced through the regional, semi-final and final competitions.

Liquor license appeal

The Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission will hear an appeal by Cohasset Central Market Thursday, April 6, on selectmen's revocation of the liquor license.

The hearing will be held at 11:30 a.m. in the Saltonstall Building, 100 Cambridge St., Boston.

The license was revoked last month because it hadn't been used since July, 1988, when the market at 60 South Main St. closed.

Last October, selectmen transferred the market's all alcoholic retail license from James Finucane of Marshfield to Kevin McManus.

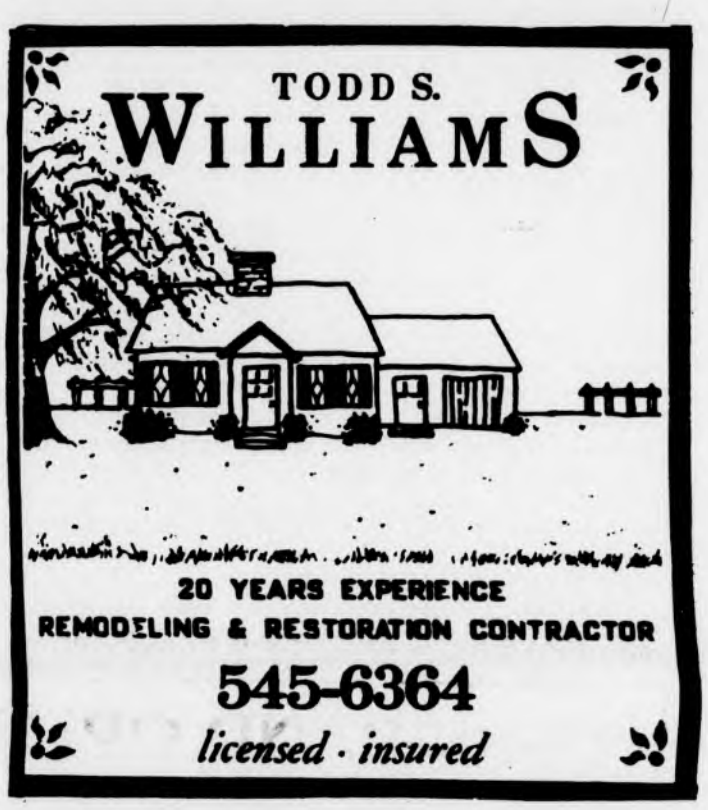
But the lease arrangement was never completed, and the store did not reopen.

Further complicating the matter was a letter from the ABCC stating it would disapprove the license transfer unless a tax matter was cleared up with the Department of Revenue.

When selectmen revoked the license, members said there was not a need for such a license in the village.

Illegal parking problem

Ellen Woolf of North Main St. has written to selectmen asking for a decision regarding "illegal parking at the North Main St. entrance to the town pool."



"Like the swallows returning to Capistrano, I am once again asking you to make a decision regarding the illegal parking at the North Main St. entrance to the town pool," wrote Woolf.

"Last year, a committee was appointed to study the matter, but I believe that the consensus was that indeed the police dept. should be permitted to ticket cars parked on the town property which are a hazard and a public nuisance," she said.

"Since I have been pursuing the matter for the past 11 years, and since it has been argued and studied for the same length of time, I believe the time has now arrived when some decision must be made."

Woolf asked to have the matter placed on the agenda of a selectmen's meeting.

Cohasset High well-represented in festival

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Seven Cohasset High School students and their teacher were honored this past weekend when they were selected to participate in the annual S.E.M.S.B.A. concert.

The Southeastern Massachusetts School Bandmasters Association festival featured selected high school performers from 27 communities throughout the South Shore. Of the seven Cohasset High students who auditioned for the event, all of them won an honored berth in the festival.

Those students are: Nancy Riley, Maggie Moore, Ali Welz and Paolo Baca in the chorus, and Celia Mullen as piano accompanist. Band members included Jen Martin, flute, and Robin Haynes, saxophone.

As Cohasset's choral music director Marks noted, that's comparable to being named to an Old Colony League all-star team.

And for Marks, this was his second trip to the S..M.S.B.A. festival as chorus conductor. He first represented Cohasset High School in 1983.

Marks applied for the position along with seven other teachers from the South Shore. He was selected by a special panel of judges and was then required to develop a program of songs to be performed by the 190-voice chorus.

"It's an opportunity to take music to a higher level than in a regular classroom setting," Marks explained. "They are all of an All Star caliber and they perform at a higher level. It's a rewarding experience for the students and for myself."

The music he selected was mailed to each of the performers a couple of weeks prior to the March 19 concert. The young singers and musicians endured hours of practice on Friday afternoon, and all day Saturday in preparation for Sunday's event.

Marks selected a variety of songs, including barbershop, swing, classical, whimsical and patriotic. He humbly admits that following their closing song, "Battle Hymn of the Republic," the students were treated to a two to three-minute standing ovation by an audience of more than 1,000 at Hanover High School.

"It really was exceptional," he said this week. "It's quite an experience for me and the students.

I feed off that energy and I think the students felt it too."

He was also impressed with the behavior and cooperation of the all-star cast. Conducting 288 student musicians in not an easy task, he noted, but their dedication to the music was obvious from the start. "That made the festival all the more rewarding," he said. "It's an experience that is hard to describe - there's a real bond of love that's created among these students in just a few days. Even though there are so many of them, they develop a personal relationship in a short time."

Marks also credits his "top notch" assistant chorus manager, Rachel Grabke. with helping to create a successful concert. She is a student teacher at Cohasset High School from Nazarene College. She also helped conduct one arrangement, "The Ballad of Green Broom" at the extend the limits in which students are eligible for the bus."

Four classroom aides would be cut at the elementary and secondary level, along with 13 teachers and one secretary for a total reduction of $508,000. Supt. Hart added the extra $108,000 for the increase in unemployment benefits required by staff layoffs.

Eight to nine students will be added to each classroom if 13 teaching positions are eliminated from the system, he said.

There are alternative methods of raising money to support athletic programs. But unfortunately, he noted, there are no academic booster clubs to finance the ailing classrooms.

"At the elementary level, we'll be looking at class sizes of 30 and over. That's a great departure from the status of education in Cohasset," the superintendent said, adding that another option would be to close down a school.

He explained that 27 classrooms are needed in grades K-6 next year. If the Osgood School is closed, 16 additional classrooms must be found within the Deer Hill School. One alternative may be to move the sixth grade into the junior/senior high school, but four additional classrooms would have to be found in that building to accomodate the sixth grade students. "We may have a difficult time locating four classrooms," he reported to the committee.

Another alternative may be to eliminate the art and music rooms at the Deer Hill along with the enrichment class and the two South Shore Collaborative classrooms. The library could be renovated to include a classroom area, he suggested.

"But now you'd have a serious overcrowding problem at the Deer Hill, and you would still be four classrooms short, even with the sixth grade at the junior/senior high school," he stated.

The superintendent said the alternative of moving sixth graders into the high school is not a wise educational option. "But the more difficult perception we must deal with is that closing a school will save us a great deal of money. If we don't change the program and close a school, the net cost savings will be about $90,000 that first year," he added. "And there'll be absolutely no room for growth.

"If you look at it solely from a financial standpoint, is it really worth it? It's not that great a savings - I was surprised," the superintendent stated.

regional concert.

The chorus director also praised student accompanist, Celia Mullen. With perfection she performed some difficult pieces at the weekend concert, Marks said. "She was marvelous," he noted. "Celia is one of the best accompanists I have ever encountered on a student level."

The local members of the chorus were delighted with the experience. After successfully enduring the audition in January, they anticipated an enjoyable time at the actual event.

"For a band member, it was fun. I had no idea how my music would sound until they day we finally got together and played. We sounded so great - I had no idea," Robin Haynes, a CHS saxophonist explained.

Her counterparts in the chorus agreed it was an experience they would like to repeat. "We were performing with other kids who really like music and who worked hard to get there," Celia Mullen explained. "It sounded so much better than any of us thought it would. With all those voices, and the instruments together, it was wonderful."

Police station support

The police and fire station renovation committee gained the support of the advisory committee Tuesday night, March 21, for its plans to spend $714,000 to fix up the stations.

Selectmen had voted earlier to support the plans.

Committee chairman Barbara Moore explained that the figure includes money for construction, fees, expenses, furnishings, clerk of the works and a 10 percent contingency.

It also includes new communications equipment for the police station, new furniture for both stations, and air conditioning for the men's detention cells.

The communications equipment will cost about $40,500, according to Moore.

"The police department doesn't have an updated communications system," she said.

"The updated equipment will provide the ability for the fire, police and public works departments to communicate with each other when they are on the road."

Moore said the equipment could also accommodate the 911 system.

Tour of police/fire station

The Cohasset Police and Fire Station Renovation Committee invites the residents of Cohasset to visit the police and fire station, 62 Elm Street, from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m., Saturday, March 25.

The building will be open for inspection, and renovation plans will be available for review.

Candidates talk about overrides, issues, etc.

financial planning for Cohasset," he said.

He said there is opportunity for considerable savings with a regional approach to such things as transportation and sewage.

Incumbent James Gallagher said that as a selectman, he has dealt with many problems.

"About 99.9 percent have been talked over and decided," he said.

"I believe the selectmen have gone in the right direction," said Gallagher, who noted that he missed only two meetings in three years.

Kornet explained that she has spent 10 years on the school committee, and is now chairman.

"I've worked with boards which oversee essentially half the budget (of the town)," she said.

"My experience on the school committee will serve me well and make me a good candidate for selectmen."

"I'm the new man in town," said Kane, who has lived in Cohasset for almost five years.

A business man whose children are operating his two restaurants, he said he has time to be active.

"I feel I have a lot to offer," he said.

"I don't know everyone, and I don't have any axes to grind."

The first question from the audience was whether Cohasset Common should be decorated with white lights at Christmas, as proposed by the chamber of commerce.

"I believe the common should be lit up at Christmas," said Kane."

Kornet said she wasn't in favor of turning the town into "a neon display case".

"But a few lights are fun," she said. "I enjoy lights on the common."

Gallagher said he has always liked the idea of a Christmas tree on the common.

Tebbetts said he would like the lights on a small scale.

"It should be enjoyed by everyone in town," said Barrow.

"It should be lit up."

Another question regarded the necessity of an override of Prop. 2 1/2.

"I agree we are going to have an override," said Gallagher.

"I have my fingers crossed that it will be small one."

Tebbetts predicted that there will be two, if not several Prop. 2 1/2 votes.

He said he would approve an override for operating expenses, but disapprove a lot of capital budget items.

"I'm a big believer in democracy," said Barrow.

"People should have the opportunity to make choices without the influence of selectmen."

Kornet said the town must not only estimate its income and expenses, but also rising costs.

"We have to realize there will be severe cuts if we don't approve an override," she said.

"I'm in favor of an override," said Kane.

"Programs are going to be cut if there isn't one."

Barrow, Tebbetts, Kornet and Kane said they would support eliminating the $1,000 a year salary for selectmen.

Gallagher said he was thinking of raising it to $1,800.

Another audience member asked whether the candidates were in favor of reducing the number of selectmen from three to five, or leaving it at five.

Barrow said he worked to increase the number of members on the board.

"I still believe in five," he said.

"If there wasn't a salary, it wouldn't cost any more for five than three," noted Tebbetts.

"The selectmen do a lot of work - I favor five."

"I don't see how three selectmen could handle the work load," said Gallagher.

Kornet said that according to Murphy's law, work tends to expand to fill the time.

"I think three selectmen would be adequate and perhaps more effective," she said.

"Three selectmen is sufficient," agreed Kane.

Health board candidates Sharon Becker and Hugh Morgan were the next to speak.

Incumbent Becker said that she is seeking reelection because of a sense of unfinished business.

"The board of health is a really good team," said Becker.

"I find the other two board members delightful to work with.

"We are also lucky to have health agent Joseph Godzik and Carol Oteri Puffer."

Morgan, a revenue collection supervisor for the MBTA, said that a big problem to the community is septic systems and trying to get rid of wastes from the systems.

"I feel we should help contractors so that there is no burden on the homeowners," he said.

Morgan also said problems of raw sewage going into Peppermint Brook should be addressed before it hits the water supply.

When asked by an audience member to comment on any raw sewage in Peppermint Brook, Becker said the health agent has taken a reading of the site.

"He has not alerted us about Peppermint Brook," she said.

"But I will find out what the counts are."

Becker also said that the health board met with septage haulers.

"There is a crisis in the state," she said.

"All the towns are in the same position," said Becker.

"For now, upper Blackstone is the best solution."

"I agree that we should try to get help for the haulers," said Morgan.

"There is a need for it...They need help to get rid of waste."

An audience member said that the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering considers Cohasset Heights one of the best run landfills in the state.

"They haven't told me it is one of the best run," said Becker.

"There is a serious problem with smell."

Becker said that at Cohasset's landfill, the problem is with litter that isn't bagged and blows around the area.

She said that when the transfer station begins operation in August, she envisions a "very well run transfer-recycling center."

"Has the board of health talked to other towns about a regional plant to handle septage?" asked someone in the audience.

"We're just beginning to investigate having a facility in town," said Becker.

"We have to find other towns in order to build a plant," said Morgan.

"That's a problem now."

In her closing statement, Becker said she considered her experience on the health board valuable.

"I can be useful to the town," she said.

"I'm very interested in recycling, and I would enjoy another three years," said Becker, who added that she does not intend to seek reelection after that.

Morgan said that if he is elected, he will stop some of the "double standards" on the board of health regarding septic systems.

"I will work with the sewer commission to try to solve problems," he said.

"The sewer commission should work with the board of health to try to get back federal funding.

"The water commission should work so that no contaminants go into the water supply."

Sewer commission candidates Henry Rattenbury and Manuel Salvador rounded out the program.

Rattenbury said he has lived in Cohasset for more than 40 years and has been a Cohasset postal service mailman for 25 years.

"I'm interested in seeing the current (sewage treatment) plant maintained and operated properly," he said.

"The plant has been in operation for a number of years, and needs updating and maintenance."

"We have to work on an ongoing program to sewer the town.

"I'm also concerned with the harbor receiving effluent from the plant.

"I hope we can continue to keep the harbor clean."

Salvador is former sewage treatment plant supervisor. He was suspended by the current sewer commission about a year ago.

He has filed a lawsuit against the commission for his suspension.

Salvador said he has 22 years experience in the wastewater field, and has published articles on the subject.

"I have saved Cohasset residents money with efficient procedures," he said.

An audience member asked about the possibility of the town's hooking up its sewage system with the MDC rather than with Hull.

"Many years ago, we had the opportunity to go with the MDC," said Rattenbury.

"But it has been ruled out for quite some time.

"They have all they can do with other cities and towns."

"The pumping station in Weymouth couldn't handle more," said Salvador.

"Maybe in the future."

"What are the other options but expanding the plant?" asked an audience member.

"They are going to Hull, expanding the plant or putting small, package plants throughout town," said Salvador.

"The most cost efficient way to solve the problems is to expand the plant," said Rattenbury.

Salvador was asked whether there would be conflict of interest if he were elected since he is suing the town.

"Town counsel has ruled that there is no conflict of interest," answered Salvador.

"I don't see any problem working with the current sewer commission."

Both candidates were also asked about the proposed sewer user fee increase where residents would pay 50 percent of the operating costs of the plant.

Salvador said that one effect of the fee increase would be downtown businesses charging more rent.

Rattenbury said that when the plant was built, the costs were supposed to be split 50-50 by the town and residents.

"No one is asking users to pay more than that," he said.

"This is no time for on the job training," said Salvador in his closing statement.

"...I will bring my knowledge to office."

"I've been very interested in the problems of Cohasset over the past 10 years," said Rattenbury.

"I don't think knowledge of operating the plant is not necessarily required to serve on the sewer commission."

It's happening . . .

Local artist in juried show

Three works by Cohasset artist Gil Coyle are among fifty-nine selected from 245 submitted for the All New England Juried Show on view at the South Shore Art Center through March 23. The Coyle pieces — "Ladder to Let Evil Spirits Out," in clay and wood, "Common Merganser I", in oil, and First Prize, Mixed Media winner, "Intermediate Swimmer" — represent the commitment to versatility which is a Coyle hallmark.

Blue ribbon winner in the South Shore Art Center's 1987 Summer Show, Coyle has exhibited her paintings, collages, constructions, monotypes, and photography extensively throughout New England.

Director of Art at Hingham's Derby Academy, she teaches a broad spectrum of studio arts, including painting and drawing, collages, pottery, and silk screen to students in Preprimary through Grade Nine.

Her Derby Academy studio will be open to the public on April 28 to 29 as part of the South Shore Art Center's tour of area studios.

The visit to Derby will focus on theatre sets for school productions, produced in collaboration with the academy's shop and drama teachers, Kenelm Winslow and Thalia McMillion. It is in preparation for Summer Arts at Derby, a new program modeled on The Charles River Creative Arts Program and directed in 1989 by Thalia McMillion.

Tickets for the studio tour may be obtained from the South Shore Art Center.

April vacation workshops

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, announces their April vacation workshop schedule. Among the workshops to be offered are: Castles & Creatures In Clay, Discovering Dinosaurs, Outer Space/Mixed-Media, Cartoons & Comics, Bangles & Beads/Clay Jewelry and a Portfolio Counselling Workshop for high school seniors.

Also at that time, the spring class/lecture/workshop schedule will be available.

The South Shore Art Center is open to the public, Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, 10 to 1 p.m. and Sunday 1 to 4 p.m. Programs at the Center are supported in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council of Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Wildlife Symposium announced

A workshop entitled Endangered Wildlife: Awareness to Action will be held at the New England Wildlife Center in Hingham, on Saturday, April 8. This program, scheduled from 1 to 5 p.m., will feature a variety of guest speakers, including local, regional, and national experts on endangered species conservation.

The extinction crisis is constantly in the news. Time magazine named our beleaguered planet the "person" of the year; National Geographic recently published an entire issue examining the global extinction crisis. Increasingly, critical habitat loss and endangered species dilemmas make the front pages and the editorial pages of our national media.

Why are we facing these problems? Do they really matter? How can we address these problems which threaten not only rare and endangered species, but the quality of our lives as well. This workshop will address all of these questions.

A major focus of this symposium will be directed toward offering substantive ways to increase public education and awareness of the extinction crisis. Included will be discussion of recent legislative efforts to establish an "Endangered Species Act" in the Commonwealth. Workshop participants will receive an informative packet containing a variety of materials related to local, regional, and global endangered species.

For additional information, please contact Rick Horton, Program Director at the New England Wildlife Center, 146A Justic Cushing Highway, Hingham, 02043 or call 749-5387.

□ Julie Nussdorfer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Nussdorfer of Cohasset, was awarded Second Academic Honors for earning an 85% average in her classes for Winter Term 1988/89 at Stoneleigh--Burnham School. Julie is a junior at Stoneleigh-Burnham, a college preparatory school for girls in grades 9-12 located in Greenfield.

□ Sorry to hear that our favorite nurse Jeanne McAuliffe fell on the ice last Saturday — a bad fracture — happy mending Jeanne — from all your friends and family.

□ Kyle Hublitz, of 38 Forest Avenue, was a member of the 1988-89 Hamilton College men's ice hockey team. Despite a heartbreaking 3-2 overtime loss to Union in the Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC) West Playoffs, the 1988-89 Hamilton Hockey Campaign was filled with memorable victories and performances.

Hublitz, a sophomore, was the back-up goaltender and promises to be the starter next season.

Kyle is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Uve Friederich Hublitz.

□ Meredith Gledhill is certainly to be congratulated this week! She was the chairperson of the auction for the Norwell Science Center that was held recently, and over $12,000 was raised! That sure is a lot of money for a most worthy cause and everyone is extremely proud of you, Meredith.

Kathleen and Gregory Cahill have been bursting with joy ever since March 3rd! Why you ask? That is the date of the birth of their brand new baby boy! Congratulations go to the Cahill family.

□ Sure was a good week this week, robins were spotted all over town....let's hear it for the first harbinger of Spring!

□ Hats off to Lisa M. Mercuiro, who recently received a BA in Psychology, Magna Cum Laude, from Boston University.

□ David Lehr and Gil Coyle were two of the fifteen winners of the All New England Juried Exhibition at the South Shore Art Center. David won an Honorable Mention in the Drawing and Pastel category, and Gil won a first in the Mixed-Media category.

□ We certainly hope Mrs. Sturges is up and around in a hurry! Remember the old saying "You can't keep a good woman down," so hurry and get well.

□ Shirley Musto has come to Cohasset with gusto...she has opened the Inspirations Boutique in the Village, and it promises to be a nifty place! She will stock ladies dresses, all sizes, cruisewear, jewelry, scarves and lots of other accessories. She will also be selling antiques and other furnishings. Stop in and take a peek, it will be open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mondays and Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Fridays; 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays, and noon to 6 p.m. on Sundays. There surely is a time for everyone!

□ The Social Service League is sponsoring a new program that is making a lot of people happy. They have a New Friends program, where volunteers visit people who are lonely, isolated, or physically limited. It may be the type of thing that you are good at, and it only takes four or five hours a month. Call the office at 383-0771 or 383-0821 if you can volunteer your time, they would appreciate it.

□ Hats off to Rev. Gary Ritts, minister of the Second Congregational Church, for organizing a summer work project for our youth to go to Appalachia to do some home repair and upgrading. Last year he led the charge in Maine, where a group of workers repaired homes for the Micmac Indians. Our Cohasset kids should come home with lots of stories and a knowledge of how the other half lives, what a challenge!

□ Thumbs up to all of the green thumbs involved in the New England Spring Flower Show, they received a second place ribbon for their efforts. Sure is nice to see your hard work pay off, just ask Phyllis Peck and her able crew!

□ It certainly looks as though the Meehan family is going to have to build a pool with a cover on it for their mighty swimmers! Bobby, Dawn and Jennifer were picked to represent the Swoqjian Swim Club (of Norwell), they were among the best in the Club...off they go to Rhode Island for the championships. We wish them well, they are winners in our book!

□ Don't forget that the Deer Hill School is still in the "business" of collecting Campbell products labels, and will be until the end of the month. Send them to school and they will be able to get school equipment, that is a good deal.

□ The Cohasset Rotary Club does such good things for our town, some of which go unnoticed by many...did you know that they donated $100 to Pack 38 toward their Pinewood Derby Cars? Sure meant a lot to the boys, thank you men!

□ Congratulations go to Michelle Hartley for a fine season in gymnastics, and we wish her continued success as her many meets continue.

□ Another athlete that certainly put Cohasset on the map this season was Paul Froio, his wrestling abilities are unbelievable. We'll be reading a lot more about his prowess in the years to come, he is a gifted athlete.

□ That's the news for this week, be sure to give me a call with any event that you think newsworthy, we love to read it.

Editorial

Is this what you want?

With little fanfare and the absence of threats and scare tactics, the school administration painted a grim picture of our school system if the override of Proposition 2 1/2 does not succeed.

Supt. Stephen Hart attempted to portray a realistic scenario for the school committee. He did not plea for more money, he did not warn of impending doom if voters defeat the override. As objective as humanly possible, Supt. Hart tried to explain in concise terms that unless an override succeeds, Cohasset's schools and our students will face some unpleasant options next year.

That is the simple reality of the situation. No scare tactics are necessary. Without an override, the budget for our school system will be cut by $400,000. That will leave room for a one percent increase over this year's budget - a fact that is hard to digest when one realizes that negotiated teacher salaries will rise by six percent next year.

Where will the reductions be made? It is not an idle threat when the school administrator recommends the reduction of 13 teaching positions. That is where the greatest cost savings can be made in the budget, yet that is undoubtedly where the cuts will hurt the most. Supt. Hart calculated that if those teachers are taken away, every classroom in the system will carry an additional eight or nine students. Class sizes will rise from an average in the low 20's to about 30 students per class.

This is why you chose Cohasset as your home? Many of us bought homes in this community - spending our life's savings doing so - because we wanted a fine education for our children. Cohasset's schools have always enjoyed a fine reputation, and the property values reflected that high quality. If we allow our school system to deteriorate, that will surely affect the value of our property.

A budget cut of $400,000 will mean fewer teachers in a small system. It will mean a reduction of coaches for our athletic teams and a cut in the transportation budget. Maintenance will likely be deferred once again as we allow our town-owned buildings to deteriorate beyond reasonable repair.

Some people have talked about the possibility of closing a school. But the superintendent says, after careful study, that it would not be a great cost-saving measure. Our student population is steadying and there would be immediate concern about overcrowding in our two remaining facilities. Although this is an option to study in the future, perhaps in combination with renovations to the Deer Hill School, it is not a short-term solution to the crisis we are currently facing.

You can't argue that the cost of education, like everything else, is increasing steadily. And the burden is falling on us, the local taxpayers, to pay the escalating costs.

Although it is a discouraging situation, we can't just throw up our hands in defeat. Not while our children are still in the classroom.

New financial resources must be uncovered to help ease our tax burden. We need innovative thinkers and municipal leaders who will take charge in this time of uncertainty. They need to know we support the schools in Cohasset, and in this partnership we can help salvage our most precious community asset.

We offer our apologies to Charles Kane, a candidate for selectman, whose name we omitted from our list of candidates in last week's editorial. We realize he's campaigning very hard for that office, and we wish him success. It was our mistake but we assure all of his supporters that it was unintentional.

Cemetery proposal contains flaws

Letters

To the Editor,

I'm writing to suggest that the Cemetery Committee plan which will be put before the 1989 Town Meeting to recommend the use of 14 acres of school department land, abutting Deer Hill School and Pleasant Street for a new cemetery, may be ill advised. Having been in the monument business for many years, I'm familiar with most of the cemeteries in the suburbs of Boston. Very few are located in residential neighborhoods. Those that are cause a variety of problems. One of the most important parts of cemetery planning is choosing a location that has reasonable access.

Some of the flaws of the Smith Place/Pleasant Lane entrance are:

1. Presumably the end of Pleasant Lane, off Pleasant Street would be the main entrance to the cemetery. Pleasant Street is one of the most populated streets in Cohasset. Most of the homes are built close to the road which is very narrow and lacks adequate sidewalks. Traffic is not just in automobiles, but also in delivery trucks which use it for a quick route to 3A. It's on a steep hill with poor visibility and many children play in or close to the road.

2. When most people think of cemetery traffic, they probably think of the occasional funeral procession. The maintenance of the cemetery, not to mention the original construction phase, would mean a flow of back-loaders to dig graves, large cement vault trucks, town landscaping trucks, monument trucks, etc. . . .

3. Pleasant Street is too narrow. Trucks, back-loaders or funeral processions turning onto Pleasant Lane would be able to do so only from the left side of the road. This would tie up the street completely.

4. The most dangerous situation is coming out from Pleasant Lane onto Pleasant Street. Pleasant Lane is downhill from Pleasant Street. Cars turning onto Pleasant Street would have their vision obscured because the hoods of their cars would be facing upwards as they made the turn. There is no room to expand the entrance to Pleasant Lane.

The town must do something about cemetery space. But is taking school land with access through a residential neighborhood the wisest solution? Or should we be looking for land in more practical areas. It may not be the hundred-year solution, but I'm sure there is a piece of land in Cohasset that would serve us well as a cemetery for the next fifty years. In the meantime, we can be looking around.

Sincerely
Gerard Deveney

Animal group urges support for article

To The Editor:

The following is a letter to the editor which we would like published in The Cohasset Mariner.

After careful study, we, the members of the Cohasset Animal Shelter Study Committee, urge the citizens of Cohasset to pass Article 66 at Town Meeting.

Whereas, currently, monies collected from dog license fees (except $.75 per license), have gone to the county from which we receive no benefit, we urge that Cohasset secede from the County and this would allow the Town to set, collect, and utilize dog license fees. These monies would allow us to participate in the proposed Animal Shelter with Hingham and Hull and any overage could then be applied toward our Towns Animal Control operation budget.

Affordable housing is our responsibility

To the Editor:

As one of the very fortunate families to be raised in the Veteran's Project in Cohasset, I would like to comment on the issue of the affordable income housing for Cohasset and Scituate.

It is the right of every American to have affordable housing. The unfortunate reality of today's housing prices however, prevent many families from purchasing their own home, even in their home town.

I believe it is the responsibility of every town to have access to housing for the families that may need it. The lots in the Veteran's Project were provided to the service people at an affordable price so to secure a future for Cohasset.

I endorse Jack Hurly and the Crystal Woods Project. He has created an opportunity that we all should look at as a step forward. Let's join together to be a part of the solution, not part of the problem.

Art center joins community center in summer camp

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Local youngsters can sample the culture of China this summer without going any farther than Cohasset Village.

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, and the Cohasset Community Center, 3 N. Main St., will sponsor a Summer Arts Camp on the East Asia nation.

Two, two-week sessions will be held for youngsters ages 6 to 12.

Grades 1-3 will be grouped together, as will grades 4-6.

The first session will be held 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday to Friday, July 17-28; the second, July 31-August 11.

Cost is $270 for each two week session. Children can enroll for both sessions.

Registration deadline is June 5, but class size is limited to 40 children. Early registration is suggested.

"The idea of pulling different art forms together is exciting," said Linda Keating, art center education director since last July.

"There will be dance, theater and visual arts," she said.

Community center director Judy Volungis said this is the first time the two centers have collaborated on such a project.

"It's just been a good opportunity for the two institutions to collaborate and work together," said Volungis.

The summer camp will start and finish each day at the art center. The middle of the day will be spent at the community center.

Activities at the art center will include visual arts.

Daily workshops will be held on such activities as making Chinese dragons, silk painting, kite making (and flying) and calligraphy.

Visiting artists will give demonstrations on such things as martial arts and mask making.

Daily workshops in Chinese theater arts will culminate in a grand finale performance of a Chinese fairy tale.

"Tikki-Tikki Tembo" will be presented in Session I; "The Legend of the Laughing Dragon" in Session II.

Performances will be held on the final day, and there will be an art exhibit.

Keating said that the art center teachers who will be participating in the summer camp will attend workshops at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston.

"We will also check out all the Chinese art, and try to utilize that resource," she said.

In addition, Keating said they will contact the Chinese Cultural Institute for information.

"It's quite an education for all of us," she said.

Dance and creative movement will be among the classes held at the community center.

It will also feature set design and costumes and will culminate in grand finale performance.

In addition, there will be time for recreational activities such as bowling and supervised outdoor activities each day.

A supervised lunch period will be provided. Children should bring their own lunch.

Volungis noted that the community center will still run its other summer programs in tennis and gymnastics.

There will also be a pre-school nature camp, which has been held on and off since 1946.

"But the summer arts camp will be a special one," she said.

"We wanted to do something really different.

"With the opening up of China to the world (when diplomatic relations were established 10 years ago with the U.S.), we thought it would be interesting to teach kids a culture so different from our own," said Volungis.

"Maybe next year, we'll do Africa," she said.

The two centers began planning for the summer camp last December, she said.

"We both wanted to do something for kids.

"Together, we thought we could make a really good performing and visual arts program," she said.

"The proximity helped,too."

The community center is around the block from the art center.

"We're excited about it," agreed Keating.

"It will be nice to collaborate with the community center.

"We can offer a much broader program by pooling our resources, than we can separately."

Keating said she worked on another summer arts program at Wilbraham-Munson Academy in association with the School for Gifted Children.

"It was very well attended," she said.

China was an obvious choice for the first summer arts camp here because of its rich culture, according to Keating.

"It will broaden the base of knowledge we all have," she said.

For more information on the summer arts camp, call 383-9548 or 383-0088.

Cohasset schools plan for the future . . .

Committee members explained that a special subcommittee has implemented a timetable so that all objectives will be completed "in a timely fashion".

For instance, the study states that a comprehensive report highlighting previous reports on the best use of school facilities will be completed this year. In addition, the school committee will study grade reorganization options this year.

By next year, the committee will develop an appropriate plan for the school system's facilities. They will review possible regionalization and investigate opportunities to share secondary level programs with other school systems.

By 1991 according to the goals of the plan, the committee hopes to implement "the most desirable facilities changes."

There are six objectives to the strategic plan, including: determining the best use of the school facilities; strengthening the professional faculty through evaluation, development and recognition; strengthening the administrative effectiveness and efficiency; reviewing and revitalizing the curriculum; developing local support for the schools, and influencing government,especially in reference to the cost implications of policies and regulations.

Within the study, the committee prepared a forecast of trends and events that will affect the school system in the future. Among those issues that will likely impact on the schools, according to the study, is the probability of increased difficulty for pro-education political leaders to support overrides in the future.

"This is an important step for the school committee - to identify trends that are going to be happening. We're dealing with people's expectations of the school system and how we would react to them," member Nancy Sandell noted.

According to the study, the cost of special education will probably increase significantly, and there will be an increase in government mandates in non-education areas, such as handicapped access, asbestos removal, and transportation.

Regarding demography, there will probably be increases in the elementary school population along with increased expectations about what schools can deliver.

There will be a "graying" of the teaching population and a lack of quality replacements, according to the forecast. A significant element of the population will be fiscally conservative, according to the plan, and there will be a greater number of moderates who have to be convinced about school needs.

The study predicts increased demands on teachers and a corresponding increase of demands on students, along with additional pressure for school administrators as a result of expanded duties. There will also be more demand for scientific and technological competence in the future.

Regarding economic trends, it is predicted that deferred maintenance, insurance and other fixed costs will rise significantly in the future.

Specific strategies were reviewed in the study, including examining regionalization or consolidation of school facilities. The professional staff would be strengthened through an evaluation system, and development would be strengthened by possible teacher exchanges and inservice programs. Ways in which excellence is rewarded must be studied, along with an examination of the roles and responsibilities of teachers.

The administration's effectiveness and efficiency could be monitored by strengthening the performance evaluation system and implementing an administrative intern program to support school administration.

The curriculum would be reviewed, according to the plan, by identifying the public's expectations along with those of school personnel.

Entry age requirements would be studied, and there would be greater coordination between the Cohasset schools and local nursery schools. Changing student behavior due to social influences would also be addressed under the goals of this plan.

The community must be made aware of positive school programs. In this regard, the PSO has decided to add new positions to its organization. Two community relations members would be responsible for publicizing school events and creating more public awareness of programs within the Cohasset schools.

The public must be made aware of the extraordinary expenses of the schools, along with the administrative workloads, the study stated. And the legislature should be lobbied through the school's professional associations for full funding and other resources for extraordinary educational requirements.

One school committee member will be responsible for tracking the implementation and success of each of the six goals stated within the plan.

Numbers problem for CHS baseball

The school committee voted to appoint varsity and junior varsity baseball coaches, but not before a warning was sounded about the decreasing number of athletes who will be joining the teams this spring.

Athletic Director Clark Chatterton said he was concerned with the number of team candidates who have expressed an interest in playing baseball this season. With the start of a new lacrosse team, which has attracted 40 players, and the spring track, golf and tennis teams, there's a problem getting enough players to field a varsity baseball team.

Currently, Chatterton explained, the 10th, 11th and 12th graders will comprise the varsity team, with a total of 13 players. If one player is injured or unable to play, one of the 19 members of the junior varsity team will be called up.

The seventh, eighth and ninth graders will make up the junior varsity team, he said. There is no so-called junior high team because no other school in the league fields a junior high team.

"We have big holes in the ninth and tenth grades," Chatterton warned, emphasizing that he was describing the numbers of participants, not their ability. One "plus" for the students is that no cuts would be made because of the limited amount of players. "We might have an eighth, ninth or tenth grade player on varsity if he's good enough, but I don't foresee any cuts," Chatterton added.

School committee chairman Diana Kornet said the head of the youth baseball league explained that some years are lean. He warned her not to close down the program because of a limited amount of players in one year.

Chatterton said the decrease in participants does not appear to affect the girls' softball team. Forty girls showed up for that team's first practice.

The athletic director also expressed enthusiasm that a high school staff member, Tom O'Neil, was appointed junior varsity boys' baseball coach. "Having a coach from the inside really develops a camaraderie with the kids," he said. Varsity coach Bill Fallon was also re-appointed to that position.

Salvador brings experience

Manuel E. Salvador of 28 Elm Court is a candidate for the Cohasset Board of Sewer Commissioners.

As a candidate for sewer commissioner Savador brings twenty two years of experience in wastewater treatment. For 16 years Salvador was chief operator and superintendent of the Cohasset Sewer Plant. He has experience in sewer treatment process as well as in making budgets and completing federal and state forms.

Salvador holds a grade VI operators certificate and a collection systems certificate. He has worked with three engineering firms that did studies of Cohasset's sewerage problems: Fay Spofford and Thorndike Inc., Metcalf and Eddy and Ward Engineering.

He was in the committee for choosing a new engineering firm and worked with the Sewer Commission and Committee interviewing several firms.

As a native of Cohasset, Salvador spent many years on the ocean. To protect the fishing industry and beaches from pollutin, for many years Salvador performed tests with the state on the harbor waters.

Salvador was privileged to work with Mr. O'Hagan who did a harbor and beach study of how the currents run. They used dye studies and tested the bottom for pollution. Having worked with the state D.E.Q.E. and E.P.A., Salvador has a working knowledge and good rapport with them.

He believes in an open bidding process on contracts and a careful watch over budgets in order to maintain lower sewer rates.

The E.P.A. Act calls for all funding on construction grants to end by Sept. 30,1990. That will be the end of federal funding. Let's not waste more of our tax dollars. Millions have been lost. Years have been wasted studying the problem; lets get on with the solution.

The committee to elect Manual E. Salvador is accepting campaign donations made payable to the committee and sent to Jean Higgins, Treasurer, 49 Todd Road, Cohasset.

Barrow's campaign responds

With the Cohasset Mariner Editor's indulgence, the Committee to Elect Richard P. Barrow to a three-year term on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen would like to respond to last week's editorial regarding the coverage Barrow has received from the Mariner.

While other candidates might feel Barrow's several attempts to access the ballot was excessive coverage, we disagree. The Cohasset Board of Selectmen gave Barrow headlines. We would have preferred the selectmen to allow Barrow's name to be placed on the ballot with no brouhaha.

If unnamed others feel it is a frivolity for Barrow to relinquish a month's salary to his campaign and/or that it is a political avenue he chose to draw attention to himself; we suggest that candidates wishing to draw the same attention to themselves donate a month's livelihood to the Town of Cohasset.

We have one correction to make to Mariner news articles. Barrow's unpaid leave will not cost the Town "time and a half." The Town will utilize unpaid monies to Barrow, a senior officer, in paying another officer time and a half. The loss to the town will be minimal.

With the editor's further indulgence, we would like to make it clear to citizens that it is legal for a police officer to serve his community as a selectman.

Richard Barrow

Open house for Tebbetts

Candidate for Selectman, Ned Tebbetts, announced that he will meet citizens of Cohasset at a town-wide Open House Friday March 31 at 7 p.m. at the Legion Hall on the harbor. He encourages townspeople to attend and to ask questions about our town government.

As "The Taxpayer's Advocate," Tebbetts continues to speak out on concerns about finances with emphasis on the short and long-term implications of the many Town Meeting articles that are likely to lead to Proposition 2 1/2 override votes, unless voters take concerted action at the April 1 Town Meeting. These override issues are likely to be on a special ballot that the Town will vote upon on Saturday May 6.

At a recent coffee at the home of Don and Mary Kennedy, Tebbetts responded to questions from several Senior Citizens, who were concerned about Government Medicare and Medicaid programs and other Government retirement plans for Local, State and Federal employees. Other questions were concerned with the financial impact on Cohasset arising from elimination of Federal Government revenue-sharing for towns and cities and how the current fiscal crisis for our state government is likely to impact Cohasset town finances.

Tebbetts also answered questions from several new Cohasset residents, who expressed concerns about their high property tax assessments. Tebbetts said that by law all properties must be assessed at fair market value.

Anyone interested in more information about events scheduled for the Candidate should call Pat Laugelle at 383-1737.

Candidates Night March 28

The Cohasset P.S.O. is sponsoring a School Committee Candidates Night on Tuesday, March 28 at 7:30 p.m. in the A.V. room of Cohasset High School.

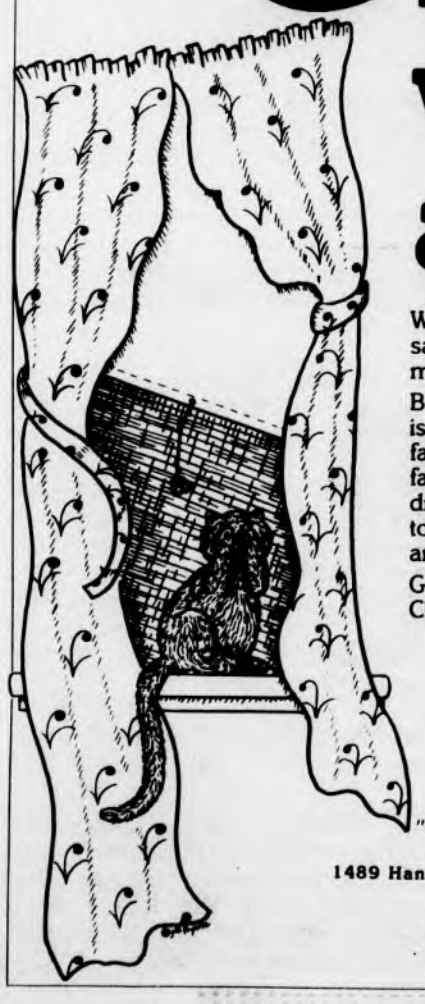
Three candidates, Henry Brennock Jr., C. Christopher Ford and Ralph Kidder are competing for two vacancies on the committee. After presenting a prepared talk, the candidates will answer questions from the audience.

School Superintendent Stephen Hart will also be at the meeting to discuss the strategic planning for our schools. Everyone is invited and encouraged to attend. Also remember: April 1 is Town Meeting at CHS at which a vote will be taken on the school budget as well as other important articles of the town and April 8 is Election Day.

Kidder holds coffee

The Committee to Elect Ralph Kidder as a member of the Cohasset School Committee announced two more in the series of get-acquainted coffees.

The first is to be held at the home of Bernadette and Sig Stockinger. The second, which is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 29 at the home of Ed and Betsy Connolly, will be hosted by Betsy Connolly, Annette Sawchuck and Elaine Coyne. The latter event is open to the public.



Anyone interested in meeting the candidate should contact Betsy Connolly in advance at 383-1248.

At the coffee held at the home of Sue and Jack McNamara, Mr. Kidder stated that "it is imperative that the School Committee members assure the efficient and effective use of our increasingly scarce resources through strict review and accountability systems, especially in light of the state's fiscal difficulties. At the same time," he added, "we must explore methods of expanding the financial resources available to Cohasset's public schools, such as corporate partnerships and a mechanism for private endowments."

The Committee also announced that it was sponsoring a Senior Citizen coffee at 9:45 a.m. Monday, March 27 at the Community Center. Members of the seniors exercise class and any other interested senior citizens are invited to attend.

The Committee to Elect Ralph Kidder is accepting campaign contributions, which should be made payable to the committee and forwarded to Karen Kirkendall, Treasurer, 83 Atlantic Avenue, Cohasset.

Kornet states views

Diana Kornet, candidate for Selectman in Cohasset, responded to questions and stated her views on key local issues with two dozen interested taxpayers at a Sunday afternoon coffee held at the Beechwood Street home of Ruth and Ken Wilcox.

Proposition 2½ was a topic of great interest to many present. Kornet explained, "When Prop 2½ was first passed in 1980, many people felt that we would be rescued by state or federal aid when our local budget fell short. We cannot look for a state bail-out. First of all, the state budget is in bad shape, and secondly, Cohasset does not qualify as a "needy" community."

"We should not look at this situation as some sort of failure on the part of our town, but rather as an opportunity to have a say in our government. Proposition 2½ provides the town with the impetus to closely scrutinize the local budget and act with the utmost fiscal responsibility. It forces us to be knowledgeable and make intelligent decisions about how we spend money at the local level. I have confidence in our ability to make these decisions for our community. We must not only decide but also be willing to pay for these choices."

Effective leadership and planning were watchwords of Kornet's comments." As Selectman, I would strongly promote the creation of a much-needed five year plan, so that we can be more far-sighted in making and then implementing decisions. Effective communication with citizens is an increasingly important responsibility of town leaders. We must do better than just scamper around each year to educate voters about another override. It is time more of us become well-educated in the long range needs of the town and the future ramifications of our decisions."

As a ten-year member of the Cohasset School Committee, and this year the Committee's Chair, Kornet has a proven record of responsible planning and effective management in a leadership position. She has demonstrated fiscal responsibility in managing the department's $5 million budget.

Kornet concludes, "Within the school department, we have made essential capital improvements in small stages. A similar task-oriented approach might be helpful in considering renovations to other town structures such as the Fire and Police Headquarters."

Two more coffees are planned; one will be held at 10 a.m. on March 30 at the Pease home at 3 Sankey Road, and another at 3 p.m. on April 2 at the home of George and Joan Kovach at 59 Ripley Road. The public is welcome.

A date with the Easter Bunny

Sarah Kuendig, 5, enjoyed a quiet moment with the star of the show during a special luncheon at the community center.

Kate and Mary Silvia behaved like ladies during their chat with the Easter Bunny last Saturday.

Elisa Jerome, 2½, signals for Goldy the clown to make a balloon especially for her.

Goldy the clown fits Sarah Kuendig with an unusual Easter bonnet. Her mother, Kris, obviously approves of the chapeau.

Blizzard stories from the children at Osgood.

The Blizzard of 1989

It was a stormy night and it was snowing. The trees were like claws reaching for you. Now, it is snowing even harder and the electricity went out. Now, it is raining. The snowplows went out. Now, it is pouring rain. The snowplows got stuck in the snow. The next day, all the kids went to school and they loved playing in the snow.

Jay Whoriskey

The Blizzard of 1989

It was a stormy night and it was spooky for a little snowflake. The little snowflake wanted to help make a blizzard. The little snowflake's name was Snowball. He wanted to make the blizzard of 1989. His brother didn't want him to make the blizzard of 1989. Then, the brother said you can be in the blizzard of 1989.

Kim Welby

The Blizzard

It snowed for a hundred weeks. It was terrible. Miss Balch wanted to go outside to see if the snow stopped, but it did not stop. She went to the kitchen to get a cup of hot chocolate with marshmallows. She called Mrs. Hernberg 749-6478. She said to go over to her home. So, Miss Balch took a snowmobile to Mrs. Hernberg's home. Miss Balch rang the doorbell. Mrs. Hernberg said to come it. So, she did. They talked and talked and talked and talked and talked and talked and talked and talked to 5:00. Miss Balch took the snowmobile home. The people were happy the snow stopped.

Melissa McLaughlin

The Snow Storm

Somebody was walking in the snow, while the wind blew. All of a sudden, a storm came. So the wind started to blow at him as he was walking home. He got home. He took off his boots and mittens and hat. He ate dinner. He went to bed. When he woke up, the snow was all over the house. So, he stayed in and played.

Rosemarie Kierce

A Blizzard

The boy is walking in the snow. The boy lost his gloves and hat. He slid down in the snow. He got up. He went home and got a shovel. He shoveled the snow off the driveway. He found his hat in the snow. He found his gloves. He is happy.

Frank Rosano

The Blizzard

It snowed and snowed for fifty weeks. The snow was about 100 feet deep. It was higher than the houses, the telephone wires, and the trees. From my house, I saw one person out in the snow. It was Paul sledding. I dug a hold through the snow to get out of my house. I brought my Thunder Tube outside. "Hi, John." "Hi, Paul." Paul wanted to go down the hill with me. It looked long, but we had to make a hill so it would be longer. We made walls and turns. It was a race track, kind of. We sledded all afternoon.

Keith Herzog

The Blizzard

One day when some animals were walking down a path, it got all cloudy. There was snow and rain. There was lots of snow on the ground. All the animals had to go home, but the snow had already covered up their houses. A little rabbit said the animals could come in his little house. But, the bear got stuck in the hole. The rabbit went outside and dug a bigger hole. Then, the bear could go inside with the other animals. They lived happily ever after.

Sixth grade enrichment

The sixth grade students of the Deer Hill School in Cohasset, enthusiastically welcomed the Crusaders from the Higgins Armory Museum, Wednesday, March 8.

Lord and Lady Higgins (professional actors) landed in the Deer Hill Cafeteria when their magician sent them and their armour forward in time. While demonstrating various helmets, weapons, and chain mail; Lord and Lady Higgins talked about social and battle conventions. Two students wore a helmet similar to what Joan of Arc would have worn, and a tournament helmet, weighing about seventy pounds. Finally, a student/knight was dressed in a suit of armour by a page and a squire. The page and squire also had to remove the suit of armour in reverse order under the guidance of Lady Higgins. The presentation ended with a knighting ceremony and a question and answer period.

The students have been studying the Middle Ages in both Social Studies and Language Arts. During the past two weeks, they have learned about Heraldry, designed a coat-of-arms, studied the social levels of medieval society, steps toward knighthood, the structure of a castle and a medieval town.

The sixth grade students, teachers, and Mrs. McLean, the Enrichment Co-ordinator, would like to thank the PSO for funding this wonderful program.

A heartwarming donation

Last week Project Playground received a most gracious donation and wanted to share the letter with the Community. This group, coordinated by Blanche Buckley, began the recycling center and we know the townspeople of Cohasset will always be appreciative of their accomplishments. The group disbanded in 1975 and since then has donated their funds to various community efforts.

Project Playground is enthused to welcome yet another support group to our increasing number of volunteers. Our hopes from the beginning had been for a true community project that brought everyone together and culminated in our actual building on June 10 - 11 like an "old New England barn raising."

To Blanche Buckley and her special friends we say, thank you.

Marie Price
Teacher Liason
Project Playground

Dear Marie,

Some years back, a small group of volunteers, including myself, started the recycling center at the Cohasset disposal area. This $150.00 donation to your organization is what remains of the money we earned from recycled glass. We used the money earned for small projects in Cohasset. For the schools we bought flags, donated money for books for the library, Jaws of Life, Senior Citizens Christmas Fund, and many more small donations.

Please use this check toward the construction of Project Playground. We are giving this money in memory of our late volunteers:

Pete Cumner, Karl Phaffman, Percy James, Nellie DiSantos, and Ruth Welton.

We are,
Yours truly,

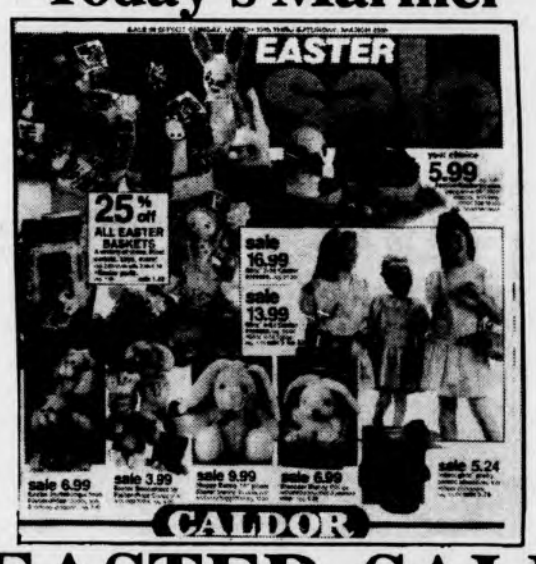
A neat day to fly kites

This March 20, the fifth graders celebrated spring in the most fun way. First they went to lunch and were confronted with a full table of beautiful, bright-colored, tasty foods that the classroom mothers had prepared. Next, they went outside to fly their kites in the "Best Flyer" contest. Some went for and some didn't, but everyone had a great time. There also was a "Decorative Kite" contest in which the competitors made their own kites or made major changes in a store-bought one. In this category creativeness and attractiveness were considered.

Winners: Best Flyer — Greg Schultz 287'

Honorable Mention — Andy Collins 236', Hillary Strong 98', Caitlin Connolly 98'



Most Artistic — Katie Ross and Alli Ritts

Honorable Mention — Cameron Hynes, Rory Winters, Tafana Fiore, Grace Deveny, Steffie Lubitz, Keeley Dwyer, Breezy Crossman.

The fifth grade teachers and students give a special thanks to the following parents for making the "First Day of Spring" celebration such a success: Mrs. Noke, Mrs. Sawchuck, Mrs. Dwyer, Mrs. Gentile, Mrs. Schultz, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Lubitz, and Mrs. Hamilton.
